SMITH GIVES POSITION ON CONTROL OF WATER POWER

Benefits Belong to People and Must Be Guarded, Democratic Nominee Declares in Denver.

ACCORDED GREATEST OVATION OF TOUR

Nominee Says His Policy Applies to Boulder Dam —Urges U. S. Ownership of Muscle Shoals.

The text of Gov. Smith's address at Denver, Colo., on water-power will be found on Page 4.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

AUDITORIUM, Denver, Colo., Sept. 22.—Before an audience that gave him the greatest ovation of his Western trip, Gov. Smith tonight in the Denver Auditorium outlined his "prescription" for dealing with Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals and with the water-power problem in general. He ridiculed the Republican plank on this subject as meaningless, and taxed Herbert Hoover with having offered no waterpower plan in his address of acceptance.

Smith again came out for Government ownership and control of waterpower sites. He said that the Boulder Dam project should be speedily carried through by "fair co-operation" among the states immediately concerned and between the States and the Federal Government. In whatever way the power generated at the dam might be distributed, he said, that "public authority must retain the contractual right to control the rates to be charged the ultimate consumer."

As to Muscle Shoals, he promised that if elected President he would seek to develop the project under Government ownership and control, to the end that the farmers might benefit from cheap fertilizer production and that surplus power might be generated for distribution at rates controlled by the Government.

Ammonia "Bombs" in Galleries.

Ammonia fumes were smelled in the Auditorium during the hour between the assembling of the audience and the Governor's speech. A search by the police developed that ammonia "bombs," or tubes had been planted under seats in the galleries. One of them had been crushed and the fumes released. The police found about a dozen of the "bombs" and got rid of them. The pollution of the air had died away before the meeting began.

Smith was heard with close attention and apparent sympathy for his public ownership views. There was frequent applause, but the technical nature of his subject did not invite to such noisy gusts of approval as marked his attacks on bigotry at Oklahoma City. The greatest applause was for his friendly reference to the resolution of Senator Walsh for an investigation of the power industry.

Smith devoted a good share of his attention to his opponent for the Presidency. He said there was nothing, either in the Republican platform or in the candidate's remarks, about public ownership of waterpower sites.

"There is something standing in the w... of a clear-cut statement," he charged. "I will leave it to your imagination, but let me say this, putting it in as mild a way as I can, the administration at Washington must, to some slight degree, have been in sympathy with the propaganda that was put out through this country by the joint committee of the National Electric Light Association."

Cites Roy West's Appointment.

The attitude of the administration toward the power problem, he said, was indicated by the appointment of Roy O. West, long connected with the utility interests as Secretary of the Interior.

He said that Hoover, in a speech before the National Electric Light Association in 1925, had "pinned a medal" on the men responsible for the utility propaganda, and cited the fact that former Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, who was a representative of Hoover at the Kansas City convention, was counsel for the public utility lobby at Washington.

JAPANESE YOUTH ADMITS MURDER OF KIDNAPED BOY

National Guardsmen Called Out to Protect Prisoner From Crowd Gathered at Honolulu Jail.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Sept. 22.—A 19-year-old Japanese boy, Yutaka Fukunaga, sought as the slayer of Gill Jamieson, 10-year-old son of Frederick W. Jamieson, Honolulu banker, who was kidnapped from school, was arrested tonight and confessed, police said.

"I have been a bad boy. I want to tell it to my mother," the boy said when first arrested. Later he was quoted as saying "what does it matter" Let the crowd get me, I don't care.'"

Sheriff Patrick Gleason has called on Adjutant General Smoot to assign national guardsmen to duty around the jail and police station. Gleason was fearful of mob action when a large crowd gathered around the jail. The prisoner remained calm while being led through the streets.

Detectives said Fukunaga was traced through the passing o. several $5 bills which had been paid by the banker Tuesday night in an effort to save his son.

The Aloha Tower siren blew steadily for five minutes announcing the capture of the slayer. National guardsmen arrived at the city jail and a cordon of police was thrown around the structure. The crowds around the police station filled the streets, blocking traffic in all directions.

Before Fukunaga made his confession detectives announced he was a drug adict. A drug outfit was found near the body of the Jamieson boy.

A stained pair of trousers was found in Fukunaga's room. Police said some of the ransom money also was found.

The confessed kidnaper was arrested on Honolulu's main street. The arrest ended a five-day manhunt in which thousands joined.

The Jamieson boy was kidnaped Tuesday afternoon. Ten thousand dollars in ransom was demanded of the child's father by the abductor who procured $4000 Tuesday night. Gill was found dead Thursday. He had been strangled.

HOLIDAY FOR VOTERS URGED

Half a Day Off Asked of Employers in Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22. — Because of the heavy registration of voters in Philadelphia, the Republican City Committee has asked Mayor Mackey to request all employers to grant a half holiday to their workers Nov. 6, so as to avoid congestion at the polls and enable all voters to cast their ballots.

If employers cannot grant this request, it will be suggested that half of their employes be permitted to report for duty an hour later in the morning and the other half to go off duty one hour earlier in the afternoon.

200 BODIES FOUND NEAR GALE-SWEPT TOWN IN FLORIDA

Relief Party Unable to Reach Pelican Bay, Isolated Since Storm—Fears for Population of 400.

ESTIMATE OF LOSSES RAISED TO $50,000,000

Governor Visits Stricken District, Then Cuts Red Tape by Ordering Outlay From Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 22.—Pelican Bay, a village of approximately 400 inhabitants, was wiped out by the hurricane of last Sunday and relief workers returning tonight expressed the opinion that few, if any, of its inhabitants survived.

A rescue expedition today penetrated to a point opposite the little settlement and found 200 bodies just across the water from the destroyed village itself.

In the Pelican Bay district several hundred sugar cane laborers were caught by the hurricane. The village remained the one isolated spot in the devastated area. For six days the citizens of the community, if any are left, have been without relief. Coast guardsmen are engaged in clearing the roads to the place.

Village Overlooked Since Storm.

The village, nestled on one side of a bay leading into the lake, had been overlooked as rescuers plunged into other stricken areas, until yesterday, when Gov. John W. Martin, asked what conditions were there.

Today the story was unfolded, when a relief expedition reached the side of the bay opposite the settlement and beneath piles of debris found the bodies of 200 of the village's inhaibtants. With the Pelican Bay tragedy disclosed, the death list tonight was said to stand officially at 1000 with 80 per cent of the victims Negroes.

Officials estimated the final count of the dead from the storm would reach 1500. Bodies of 724 victims have been buried here, 71 of them white persons.

Measures for relief of the area ravaged by the tropical hurricane gained momentum today as officials' estimates fixed the death toll at between 1000 and 1500, with more than 15,000 homeless, and disease and hunger threatening refugees in parts of the Lake Okeehobee region.

Rapidly co-ordinating its program, the American Red Cross allocated phases of the work to branch headquarters in Jacksonville, Tampa and Fort Myers. The latter two cities will handle parts of the lake region inaccessible to headquarters here, while Jacksonville will supervise the refugee situation.

Rising waters and lack of adequate transportation facilities handicapped the emergency relief work and the recovery of bodies within the stricken lake shore district. Urgent appeals for boats came out of the area which returning officials have described as desolate, with thousands of refugees in immediate need of food and shelter.

Floods Continue to Rise.

Gov. Martin said the entire Everglades was flooded and Fred C. Stuck, secretary of the Izaak Walton League of Florida, appealed to members of the League to furnish outboard motors, saying that due to inadequate drainage the flood waters continued to rise from recent rains. Men were sought to man boats for hauling supplies, refugees and bodies.

Clipping official red tape, after a personal inspection of part of the back country, Gov. Martin ordered food and other supplies purchased with funds from the State treasury. At the same time the Governor, who shed tears at the tragedy he witnessed in the lake country, issued another call for people of Florida to contribute "quickly and generously" to the relief. The State Highway Departent was ordered to clear the debris-clogged roads into the district to facilitate movement of trucks and other vehicles.

Determined to delve deeper into the actual needs of the region, the Governor went back into the flooded country today, with Belle Glade and neighboring communities on the itinerary of his official party.

Federal Aid Is Sought.

Federal aid to cope with the situation was sought by United States Senator Park Trammell, who telegraphed to President Coolidge asking that a represen-

300-YEAR OLD TRADITION KEPT BY SUBTERFUGE

Cutler's Club of Sheffield to Hold Historic Feast With No Women Present.

By the Associated Press.

SHEFFIELD, England, Sept. 22.—The Cutlers' Guild of Sheffield, which for 300 years has held a historic feast with never a woman present, is clinging grimly to this tradition, although this year it had to resort to subterfuge.

The decision to confine the feast to men, particularly on this 300th anniversary, caused some repercussion.

Miss Violet Markham, who is Mayor of the Neighborhood Borough of Chesterfield, voiced her views on the equality of women in declining a compromise invitation extended by the guild.

The Mayor of Chesterfield has always been asked to the feast and the compromise, which Miss Markham courteously but definitely declined, consisted of an invitation to the Mayor of Chesterfield to meet the "Mistress Cutlers" at dinner with the other women.

"Many established customs have undergone changes in the last 300 years," Miss Markham wrote in declining the invitation. "Women are now full citizens of the realm and a woman at present holds the office of Lord Mayor of Liverpool. I find it hard to believe that a woman Lord Mayor of Sheffield could under any circumstances be be excluded from the feast by reason of her sex."

DRY LEAGUE OPENS NATIONAL FIGHT IN AID OF HOOVER

Today, Temperance Sunday, Crusade Is Planned in Thousands of Pulpits —Leaflets Prepared.

SMITH ASSAILED AS 'SALOON'S DEFENDER'

'Omni-Partisan and Anti-Alcoholic' Organization Uses Its Press for Defeat of Democrat.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The full force of the Anti-Saloon League will be loosed tomorrow in pulpit, press, leaflet and house-to-house work over the entire nation to work for the election of Herbert Hoover and to defeat that "defender of the saloon" Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

The League describing itself as "omni-partisan and anti-alcoholic" and using the occasion of National Temperance Sunday to push off its crusade from thousands of church pulpits is starting its fight in a big way.

Copies of a four-page leaflet on "the next President and Prohibition" will be distributed in about 30000 churches tomorrow to be accompanied by exhortation for the Hoover candidacy by preachers "in churches that co-operate with the Anti-Saloon League in all parts of the United States," estimated by the League to reach a total of 20,000 churches.

For Anglo-Saxon Protestant Rule.

Sectionally, the issue is presented in stronger terms. The current number of Ohio edition of the American Issue, official League organ, carries an editorial urging voters to oppose Gov. Smith if they "believe in Anglo-Saxon Protestant domination." The Ohio edition, one of 36 editions, is published in Westerville, O., the same place as the National American Issue. Under the editorial dictatorship of F. L. Duséman, it was explained at League headquarters here today, the Ohio edition maintains a separate editorial policy from the National and other state editions, although most state editions carry the same "boiler-plate" editorial sent out by the National Organ.

In an official statement of 500 words, the League says the election on Nov. 6 will be the most important choice between candidates in the history of the prohibition movement. Another statement by General Superintendent P. Scott McBride asserts that "for the first time prohibition has been made the issue in a presidential campaign."

Political Declaration of Faith.

The league selects two statements from Herbert Hoover's acceptance speech—"I do not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment," and "I stand for the efficient enforcement of the laws enacted thereunder," upon which to base its political declaration of faith that Hoover's election "would assure the full support of prohibition by the Federal Government, aid law enforcement and encourage law observance everywhere."

"Alfred E. Smith," the statement says, has always been the defender of the saloon, a supporter of the liquor traffic and an enemy of prohibition. * * * the election of Alfred E. Smith would weaken law enforcement throughout the nation. It would strengthen every movement for the nullification and eventual repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. It would handicap the movement against the liquor traffic all over the world."

These statements and the four-page leaflet, briefly describing the records of the two presidential candidates and quoting from their prohibition declarations, have been in the hands of pastors and other workers for a week as a suggested outline for pulpit declarations against Gov. Smith and for Hoover.

Urges Study of Liquor Issue.

Supt. McBride, now in the Middle West, points out in his statement that for 35 years the league "has informed voters on how to most effectively use their ballots against the liquor traffic." He urges voters to make "an intelligent study of the wet and dry issue" and makes it clear that the league "officially represents" thousands of churches.

It was explained at league headquarters today that the league thus officially represents thousands of churches in all temperance matters," taking the place of separate temperance organization of some denominations, receiving funds and making disbursements as official agent of many groups, a sort of advertising agency with power of attorney."

The league describes itself as "the inter-denominational and

Order for Railroad Magnate to Withdraw from M.-K.-T. Board Discloses Profitable Deal in Stock.

NO MARGIN REQUIRED BY BROKER, HE SAYS

Holding 92,000 Shares a Little More Than a Month While K. C. Southern Was Buying Paid Well.

RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—In announcing the decision that Leonor F. Loree, railroad magnate, should withdraw as director of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday disclosed how easily a high ranking railroad official with powerful connections can make a fortune without investing a cent of cash.

Loree is president of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad and chairman of a special board of the Kansas City Southern Railroad, which made a study of possible Southwestern railroad consolidations. In April, 1925, the Commerce Commission in a special order permitted him to serve as director of the Katy. It was this special order that the commission vacated yesterday after prolonged hearings by the entire commission.

Made $144,000 on Stock.

The decision yesterday discloses that before the commission issued the special order, Loree had profited to the extent of $144,708 by speculation in Katy stock, in a deal with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., brokers, at the same time the Kansas City Southern, of which Loree was chairman of the board, was acquiring Katy stock with a view to consolidation. Loree held his stock a little more than a month.

The commission's order stated "Loree testified that these purchases were made in the usual way, without a specific order from him and without the deposit of any margin, that he never puts up any margin or anything he buys; and that the brokers sometimes carry such purchases for him, and that sometimes he pays for the stock and takes it up, and that in such transactions he invests his credit, which the brokers consider the same as cash. In this instance the stock was carried by the brokers until sold."

The Commission gave the history of the purchases in the following words:

"In October, 1924, Otto Kahn of of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., advised Loree that that firm and some of his associates were buying Missouri-Kansas-Texas stock and asked him if he desired to take an interest with them. Loree acquiesced and Nov. 6, 1924, there were purchased for him 11,950 shares of common stock at $19.68 a share, costing $235,176.

Cost of Stock $285,872.

"Nov. 7, 1924, there were purchased for him 2050 shares of common stock at $21.25 a share, costing $43,562.50, making the total cost, including brokerage commissions and interest, $285,872.14."

Three days after the last purchase, according to the decision, Kahn told Loree that the brokerage firm of Swartwent & Appenzellar wanted to sell its holding of Katy stock to the Kansas City Southern. Loree presented the offer to the special board of which he was the chairman, which decided to acquire the offered stock. These purchases amounted to 92,600 shares, which Kuhn, Loeb & Co., received 50 cents a share brokerage fees.

After the special board voted to acquire the Katy stock, Loreee notified Kuhn, Loeb & Co., that he did not want any more Katy stock purchased for himself and instructed them to sell his holdings as soon as the Kansas City Southern purchases were completed.

Stock Rises More Than $5.

The Kansas City Southern continued to acquire Katy stock from other sources until it held 162,000 shares of Katy common. The price had risen from the $19.68 a share Loree had paid for his first block

CALLES' SUCCESSOR

EMILIO PORTES GIL.

THE Minister of Interior will be proclaimed Provisional President of Mexico at a joint session of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies next Tuesday.

PORTES GIL CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

Minister of Interior to Succeed Calles When He Retires Dec. 1.

By ARTHUR CONSTANTINE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—Emilio Portes Gil, Minister of the Interior, will be provisional President of Mexico 14 months, beginning Dec. 1, succeeding President Calles. He will be proclaimed at the joint session of both houses of Congress Tuesday.

Elections for the six-year presidential term will be in November, 1929, and the new President will take office the following February.

When the Senate, with 42 of 58 members present, Friday night passed a resolution favoring the candidacy of Portes Gil, they settled the competition for the post, which got under way immediately after the assassination of President-elect Obregon.

Two weeks ago the designation of Portes Gil was indicated with reasonable certainty when a reorganization of the Chamber of Deputies took place. Before that Gov. Manuel Perez Trevino of the State of Coahuila had been the outstanding candidate.

Portes Gil will, by his own assurance, continue the policies of Calles. He will be one of the youngest occupants of the presidential chair, being only 37 years old. He was born at Ciudad Victoria, Tamaulipas, and educated in his native State and the law school of the University of Mexico. During the Carranza regime he was Judge Advocate-General in the war ministry over which Gen. Obregon presided.

When Calles became Governor of Sonora he appointed Portes Gil to the State Supreme Court. He also has served four terms in Congress, being first elected in 1917, and was elected Governor of Tamaulipas in 1925. He was made Minister of the Interior a year ago.

As Governor of Tamaulipas he closed up gambling dens which had made the State notorious, established virtually prohibition in the rural sections and greatly reduced the number of cantinas in the cities. He also organized co-operative societies among city and country workers and put through a law giving the press more liberty and insuring newspaper men trial by jury in libel cases.

He is an ardent baseball fan and encouraged sports in his State. He neither drinks nor smokes, is married and has one child.

GULF BIRDS BLOWN TO TEXAS

Beautiful Crimson and White Flamingoes Observed in Brownsville.

By the Associated Press.

BROWNSVILLE Tex., Sept. 22.—Swept far from their usual feeding grounds by the tropical hurricane that struck Florida early this week, hundreds of flamingoes were observed in this vicinity today. The beautiful birds, apparently made tame by hunger, were the first many persons had seen on the gulf coast. Full grown crimson and white specimens were feeding within the city limits of Brownsville and in the resacas on the outskirts.

VICTIMS ON WAY TO TRI-CITY PARK REVIVAL MEETING

Three Women, Man and Girl Lose Lives When Engine, Backing Up on Spur, Strikes Vehicle.

CONVEYANCE UPSETS, ROLLS DOWN BANK

Locomotive Going at Slow Rate, Engineer Asserts, and He Expected Crowded Machine to Stop.

Two elderly women, a young mother, a man and a girl, were killed when a freight locomotive, at a Granite City grade crossing, crashed into an open truck carrying some 30 persons to a revival meeting in Tri-City Park, at 7:20 o'clock last evening. Most of the other occupants of the truck were injured.

The dead, all of Granite City, are:

Mrs. Mary E. Qualls, 71 years old, 2407 Grand avenue.

Mrs. Nellie Meredith, 64, 2919 Washington avenue.

Alfred W. Taylor, 36, Twenty-third street and Sheridan avenue.

Mrs. Harry Dortch, 25, 2229 Grand.

Miss Viola Zimmer, 16, 2417 State street.

The truck, loaded so closely that some of the occupants were standing, while others sat on narrow benches, left Full Gospel Tabernacle, Twenty-fourth street and Grand avenue, a few minutes before. It had been carrying religious workers and other interested persons nightly to the revival, which had been in progress three weeks.

Hit by Engine Backing Up.

The truck was running out the old Edwardsville road, and was near its destination when it reched the crossing at Eighteenth street. There a locomotive was approaching, tender first, pulling a string of 55 freight cars over a spur track of the Nickel Plate road.

Neither the locomotive nor the truck was running at high speed, but neither stopped, and a corner of the tender impaled the front of the truck. The truck, tipping sidewise and spilling the most exposed of its passengers, was pushed along the right of way for more than 200 feet, then overturned and rolled down a 10-foot embankment.

Taylor and Mrs. Dortch were the first thrown out of the truck and were cast under the wheels of the locomotive. They were killed outright. The older women and the girl were crushed by the truck and died after being removed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Preacher Helps Rescue Work.

The Rev. C. M. O'Guin, revival preacher, who had been following the truck in his automobile, and the locomotive engineer, Frank Werner of Granite City, were the first uninjured persons to reach the scene. With others of the train crew, they worked to extricate the injured, and called ambulances.

Engineer Werner said he was running not more than 10 miles an hour, and that he saw the truck approaching the crossing, but supposed it would stop, as it was running at moderate speed. He said he rang his bell and blew his whistle.

Fred Mathews of 2118 Illinois avenue, driver of the truck, said he heard no whistle or bell, and that he first saw the locomotive when it was directly upon the truck. As the track is a spur, the crossing was unguarded.

Driver Leaps From Truck.

"The truck turned around and plunged along the right-of-way, with everybody screaming," Mathews said. "I jumped out. Some of the others were dropping out. The truck was half tipped over. I lost sight of it before it overturned entirely."

Mathews was one of the injured taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Others were: Harry Dortch and his 6-month-old daughter, husband and child of one of the women

HOOVER CONFERS WITH COOLIDGE ON HIS CAMPAIGN

Nominee at White House Hour and Half—President Said to Have Been Urged to Speak in East.

'CAMPAIGN NOT ONE OF OPPOSITION'

G. O. P. Standard Bearer Tells Maryland Delegation the Fight Is One in Favor of Issues in Party.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Herbert Hoover declared unequivocally today that his campaign is not one of opposition, but one in favor of the issues and candidates in the Republican party.

His statement was contained in an address to a delegation from Maryland, the first public pronouncement he had made since his Democratic opponent, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, opened fire on the Republican party in his address at Oklahoma City Thursday night.

"We are now in a great campaign," Hoover said. "Our campaign is based upon our issues. It is not a campaign of opposition. It is a campaign in favor of the issues and candidates in the Republican party."

Before the meeting with the Maryland delegation, consisting of 40 county and ward chairmen of the Hoover-Goldsborough League of Maryland, the Republican presidential candidate spent more than an hour and a half at the White House discussing the general political situation with President Coolidge, who returned today from a visit to his native State of Vermont and New England.

Want Speeches by Coolidge.

Beyond the statement that the general situation had been gone over at the White House, there was no announcement concerning the conference. But it is known that a number of the President's friends have been urging him to make a speech or two in New England, preferably in his adopted State of Massachusetts.

Upon emerging from the White House, Hoover declined to discuss this matter, but he did say that he was satisfied with the outlook over the country. Asked specifically about Masachusetts, the nominee declared the leaders there were going forward enthusiastically, but that he would make no forecast as to the result.

During the day at his headquarters the nominee received assurances of support from one of his opponents at the Kansas City convention, Senator Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, who is to stump his own State and speak in New York, and also was given an encouraging report about Oklahoma by Senator Pine.

Only Way for Public Expression.

In addressing the group from Maryland, mainly consisting of young men, who were accompanied by Philip Lee Goldsborough, Republican candidate for Senator, Hoover said that fundamentally the Government could be conducted only with a definite party organization. He added that this was the only way through which the people could express their will upon issues and men.

"It goes to the very roots of organization of our form of government and of democracy itself," he said, "for without organization the will of the majority upon great public issues could not find expression. So those who take part in party organization are engaged in a public service, whether they belong to our party or to the opposition.

"I still call myself a young man, and I am anxious that the young Republicans become an active part of the Republican party organization. The new generation must begin now to take over the responsibility of the party and to carry it on. I am especially anxious to see the young men over the whole country enter vigorously into its work and grow on up with it as we go forward. We intend to go forward, as the Republican party has also been a constructive, progressive party."

Report on Massachusetts.

Besides his discussion with the President about New England, Hoover received a long report from Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who has just returned from Boston, where he addressed the Massachusetts Republican State convention yesterday.

"Every indication points to increasing likelihood of victory for the Republican ticket there," Work said. "The confidence of the State leaders is extremely encouraging. The fine ticket they have nominated in the primary has unified support, and Massachusetts leader are out not only to carry the State for the national ticket, but also to defeat Senator David I. Walsh, the strongest Democrat in the State."

Improvement In New York.

Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York, another visitor at the Hoover headquarters, reported that there had been a marked improvement in the New York situation since last August. He said that Edmund MacHold, the Republican State chairman, had "worked wonders in less than a month and infused a spirit of confidence and team work among the Republican leaders that should result in carrying the State for the Republican ticket by over 100,000."

Other members of the organization in the State are working harmoniously, Fish declared. He also expressed the belief that Attorney-General Albert Ottinger of New York City would be nominated for Governor and that the candidate for United States Senator would come from up-State.

C. F. Bloker of Caruthersville, Mo., Republican chairman of the Fourteenth Congressional District, told Chairman Work that German descendants of Missouri would vote for Hoover because of his war relief work. He denied that they would support Smith because of prohibition.

Indian Arrowheads Found In Fossil Buffalo Bones

Existence of Hitherto Unknown Tribe 15,000 Years Ago Indicated by Relics, Scientist Says.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A race of Indians differing in culture from any now known lived on the American continent between 15,000 and 20,000 years ago, the International Congress of Americanists was told at its closing session today by Barnum Brown, curator of fossil reptiles at the American Museum of National History.

In fossilized buffalo bones discovered near Folsom, N. M., several arrowheads unlike any so far known in Indian lore were found, Brown said. The bones were the remains of a food kill and were preserved by debris as left by the Indians.

The arrowheads are fluted and of a workmanship which the speaker said equalled if it did not surpass anything heretofore discovered in America.

The fossils were excavated by the American Museum and the Denver, Col., Museum. Experts from the latter institution have been working on the deposit for two years. Sixteen arrows of the lost people were discovered in the quarrying.

Brown declared the find indicated an idea in archery different from that of any modern Indian, but approached by the Hopewell people, although with a refinement and technique superior to the latter's.

200 BODIES FOUND NEAR GALE-SWEPT TOWN IN FLORIDA

tative be sent to Florida with the view of obtaining all possible governmental assistance.

While the medical situation was well in hand among the refugees here, and was reported by medical officers to be satisfactory in Belle Glade and other wrecked towns on the southern shore of Lake Okeechobee, supplies, nurses and a physician have been rushed from Fort Myers to Clewiston, where relief workers have reported from 20 to 40 cases of influenza among refugees brought in from the south.

Great need for emergency relief of residents and farm lands within the vast expanse of the everglades country was pictured before Gov. Martin today by civic organizations and citizens who presented various plans for immediate drainage of the marshy countryside and for preventing future overflows. The executive said he had recommended conferences with expert drainage engineers, and offered to support any feasible plan.

Meanwhile steps toward rehabilitation of the coastal sections, devastated by the hurricane, were accelerated by surveys of property losses planned as the first efforts in the restoration program. Howard L. Selby, chairman of the Palm Beach County Red Cross Committee, raised his estimate of property damage in the county from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000. A. L. Schafer, State Director of Disaster Relief for the National Red Cross announced his belief that the death list would total 1000. Other relief and military officials estimated dead at upwards of 1500.

Schafer said 8782 persons were fed yesterday by the Red Cross and that 4469 persons were in concentration centers with 130 injured refugees in hospitals.

Trucks loaded with supplies were rushed toward the stricken sectors all hauling their burdens to the water line, where the transfer was being made to boats. Every city in the State conducted vigorous drives for more relief funds.

Babies Born in Flood Area Need Clothes, Dispatch Says.

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 22.—A dispatch from one of the flooded Okeechobee district of Florida to towns of the local Red Cross chapter today said: "Many babies born in flood districts since the storm. Unless suitable raiment is gathered at once for these new citizens rushed into the world by the calamity, they may not live."

Report to Red Cross Shows $879,357 Raised for Relief.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The American Red Cross announced today that preliminary and incomplete reports from local chapters chiefly in the larger cities, showed a total of $879,357 so far raised for hurricane relief.

Rochester, N. Y., was the first large city to complete its quota for the $5,000,000 relief fund for the West Indies and Florida, a telegram reporting today that $30,805 had been contributed in the city. Several smaller towns, including some in Florida, previously have reported that they fulfilled their quotas.

Democrats to Trail Borah.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The national Democratic headquarters in Washington announced today that several Democratic Senators planned to trail Senator Borah of Idaho in his political campaign tour and "reveal" what they claim to be inconsistencies in the Idahoan's support of Herbert Hoover. Extracts from speeches by Borah "in which he bitterly execrated Mr. Hoover in the several capacities the latter occupied during and after the war" have been furnished the Democratic Senators, the committee said.

DRY LEAGUE OPENS NATIONAL FIGHT IN AID OF HOOVER

omni-partisan agency of the churches and temperance forces," which "has urged voters to support drys and oppose wets, regardless of the party ticket on which their names might appear."

"The voters of both parties who favor prohibition," McBride says "are depending on the Anti-Saloon League for information on this issue. We are confident that the careful and honest consideration of the liquor problem in the United States can only result in votes for Hoover by all who desire the suppression of alcoholism."

Suggests Pulpit Exhortation.

The league annonucement outlines its method and suggests its pulpit exhortation as follow: "By this nonpartisan method of anti-alcohol activity, the prohibition movement was advanced step by step, until finally dry Democrats and dry Republicans joined forces in Congress and Legislatures to bring about the submission and ratification of the eighteenth amendment. Republicans and Democrats joined in the passage of the Volstead act and state enforcement laws.

"In the coming election the dry voters will again be given the opportunity to choose public officials who are for prohibition from among the candidates of both the Democratic and Republican parties. The most important official will be the next President of the United States.

"Through his powers of appointment, the President controls the selection of the Secretray of the Treasury, the Prohibition Commissioner, the Attorney-General, Prosecuting Attorneys, United States Marshals and many other officials directly concerned with prohibition enforcement. The President appoints Federal District Judges and fills any vacancies in the Supreme Court of the United States. He appoints Ambassadors and other official representatives of the United States in other countries.

"In view of the foregoing facts, every citizen who desires to support the purpose of the eighteenth amendment and the laws for its enforcement will register, vote and work for the election of Herbert Hoover to the office of President of the United States."

Anti-Saloon League and G. O. P. Deny Order to Shields.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The Republican National Committee and the National headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League today disclamed knowledge of the letter circulated by the Rev. Parker Shields, superintendent of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, urging ministers to write to newspapers advocating the election of Hoover and the defeat of Smith.

After a search of the correspondence files, the Washington office of the League issued a specific denial that it had instructed the Missouri superintendent to send out the letter and a denial that the National headquarters of the League had informed Shields that the Republican National Committee had asked the League to ascertain sentiment in doubtful states.

"On Sept. 8 the League sent to all State Superintendents a letter calling attention to the fact that Sept. 23 was National Temperance Sunday," it was stated at the League headquarters here. "This letter contained the suggestion that all co-operating pastors, meaning those who had supported the League, might preach on 'Prohibition and the Next President.'

"We inclosed with the letter a leaflet quoting Hoover's utterances on prohibition and giving Smith's record in New York.

"The leaflet also gave a description of the President's appointive power.

"This letter did not mention the Republican National Committee and did not instruct the State Superintendents to urge pastors to write to newspapers regarding their choice for the presidency. We have not been asked by the Republican National Committee to ascertain sentiment in the doubtful states."

Chairman Work of the Republican National Committee, in denying that the Committee had asked the League to ascertain sentiment, said: "It is against the policy of the Committee to work in such a way."

Shields Says Representative of State G. O. P. Suggested Letter.

Superintendent Shields of the Missouri League, when shown the Washington dispatch containing denials, made a further statement regarding the letter.

When asked about it Friday, he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that sending of the letter had been on advices from the National headquarters of the League that the Republican National Committee had requested it to sound out sentiment in Missouri.

Yesterday, after the Washington denials, he said:

"The article in the Post-Dispatch yesterday was accurate, but I should have been more specific in my statements. The facts are these:

"The National headquarters of the League has from time to time requested the Superintendents to report political sentiment in their states, but it has not said the National Committee desired it to obtain the information.

"Recently a representative of the Republican State Committee, but not a member of the Committee, suggested to me this specific step of sending out the letter requesting ministers to write to newspapers. You may say that I had assistance in preparing the letter, or rather that I looked the letter over and made some changes in it before it was sent out."

Shields refused to give the name of the person he referred to as a representative of the Republican State Committee.

CURTIS HOBNOBS WITH FORMER INDIAN FOES

Dodged Their Arrows When a Boy, Now Glad to Shake Hands, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

BILLINGS, Mont., Sept. 22.—Cheered by Indians whose tribes once chased him with bow and arrow, Senator Charles Curtis, the Republican vice presidential nominee, led the Republican campaign in Montana today in speeches at Hardin and here.

For the first time since taking the stump at Hardin, the nominee referred to declarations that Herbert Hoover was responsible for fixing the price of wheat during the war, and at Billings he read a message of President Wilson stating that Mr. Hoover, as Food Administrator during the war, "at his express wish, had taken no part in the deliebrations of the committee on whose recommendation I determine the Government's fair price, nor has he in any way intimated an opinion regarding that price."

But the high point of a busy day for Senator Curtis was his visit this morning with the Crows, Blackfeet and Cheyenne Indians.

At solemn ceremonies the venerable Chief Plenty Coos of the Crow nation, waved his scalp stick over the head of "my dear boy" and formally adopted Charles Curtis of the Kaws into his tribe. The ceremony took place at the Hardin fair grounds, and Plenty Coos, who represented the Indians of America at the burial of the unknown soldier, delivered a message to his braves through an interpreter. He is 80 years old and his voice was only a whisper, but he waved his arms vigorously as he told the Indians, "anything we can do for my boy from the Kaw country we must do."

He placed the feathered headdress on Curtis, who responded with a speech to his new Indian brothers, thanking them and urging them to regard seriously the responsibilities of citizenship recently given them. And he recalled how, as a boy of eight, he was attacked while with his Kaw kinsmen, by the Cheyennes.

"You scared the life out of us then," Curtis told the Cheyennes today. "I am glad to shake hands with you instead of dodging your arrows."

"The old days are gone forever," said Chief Plenty Coos. (His name means plenty scalps). "The buffalo are gone. We are met with new propositions and new times. We have with us today one whom we can safely follow as our standard bearer. Anything we can do for you, my boy, we are going to do it.

"We are now a one-people. We are going to be one people forever. We live under the same flag. I realize this is probably my last message to the white people. My days are numbered."

The Senator, whose mother was a granddaughter of White Plume, chief of the Kaws, grasped the hand of the venerable chief and his voice was husky as he spoke words of counsel to the Indians. A little later Chief Plenty Coos almost fell to the ground, and he was put into a car and returned to the Crow Agency near the spot where the Cheyennes and Sioux massacred Gen. Custer and his band of cavalry more than half a century ago.

GOEBEL WINS AIR RACE; RIVAL FLYER MISSING

Emil Burgin, Who Left Los Angeles for Cincinnati Before Victor, Unreported.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 22.—Art Goebel accomplished his specialty again today. He won another air race.

Goebel, whose home is in Los Angeles, further established himself as a premier nonstop flyer when he won the Los Angeles-Cincinnati air race. By finishing ahead of his field, Goebel won a $3000 cash prize, a leg on a $5000 gold trophy and a $1000 golden replica of the trophy.

Goebel had only one competitor in his flight, Emil Burgin of Mineola, N. Y., whose whereabouts was unknown tonight. Burgin took off from Mines Field, Los Angeles, an hour earlier than Goebel yesterday, but the New York flyer did not have as speedy a ship as the California airman. Goebel's plane was capable of making 180 miles an hour, while Burgin's had a maximum of 120.

Soon after landing his Lockheed-Vega monoplane, Yankee Doodle at Lunken Airport here, Goebel, victor of the Dole flight from San Francisco to Honolulu and holder of the nonstop flight record from California to New York, was presented the Golden Trophy he had won.

Harry Tucker of Los Angeles, backer of Goebel's flight and owner of the Yankee Doodle, accompanied the pilot. Both said they experienced good weather, but had not sighted Burgin anywhere along the route.

The Yankee Doodle took off from Mines Field yesterday at 4:07 p. m., Pacific Coast time, and landed at Lunken Airport today at 10:24 a. m., Eastern standard time. The official flying time was announced as 15 hours, 17 minutes.

Burgin preceded Goebel in the air with his Ballanca monoplane at 2:56 p. m., Pacific Coast time. No reports had been received by Lunken Airport officers giving Burgin's position since he left Mines Field.

Hopkins of Detroit First Class A Flyer to Reach Pine Bluff.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., Sept. 22.—Eight planes which took off from Fort Worth, Tex., early today in the Los Angeles to Cincinnati air derby landed at Toney Field this afternoon for an overnight stop before taking off on the last leg of their transcontinental race early tomorrow.

Bringing his Junior Stinson plane onto the field at 1:59 p. m., George Hopkins of Detroit was the first to land. He was followed closely by Robert A. Dake of Pittsburg in an American Moth, said to be leading in elapsed time, who brought his plane down at 2:06.

A. Gilmore, Vice Governor of the Philippines, for one year. He is a faculty member at the university.

SMITH GETS 'HALF A CARLOAD' OF RESPONSES TO SPEECH BY RADIO

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.

At a conference with newspaper men in his hotel suite, Gov. Smith was asked if he thought the radio was an aid or a hindrance to a campaign speaker. He replied:

"I believe the radio is a great help. If a man has a real message to deliver he can get it on the radio and the responses a man gets clearly indicate it is a good thing."

"What responses did you get from your Oklahoma City speech?"

BRUCE SAYS HOOVER DRANK WITH DARROW; DENIAL MADE

Maryland Senator in Speech Accuses Candidate and Curtis of Hypocrisy.

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 22—United States Senator William Cabell Bruce, (Dem.) of Maryland, in an address at a Democratic rally here tonight, charged Herbert Hoover and Senator Charles Curtis with hypocrisy in their stands on the liquor question, and declared that he had authoritive information that Hoover had taken numerous drinks with Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer.

"Senator Curtis, the Republican vice-presidential nominee was seen at Pimlico race track with a bottle of liquor in his pocket," Bruce said.

Bruce declared that Darrow had told him that "I am surprised to see Herbert Hoover come out for prohibition for I have had several drinks with him myself."

The Senator told the audience that the references to Hoover and Curtis were made "In order to give examples of the hypocrisy that prohibition has brought to the nation. He devoted his short speech to his denunciation of Hoover and Curtis.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 23.—The Baltimore Sunday Sun today quotes George Ackerson, secretary to Herbert Hoover, as denying a statement of U. S. Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, that "Herbert Hoover had taken numerous drinks with Clarence Darrow."

Ackerson said that, "As a matter of fact, Mr. Hoover has never met Mr. Darrow in his life, and doesn't know him. Mr. Hoover has not taken a single drink of intoxicating liquor since he became a constitutional executive officer of the United States and has never had a drop of liquor served at his home."

CHICAGO, Sept. 22—Clarence Darrow tonight denied the statement of Senator Bruce that "Herbert Hoover had taken numerous drinks with Clarence Darrow."

"That statement is incorrect," said Darrow.

He admitted he said "something to a friend of Mr. Hoover's in Cincinnati but it was not that."

GOV. SMITH TO SPEAK IN SEDALIA, NOT ST. LOUIS

Nominee's Only Missouri Address Will Be in Pettis County Seat.

Sedalia has taken Gov. Al Smith away from St. Louis. The Democratic State Committee announced yesterday that the candidate's only Missouri speech would be made in Sedalia, instead of this city, as heretofore announced.

The date for the Sedalia appearance is not yet known to the committee. The tentative date for the St. Louis speech was Tuesday night, Oct. 16.

However, St. Louis is on the way to Sedalia, and the committee announces that "arrangements are under way to have Gov. Smith visit St. Louis and Kansas City while in the State."

Charles M. Howell, new Democratic State Chairman, announced the decision on the Sedalia meeting.

When the plan for a St. Louis speech was made, some Democrats declared it unwise. They said Gov. Smith, if he spoke in St. Louis, would be almost forced to refer to the prohibition question. If he should fail to talk positively on this issue, it was predicted that he would lose the support of wet Republicans, and if he said too much, dry Democrats in the State would be alienated. At Sedalia, he will be under no such compulsion of talking about the liquor issue, but can choose any topic he wishes.

DRY AGENTS RAID SIX EAST ST. LOUIS SALOONS

CITY'S QUOTA $100,000 FOR HURRICANE RELIEF

Contributions to Red Cross Fund Reaches $16,000 —Clearing House Gives $5000.

Contributions by St. Louisans to the Red Cross fund for relief of the Florida-West Indies hurricane victims yesterday passed the $16,000 mark when the St. Louis Clearing House Association, for its member banks, sent a contribution of $5000.

Other large checks received yesterday were $1000 from the Pet Milk Co., $250 from Horton Watkins, $250 from the St. Louis Frog & Switch Co. and $200 from Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Reese.

Oliver F. Richards, treasurer of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross, announced that the St. Louis quota of the $5,000,000 national fund had been set at $100,000.

Richards issued another appeal for promptness in sending contributions, declaring that each bulletin from the national Red Cross showed the situation to be growing worse with the added terror of disease and pestilence.

"St. Louis took care of her own disaster vitcims royally last year," Richards said. "Now we want to do our share in helping other disaster sections. Our quota is not large and if all those who have contributed to the Red Cross appeal in the past will respond at once we shall quickly raise our share. Send checks at once to the Red Cross, care of the Mercantile Trust Co., Eighth and Locust streets."

WHERE TO PLACE SENATOR REED IS PARTY PROBLEM

His Remarks Against Hay in Senatorial Primary Might Expose Democrats to Embarrassment.

USE IN EASTERN STATES CONSIDERED

But Inactivity Indicates Hitch in Plans — Senator Willing but Apparently Not "Rarin' to Go."

The Democratic National Committee and the party State Committee in Missouri are in a quandary as to what to do with Senator Reed in the present campaign. Though recognizing him as among the first campaign speakers of the country, they are just a little disturbed as to whether he will be willing to campaign according to the dictates of the party bosses.

Because of the situation in Missouri with Charles M. Hay, between whom and Reed there has been a personal enmity for years, leading the ticket, it was not considered advisable to schedule Reed for speeches in the State.

Throughout the primary campaign Senator Reed delivered vitriolic speeches against Hay, declaring if Hay were nominated a speech for him in the general election campaign would be a speech against Smith. Conversely, it could be inferred the Senator meant that a speech for Smith would be a speech against Hay.

What Would He Say of Hay?

When consideration began to be given to the use of Senator Reed in Missouri there were those who raised the question of what would Reed say if somebody should arise in one of his audiences and demand to know whether he should vote for Hay. They were not afraid that Reed would be embarrassed by the inquiry, but that Reed's answer would embarrass the party.

It also is known that Senator Reed does not look with much favor on George R. Ellison, the Democratic nominee for Judge of the Supreme Court. Two years ago when Carl L. Ristine, a close friend of Reed, was a candidate for Judge in a three-cornered primary race, Ellison withdrew from the contest, and, as a result, Judge Gantt, later elected, was nominated. Reed had not forgiven Ellison.

In view of the Missouri situation the national Democratic organization decided that Senator Reed could be used effectively in other states than Missouri, and an itinerary for him, taking up virtually all of the time until Oct. 26, was prepared. It billed Reed for speeches in Kansas, Illinois, Kentucky and Oklahoma, but not in Missouri.

A Hitch in the Plans.

However, there has been a hitch in the plans somewhere, though what it is has not been disclosed. An order has gone out from National Democratic headquarters that the Reed itinerary be held up and that the plans may be changed. At first it was thought the Democratic State Committee had decided it wanted Reed in Missouri, but inquiry at the State headquarters failed to disclose anyone who knew of any activity along that line.

It may be that the national headquarters has decided that Reed would be more effective in states where the agricultural question is not the important issue that it is in the states where he tentatively was billed. Reed opposed the McNary-Haugen bill and is outspoken against the equalization fee provision in it. While Gov. Smith has said he was not committed to the exact mechanics of the bill in his promise of farm relief, he has avoided opposing the equalization fee provision. Reed is on record against it.

Though Reed undoubtedly is willing to speak for Smith and the national ticket, there has been no indication that he is "rarin' to go," or that he is fretting at all over the delay in calling him into service.

Democratic State Committee Announces District Meetings.

The Democratic State Committee yesterday announced the complete list of congressional district meetings to be held under its auspices during the next two weeks. The first was in Ironton in the Thirteenth District yesterday. Charles M. Hay, nominee for United States Senator, and most of the candidates for State offices will speak at the meetings.

The complete list, in addition to the Ironton meeting, is:

Woman Robber Confesses She Helped Hold Up Stores

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer
MRS. DOROTHY MULLIGAN.

Mrs. Dorothy Mulligan, 24, and Companion Caught After Three Raids—She Has 5-Year-Old Child.

The bobbed-haired brunette who aided a young man in three recent drug store robberies is Mrs. Dorothy Mulligan, 24 years old, of 1923 Wright street, who has been married twice and is the mother of a 5-year-old son.

Her accomplice, whom she affectionately describes as "the kid," is Alvin Feldkamp, 19, of 2519 North Twentieth street, a chauffeur and son of a city fireman. Both are in custody and have made confessions.

Information that Feldkamp, although unemployed, was spending money lavishly on girls led to his arrest by detectives Friday night. He admitted five heldups and two automobile thefts, implicating Mrs. Mulligan in three of the robberies.

Admits Two Holdups Alone.

Alone, Feldkamp said, he committed a $5 robbery at the drug store of Herman Mack, 1001 O'Fallon street, Sept. 11, and a $50 holdup at the drug store of Arthur Sewing, 2549 St. Louis avenue, Sept. 1. In Sewing's place he stalled for time while waiting for several customers to leave by ordering carbolic acid. He signed the poison record book with a fictious name before drawing his pistol.

Arrested yesterday at her home, Mrs. Mulligan still wore the dress which robbery victims had described to the police — a short, black garment with white collar and cuffs edged with red. She was preparing to go to a grocery at Fourteenth and Warren streets where she had a Saturday job as cashier at $3 a day.

Mrs. Mulligan, who is 5 feet 2 inches tall, of stocky build and blue eyes, told her story frankly at Police Headquarters. She was divorced from her first husband, the father of her son, Edwin Talgahader Jr. A year ago she married John Mulligan, a mechanic, and six weeks ago she left him. Since then she and her son have lived with a cousin, Mrs. Elsie Johnson.

Assents to Holdup Scheme.

"I was in St. Louis Park mooning over my troubles when I met the kid," she related. "I liked him. We went out together several times. Sept. 9 he stole an auto and bought some whisky which we drank. I didn't suggest the holdups. That was the kid's idea. He said it would be easy—all I'd have to do was what he would tell me. I said: 'All right, I don't care'."

So they held up three drug stores, not without trouble. At 1801 North Ninth street, that night, Feldkamp pointed a pistol at Albert Handelman, the druggist, while Mrs. Mulligan took $99 from the cash register. At 831 Chambers street, Sept. 13, Samuel Crane, the proprietor, saw them coming and drew a revolver on Feldkamp. Mrs. Mulligan got behind Crane and pretended she had an automatic pistol in her half-open purse. Crane surrendered his revolver and $48. The same night they obtained $35 in the drug store of Fred Buecher, 3858 St. Louis avenue.

Helps Victims Identify Her.

When the druggists inspected the prisoners yesterday, Mrs. Mulligan refreshed their memories with little details and helped t complete identification. Crane, for instance, was a little dubious.

"You know," Mrs. Mulligan reminded him, "I told you not to start anything. I made a bluff like I had a gun in my purse, but I didn't. You must have mistaken my compact for a pistol."

"I just didn't give a darn," was the way Mrs. Mulligan explained her conduct. "I had left my husband because he was drinking, and I guess I did this to get even with him. Now I guess I'm worse than he is.

"I didn't care particularly for the kid, though I liked him. I got quite a thrill out of the holdups. We split the money 50-50, and I spent my share for clothes for my baby and for board.

"What am I going to do now? Well, what can I do except take a plea and tell the Court how it all happened?"

DUNCAN JOY, 61, DIES SUDDENLY IN NEW YORK

Former Cotton Broker in St. Louis Succumbs to Heart Attack.

Duncan Joy, 61 years old, New York cotton dealer formerly a resident of St. Louis, died of a heart attack yesterday in his rooms at the Shelton Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Joy, the latter formerly Miss Lucy Turner of St. Louis, were prominent socially here. He was a member of the St. Louis Country, University and Racquet clubs.

Mrs. Joy recently sailed from Japan for this country, after a visit to her daughter, Mrs. George Courts, wife of a naval attache at the United States Embassy in Tokio. Funeral arrangements will depend on messages to be received from her. Her brother, Charles Hunt Turner, 470 Lake avenue, left for New York at noon yesterday, but it was not known at his home whether he would bring Mr. Joy's body here.

Mr. Joy was reared and educated in Memphis and St. Louis, and attended Smith Academy here. He engaged in the cotton business here and in Memphis, then in New York. Besides his widow and daughter, he is survived by a son, Charles Turner Joy, a commander in the Navy, stationed at San Pedro, Cal. Mrs A. B. Goodbar of St. Louis and Mrs. James Whittaker of Cincinnati are his sisters, and Levi Joy of Memphis is a brother.

STRATON CALLS ON GOV. SMITH TO TELL WHETHER HE DRINKS

"If So, How and Where Does He Get His Liquor?" Pastor Asks in Oklahoma.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. —Hurling a challenge at Gov. Smith to tell the nation whether he is "a drinking man," John Roach Straton, New York minister, delivered his second attack in as many days against the Democratic nominee here tonight.

"Before the campaign goes any further," Dr. Straton said, "the Governor should answer two questions. The questions are:

"Is Gov. Smith a drinking man? If so, how and where does he get his liquor?"

The New York minister told his audience "several persons" had informed him they had seen Gov. Smith when he had been drinking and said the presidential candidate "owes it to himself and his candidacy" to stop the rumors by a flat denial of them. "The nation will believe that, and the talk about those matters will certainly stop," he said.

Launching his bitter attack against Tammany Hall, Dr. Straton said, "It is the machine that has led Democracy into this godless alliance with Gov. Smith. Nothing but defeat of the party is possible."

to $25 a share. The decision tells how Loree's pro its piled up.

"In accord with Loree's instructions to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., to sell his stock, when his purchases were completed," the commission said "on Dec. 3, 1924, 4000 shares of Loree's stock was disposed of at $28.06 a share, and the remainder was sold as follows for January delivery at seller's option: Dec. 5 1924, 2000 shares at $32.75 a share. Dec. 6, 6030 shares at $32.25, and Dec. 8, 2000 shares at $31.75.

"The net profit of Loree on this transaction was $144,708."

The commission went into considerable detail about other stock purchases of the Kansas City outfit, but these did not involve Loree personally. These purchases did, however, have a bearing on the decision to vacate the 1925 order.

Commissioner Brainerd dissented from his colleagues on the ground that the decision prejudiced the Southwestern consolidation cases now pending before the commission. Commissioner Aitchison concurred with the majority, but stated that he regarded the discussion of Loree's stock transactions as irrelevant and immaterial.

T. A. SALORGNE SERIOUSLY HURT IN FALL OFF HORSE

Attorney, With Fractured Pelvis and Thigh and Internal Injuries, Unnoticed for an Hour.

Conditioning a hunter for next week's "fox drag hunt" at the Bridle Spur Club in St. Louis County, Theodore A. Salorgne, attorney and riding enthusiast, was flung from his mount on the old Collins farm, near the Collins and Manchester roads, yesterday and seriously injured.

He suffered a fractured pelvis, a fractured right thigh and severe internal injuries. Moaning and seeking to attract the attention of motorists passing by, a hundred feet distant, on the Manchester road, he lay for almost an hour before anyone came to his assistance.

An ambulance from St. Louis was summoned and he was taken to St. Mary's Infirmary, Fifteenth and Papin streets, where he was treated by Drs. S. T. Vandover and T. N. Blackburne. His condition is critical and he will have to remain in a plaster cast, it was said at the hospital, for several weeks. The extent of his internal injuries have not been fully ascertained.

Salorgne, according to friends, was riding a "green," high-spirited hunter to whom he had taken a fancy. He was getting the horse ready for next week's drag hunt and also for the forthcoming county horse show. The horse attempted to take a four-foot natural hurdle, according to Salorgne, and failed to clear. Salorgne and his mount fell sidewise, the horse crushing its rider against piled brush.

The horse jumped up after the accident, and ran into a woods. Motorists who passed saw a prostrate man, in riding costume, but the horse had vanished.

Salorgne is the son of the late Theodore Salorgne, wealthy carriage maker. He resides at 6802 Pershing avenue and is counsel for the Terminal Railroad Association. His sister is Mrs. Josephine Salorgne Scullin. He is unmarried.

CHRISTY M. JOHNS DIES OF INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

Car in Which Traveling Salesman Rode Overturned Avoiding Collision in Illinois.

Christy M. Johns, 24 years old, of 1802 Michigan avenue, a traveling salesman for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville, yesterday of injuries suffered Friday evening when an automobile in which he was riding was overturned on the concrete road three miles south of Summerfield. Johns suffered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

The machine was being driven by Glen J. Brosman, 23, a salesman for the Federal Engraving Co. of St. Louis. At the inquest yesterday, Brosman testified the accident occurred when he swerved the car sharply to avoid collision with a truck turning into the highway ahead. A Coroner's verdict of accidental death was returned.

How the Brown Derby Got In.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.—The origin of the Smith campaign brown derby was disclosed to the West today for the first time—by the presidential nominee himself. Here's his story: "By accident I was wearing one during my second campaign for Governor in New York. Then the newspaper men in Albany, at their annual frolic, turned up another one. A newspaper man right in this room—I will not name him—but he was the same one I pointed out a moment ago as having picked out the fanciest shoes on the train after getting up this morning—appeared in a stunt with a brown derby, and it has been pretty well known ever since."

BIG PARTIES RULED BY BUSINESS, SAYS NORMAN THOMAS

Smith-Hoover Contest Is 'Matter of Minor Sporting Interest,' With Little Choice, Asserts Socialist.

Dismissing the Smith-Hoover contest as "a matter of minor sporting interests on a par with one of Tex Rickard's battles of the century," Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the presidency, last night devoted the larger part of his speech at Jeffla Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, to outlining the revolutionary platform on which his party bases its hope of political success.

The meeting was attended by about 500 members of the St. Louis Socialist party, who greeted their candidate enthusiastically. G. A. Hoehn, editor of St. Louis Labor, was chairman, August Classens, party secretary, who accompanied Thomas, collected about $400 in contributions.

"Never was there so little difference between the old parties; never did it matter so little to farmers and workers which may win," Thomas declared. "At most the difference is in the clothes, not the man. Both candidates play hard for big business with rival lists of bankers and manufacturers to back them."

Lists of Demands on Smith.

He closed his address with a demand on Gov. Smith that he clearly express his stand on foreign relations, the World Court, the League of Nations, debts and reparations, the recognition of Russia, on "imperialism and disarmament," particularly in Nicaragua, on unemployment insurance and the five-day week, on land, inheritance and income taxes, on injunctions, on the treatment of Negroes, on the soft coal problem, on Muscle Shoals, on public ownership of utilities, on the equalization fee and on farm marketing.

"Every party sings the praise of peace," Thomas said. "Only the Socialists understand that to be for peace is to be against imperialism, of which Coolidge's infamous war in Nicaragua, like Wilson's infamous wars in Haiti and Santo Domingo, are illustrations.

"Both parties talk pious nonsense about injunctions. Neither party discusses civil liberty, or what is the matter with our courts, or the tragic failure of our country to give justice to the poor especially if the poor are also workers, strikers, radicals, aliens or Negroes. The Socialist party analyzes these evils and points the way to their cure.

Would End Unemployment.

"We Socialists see in unemployment a characteristic disease of capitalism. We propose specific immediate remedies, among them a proper record of the unemployed, a Nation-wide system of public employment exchanges, a proper and carefully planned program of public works in dull times, unemployment insurance and the five day week.

"In our country one per cent of the people own one-third of the wealth and enjoy one-fifth of the income. Our remedies are taxation and the socialization of basic industries. By income and inheritance taxes we can break up economic dynasties; by properly taxing land values we can take away the curse of landlordism.

"It is our business to pick out the commanding heights in industry, acquire them and run them for use, not profit. Such commanding heights, especially at this juncture, are the super-power industry, mining, especially coal mining, and banking. To these we may add a marketing system to serve as middleman between farmers and consumers.

Record Registration in Four Days Beginning Tomorrow to Be Sought

Party Organizations and League of Women Voters Will Make Efforts to Get Out Every One Eligible.

The biggest registration of voters in the history of St. Louis is the objective of party organizations, and of the bi-partisan League of Women voters, for the 4-day general registration period, to begin tomorrow morning.

The League of Women Voters has set a goal of 331,537, based on an increase of 10 per cent, in most of the wards, over the 1924 figure. The 1924 registration was 303,150. That of 1920, when women first voted for President, was 315,018.

Every one of the 663 precinct polling places will be open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Everyone who wishes to vote in the election of Nov. 6 must register, regardless of past registrations. Under the law, old lists are discarded, this being the quadrennial registration, which will serve as a basis for the voting lists of the next four years. Persons who register now and do not change their residence need not register again until 1932.

Those Eligible to Register.

All citizens of the United States who are 21 years of age, or who will be 21 on or before Nov. 6, are entitled to register, if they have been residents of the State of Missouri for a year, and of the city for 60 days, before election day.

Persons who expect to move before election day should register from their present place of residence, and after moving should apply at the Election Board office, at City Hall, for a transfer. Oct. 27 will be the last day for making such transfers. Those who move too late for a transfer can vote in the precincts where they are registered. No one will make trouble for them so long as they do not try to vote more than once.

Oct. 23 will be the last day for enrolling, at City Hall, those who fail to register this week because of illnes or absence from the city.

Where to Get Information.

Those who do not know the location of their precinct registration places can get the information by telephoning to the Election Board, at GArfield 4663, 4664, 4665, 4666 and 4667. The same information can be obtained from the League of Women Voters, LIndell 7825 and 7826. The boundaries of some precincts have been changed and a number of new precincts constituted.

A large signboard at Twelfth boulevard and Olive street will be used by the League of Women Voters, during the registration period, to show the progress of registration in the various wards. The mometers representing the 28 wards will appear on the board, and the rise of the mercury will show the approach to the goal set for each ward.

Party organizations will endeavor, particularly on the last two days of the period, to get out any who show indifference in the matter of registering, and to see that every qualified person in every house, whether man or woman, registers.

Registration in St. Louis County will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

In East St. Louis, Oct. 6 and 16 are registration days.

Mayor Urges Registration.

Copies of a letter from Mayor Miller, urging city employes to register and to remind others to do so, have been posted in city hall offices.

Chairman Eigel of the Election Board said yesterday that registration officials were instructed to record the ages of voters, women as well as men. This is necessary as a means of identification, he said, and it is not sufficient for a woman to say merely that she is of legal voting age, even when that statement is manifestly true. The chairman cited, as an instance, the case of a Mrs. Mary Smith, and her daughter, also named Mary Smith, living at the same address. Without knowledge of their ages, the election officials would have no way of distinguishing between the two.

Statements have also been made that persons coming of age Nov. 7 would be permitted to register, on the theory that they complete their twenty-first year on the sixth. Chairman Eigel said he thought the board would stand on its present rule, limiting registration to those whose twenty-first birthday is on or before election day, Nov. 6.

REGISTRATION DAYS
City of St. Louis.
Tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.
St. Louis County.

Wiesmantel Spent $363.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 22.—Advertising blotters and ward club donations comprised the principal items in the campaign expense account filed today by Hugo L. Wiesmantel of St Louis, defeated candidate for the Republican nomination for the State Senate in the Twenty-ninth Senatorial District.

He reported a total of $363.30, including $103.50 for 18,000 blotters and $150 in donations of $25 each to Republican ward clubs in the Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Twenty-fourth wards.

not our business

Of course, it isn't. If you really want to look that way, we will not argue about it. But we all know there is a difference between ready-made and made-to-fit. Nobody—except in vaudeville, wants to look like "Chick" Sale.

And there's the economy of better wear in rightly tailored made-to-measure garments. Apparent saving in first cost often means higher cost per day of wear.

Take PARNELL WOOLENS, for example. Made of firmly twisted, fine wool yarn. Substantial to the touch, firm to the strain. Hold their shape and are good-looking to the last day of service. 44 handsome patterns from sober to sporty. It is only big buying and organized production that let us price them so low as $65. (Others $50-$75.)

NEGROES HOLD UP TEN IN STORE, TAKE $1600

Two Robbers Force Woman Cashier on South Broadway to Open Safe.

Two Negroes, shabbily dressed, held up five employes and five customers of the Gordon, Inc., Credit Clothing House, 1551 South Broadway, about 8:30 o'clock last night and escaped with a sum estimated at $1600 in cash.

One of the Negroes was tall and the other was short. Both were armed. The tall Negro entered the store about 8:15 p. m. and after asking a few questions about the purchase of clothing on credit, said he would be back.

He returned a few minutes later with the other Negro and began to inspect suits of clothing. Suddenly, both Negroes whipped out revolvers, and while five customers and three clerks were kept covered by the one, the other robber went to the rear of the shop with Miss Ida Reiter, the bookkeeper, and forced her to open the safe.

The safe and a cash register yielded about $1500 in cash. As the Negroes were about to leave, Fred Redemsky, a collector for the firm, entered the store with a packet of $75 in bills. Redemsky also was lined up with the victims of the robbery and the money was taken.

The Negroes then backed toward the door. "Anybody runs out of here after us gets killed," the tall Negro said. They ran south on South Broadway.

The money was insured.

Fifteen minutes later, two Negroes answering the same description held up Louis Schwab, grocer at 900 South Fourth street, and his wife, Mrs. Elsie Schwab, in their shop, and escaped with $100 from the cash register.

TEXT OF GOV. SMITH'S ADDRESS ON WATER POWER AT DENVER

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.—Following is the stenographic report of Gov. Smith's speech in the Auditorium here tonight on water-power:

"It is just exactly 20 years ago this summer since I was in the city of Denver. I had no opportunity this afternoon to study or witness the growth in that period but I was greatly surprised as I came through the thoroughfares to the Brown Palace Hotel to realize how many people remembered me over that long period, because (laughter and applause) it actually seemed to me that every second person called me by my first name (laughter and applause).

"I started out in Omaha on Tuesday night and I promised to speak about the issues of this campaign in a straightforward, plain, every-day way, so that the man on the street, in the factory and in the shop will understand exactly what I am thinking about and attempting to talk about (applause)."

"At Denver tonight, I have picked, and I think I will be able to demonstrate to you, what I consider to be one of the very important to you, what I consider to be one of the very important issues of this campaign, thinking not alone of the citizens of today but giving some thought to the generations to come, and that issue is the speedy and proper development of the great water-power resources of the country.

Property of All the People.

"Because of a pretty general lack of understanding of the problem, a great many of our public men in the past have not been very keen about any theory or policy of conservation, and for that reason valuable waterpowers, the property of all the people of the country and of the different States wherein they lie, have witnessed their alienation, their transfer, into private hands to be earning for all time to come private profit and private gain.

"Electrical enery is developed in two ways. First, from steam, generated from coal. Secondly, by falling water. Energy generated by falling water we often hear referred to as hydraulic power. All over this country tonight, while we are sitting in this hall, valuable water is running to waste which, if it were turned into energy, would supply power for industry, light for the homes and for the farms.

"Water has been referred to as white coal, and while the day may come when we may exhaust the supply of the black coal mined, it goes without saying that water power will go on forever.

"In order to appreciate its great usefulness, probably the use of a few figurys, graphically told, may sum up the story.

Possibilities of Water Power.

"In the State of New York, on the Canadian side of the Niagara River, below the Falls, is the Niagara Power Co.'s plant. It is a building about three stories high and covers probably little more than a single city block. That hydraulic power plant is capable of turning out 700,000 horsepower. Now what is 700,000 horsepower? The best way to understand that is by a comparison.

"In the City of New York, the New York Edison Co. maintains what is known as the Waterside Station at the foot of Eighty-sixth street. On the 21st of December, the longest day in the year, that plant is capable of developing 375,000 horsepower, or a little more than half of the Niagara plant. And bear in mind, that the Edison plant lights the whole lower end of Manhattan Island from Fifty-ninth street to the Battery, from the North to the East River; that it supplies all of the hotels, all of the department stores, all of the small manufacturers that use electrical energy for power. All of them are supplied from that single waterside station of the Edison 375,000 horsepower, more than one-half of the possible production at Niagara Falls.

"The energy created by falling water is so much cheaper than that created by steam from coal, there is not only the difference in the cost of the product, but an enormous difference in the cost of operation. Water falling into the turbines requires a minimum manual labor; a man or two with an oil can in his hand can run the whole hydraulic plant. It really runs itself.

"I mention that development possibility at Niagara only for the purpose of bringing to your mind the picture of possible developments all over this country and I am satisfied that the same private interests that got the grants at Niagara Falls and elsewhere throughout the country are busy in season and out of season keeping their eye on these possible power development plants.

"Greed of the Power Men."

"So great was the greed of these people for the right to divert water from the Niagara River above the Falls that, as far back as 1905, there was enacted in Congress what was known as the Burton Law, provided with a treaty for the Dominion of Canada and the State of New York, to limit the diversion of water above the Falls for the purpose of preserving the scenic beauty of one of the great wonders of the world.

"About that time Horace McFarland was president of the National Civic Federation, and speaking about Niagara Falls said that the great state of New York doled out is water powers to anybody that asked for them without return or even hope of return.

"The Burton act for the time being held the hands of water barons off Niagara Falls. What did they do? They promptly marched toward the East of the state and they put their eye on the St. Lawrence River, where, by treaty with the Dominion of Canada, the State of New York has a proprietory right in 1,000,000 horsepower, and by special enactment in the year, 1907, they created what was known as the long Soo Rapids Development Co. 'Strange to say, the State of New York, in the very year that it alienated by Legislative act that valuable grant in the St. Lawrence River, set up a new policy with respect to the remaining waterpowers, and that policy was clear and definite. It provided that the then Water Commission was to make a survey of the remaining available power, and declared by law that it was to be developed in the interest of the people themselves under state ownership and under state control. (Applause.)

"Going back over a period of 20 years into the history of the operations of the water barons of New York, is too long a story. They won half a victory, and, with the assistance of Republican Legislatures, they succeeded in blocking all of my plans for state development.

"But on the other hand, by the power of executive veto, I stopped them from giving those away (Applause.)

Definite Policy for Development.

"In my speech of acceptance I laid down a definite policy. I declared that if the power resources belonged to the Federal Government, they should be developed by the Federal Government. (Applause.) If they belong to a single state, they should be developed by that State and under the control of that State; if they are the joint right of more than one State, then, by the use of the compact clause in the Federal Constitution, under the joint authority equally of all the States claiming a right. (Applause.) And I recommended that in either event, the site, the dam, the electrical machinery, were to remain the property of either the Federal Government, the State or the joint States. (Applause.)

"By control, I meant, therefore, the actual ownership, first to the field, second to the plant and the machinery to the end that the Government or the states may be in a position by contractual agreement with the distributers to have the electrical energy dispensed to the ultimate consumer at a fair price, and to provide also for its equitable distribution. (Applause.)

"Experts on this question of waterpower development are unanimous in the statement that the cost of generating electricity from falling water is largely in the cost of the money, the capital used in the develpoment. Private development must put out their underlying securities at a high rate of interest and, if they follow what seems to be the adopted custom they will go to the bondholders or stockholders. And bear in mind that the stock bonus, even after the return of the bond, is an obligation of the ultimate consumer for all time to come.

"For New York I suggested a New York State power authority and I suggested that it be set up as a quasi-public or municipal corporation, with the right to issue its own bonds, tax exempt, they never to become the obligations of the State, but to be amortized and retired from the earnings of the development.

'You can very readily see that by such a program and through such a properly constructed authority, you have materially reduced the cost of developing raw water by a reduction in the cost of money needed to capitalibze it.

Produces the Cold Record.

'Following a suggestion that I made at Omaha with respect to the farm problem, let us look into the platforms and into the public utterances of the candidates, so that, so far as water power is concerned, we will have the cold record before us and it will be an aid to the decision we have to make on the 6th of November.

"First we will take the Republican platform. The Republican platfrom says:

"The Republican party has been forehanded in assuring the development of waterpower in accordance with public interest.'

"There is no evidence of that (applause).

" 'A policy of permanent public retention of the power sites on public land and power privileges in domestic and international streams.'

"What is the plan? what is the policy? How are you going to keep that control? Unless you provide for State or Federal development, there can be no control of the ultimate rates to the consumer and no control of the power site itself. It appears to me to be entirely in line with the Republican policy with regard to waterpower in the State of New York. All of the Republican Senators and Assemblymen that orate on this subject always talk about retention of the site, but when they formulated a policy they proposed to lease it to the Frontier Power Corporation for 50 years.

"Well, you might as well give it to them. (Laughter). Any time anybody gets a gift or a public grant on a 50-year lease, he is taking that home with him forever. (Laughter). When the time for recapture would come around, there would be litigation, there would be increased costs, possibly consequential damages, the question of possible future earnings, and when you got finished with a, that, in all human probability an other 50 years would have passed away. (Laughter).

G. O. P. Peculiarly Silent.

"The Republican platform is particularly and peculiarly silent on the question of the ownership and on the question of the contractual agreement and on the question of the beneficiary of the ultimate development. Likewise, they entirely lose sight of the possibility of Governmental construction in the first instance at such a lower rate of cost to be charged against the utility. Let us taste the acceptance speech of Mr. Hoover and see how he treats it. All he says in his acceptance speech is:

" 'Nearly all of our greater drainages contain within themselves possibilities of cheaper transportation, irrigation, reclamation, domestic water supply, hydraulic electric power and frequently the necessities of flood control.'

"That is his waterpower platform, so far as his speech of acceptance is concerned. (Laughter). He says nothing about development of the power, nothing about the control of it, nothing about the operation, and he has no plan.

"Let us take a little look at the Democratic platform and see if we do not talk out a little plainer. We say:

" 'The Federal Government and State Governments respectively now have absolute and exclusive sovereignty and control over enormous waterpowers which constitute one of the greatest assets of the nation. This sovereign title and control must be preserved largely in the State and Federal Governments, to the end that the people may be protected against exploitation of this great resource and that waterpower may be expeditiously developed under such regulation as will insure to the people reasonable rates and equitable distribution.'

"That says something. (Applause).

"Now let me give you my interpretation of that plank as shown in my speech of acceptance:

Public Ownership and Control.

" 'These sources of water power must remain forever under public ownership and control. Where they are owned by the Federal Government, they should remain under Federal control. Where they are owned by the State, they should be under the control of that State. Where they are owned by States jointly, they should be under the control of those States. Wherever developed, the Government agency, State or Federal, as the case may be, must retain, through contractual agreement with the distributing companies, the right to provide fair and reasonable rates to the ultimate consumer and the similar right to insist upon fair and equal distribution.'

"Now let me read this again:

" 'This can be secured only by the absolute retention by the people of the ownership of the power by owning and controlling the site and the plant at the place of generation. The Government, Federal or State, must control the switch that turns on or off the power.' (Applause.)

"Immediately following the speech of acceptance on the part of the Republican candidate, there was whispered around some general dissatisfaction of what he had to say about water power. Members of his own party felt that he had not gone far enough, that he had not made clear enough his position with respect to this immediate issue in the few lines that I read to you from the speech of acceptance.

Reads Hoover's Statement.

So accordingly, on Aug. 17, in the city of Los Angeles, he spoke about water power, and this is what he said:

" 'We can assure the future of California by the development of the Colorado River. I scarcely need repeat my support of that development which I have so often given during the past seven years. We want the greatest reservoir and the highest dam at Boulder Canyon that the engineers will recommend, and I am hopeful that the project will receive favorable action from the present Congress.'

"We want the highest dam that the engineers will recommend. That is the only reference in the speech that can be remotely related to water power development, because the height of the dam increases the flow through the raceway, and the flow through the raceway determines the horsepower of the electrical energy available. But he did say a lot of other things down there. He spoke about what a beautiful city Los Angeles was. (Applause.) And he spoke about the glory of its architecture, and about the 2,000,000 people that moved into it recently. (Laughter.) One of the most remarkable human migrations in history, hoped that the States would get along with each other. (Laughter.)

"Then he closes by complimenting them upon their gracious reception and courtesy, stating that words cannot express his appreciation, and so forth; but the writer of the article, having himself a sense of the vital question involved in waterpower, wrote this in the news column:

" 'There is, of course,' he says, 'no word of Government ownership.' (Laughter and applause.)

Something on the Track.

"Now, there is something on the track. There is something standing in the way of a clear-cut statement. There is something standing in the way of a definite plank and a definite platform promise. I will leave it to your imagination, but let me say ths, putting it in as mild a way as I can, the administration in Washington must, to some slight degree, have been in sympathy with the propaganda that was put through this country by the joint committee of the National Electric Light Association. (Applause.)

"I said sympathy, because it is indicated, in the first place, by the appointment of Mr. Roy O. West as Secretary of the Interior. (Applause).

Assails West's Appointment.

"For a quarter of a century, Mr. West has been interested in electric lighting companies. In his new position, if he is confirmed by the Senate, he will be a member of the committee to study Boulder Dam, and he will be ex-officio a member of the Federal Power Commission that will pass on applications for licenses, some of which may come from some of the companies with whom he was recently identified.

"We have another example of it in the State of New York in the elevation to the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee of the most persistent and most aggressive foe of water power development that the State of New York has ever had. During his entire legislative and public career he stood solidly against every attempt at public development. So you can expect nothing, as far as the Republican party in that great State is concerned, when the chief disciple and the chief apostle of private ownership for private profit and private gain finds himself moved up into the position of leadership. (Applause).

"I cannot help thinking that if the American people followed the proceedings before the Federal Trade Commission into the activities of the electric light power lobby that they will be compelled to believe that the administration in Washington knew all about it—certainly that Mr. Hoover knew about it. The director of the lobby was formerly Assistant Secretary to Mr. Hoover in the Department of Commerce at a salary of $6000 a year; and he was lifted out of that position to lead the forces of that lobby at a salary of $35,000 a year. And Mr. Hoover knew it because the vice chairman of that committee, reporting to the committee, said the following, speaking about Judge Davis:

" 'Until June 1 he was counselor and assistant secretary of the Department of Commerce. At the special request of Mr. Hoover, he was released by our committee so that he could act as chairman of the International Radio Commission; but from now on he is going to be with us.' (Laughter and applause.)

"It was also testified that a man by the name of Clapp was retained as secretary of the joint committee at a salary of $25,000 a year.

"It was developed before the Federal Trade Commission that he was formerly Mr. Hoover's secretary and secretary of the Eastern Giant Power Conference.

Propaganda Against Legislation.

"This was a rather expensive organization. In its first year it spent nine hundred and eighty odd thousand dollars, and made a budget for the current year in excess of $1,000,000, and opened up expensive and well-fitted offices right in the shade of the Capitol.

"What was the purpose? The purpose was to defeat Boulder Dam legislation, to defeat development at Muscle Shoals and to block the resolution of Senator Walsh providing for an investigation of the operations of the public utilities. (Applause.)

They knew their job well. (A voice: go after them, Al.) They knew it. It was testified to before the Commission that in some newspapers in the United States they placed advertisements for the purpose of being able to put into the news columns of that paper the propaganda that they were preparing against Federal or State ownership of waterpower. (Applause.)

Here is what one of them said before the commission: "We discontinued the practice of compiling any figures on the amount of newspaper space obtained, for the reason that we were afraid they would become public and might be misunderstood.' (Laughter and applause.)

"They spent $175,000 alone circularizing 90,000 owners of public utility stocks, urging them to write to their representatives in Washington and oppose the three legislative propositions that I a few moments ago mentioned, and they sent out tons of what they call 'boiler plate.' Boiler plate is type all set in a roll and sent to the newspapers all over the country.

Invasion of the Public Schools.

"Worse than that—and I think the American people might sit up and pay a little attention to this—they invaded the public school system of this country and set up a bureau for the securing of men properly trained to write the textbooks for the children in the schools, as they said themselves, so that the coming generations might have a better understanding of the problem that these men were interested in.

"A dean of a university got a leave of absence and he was put on the payroll at $15,000 a year, and it was his business to find out that the fellow who was writing the textbook knew how to do it. (Laughter and applause).

"Let us see what the officials of the joint committee said. Speaking about some of the lecturers in the college, they said:

" 'The infernal trouble is that these very expensive lecturers and chaps who purport to be university men and least likely to be thoughtful and competent men.'

"That is what they thought of them after they had hired them.

"And further:

" 'We can be charged with no interference with academic freedom if we step on it by any honest means in our control.'

"I disagree with that statement in toto and I make the statement that they did interfere with academic freedom.

"At their annual convention, they had the following to say:

" 'We would advise any manager here who lives in a community where there is a college to get the professor of economics interested in your problems, have him lecture on your subject to his classes once in a while. It will pay you to take such men, getting $500 or $600 or $1000 a year and give them a retainer of $100 or $200 for the privilege of letting you study and consult with them. For how in Heaven's name can we do anything in the schools of the country with the young people growing up if we have not sold the idea to the college professor.' (Laughter and applause.)

" 'What was it all about? What did they want to sell to the professor? They wanted to sell him the thought against public ownership and control of waterpower, in the hope that he, in turn, by his series of lectures, would sell the same thought back to the children in the colleges and in the high schools.

Lenroot and His $10,000 Fee.

"My attention has just been called to the fact that I overlooked the counsel to the committee, former Senator Lenroot, who was retained at a $10,000 retainer and who, I am informed, was also counsel to Mr. Hoover at the Kansas City convention.

"Not only did they try to sell to the professor and the children the propaganda against public ownership, but they maintained within their own committee what they called the Committee on Education, and the purpose of that commission was to censor and to prepare textbooks for the public schools, and also to circularize the public schools. Sixty-five thousand pamphlets were sent to 289 high schools in the New England section of the country alone. Every one of them urged opposition to the Walsh resolution, to the Boulder Dam development and to the further development at Muscle Shoals.

"Mr. Hoover himself addressed one of the meetings of the National Electric Light Association at San Francisco, in June, 1925, the forty-eighth convention of the National Electric Light Association, and the men that got together and paid for this propaganda to organize it, to send it through the schools, to send it to the professor and secure the service of the professor, were handed this medal by Mr. Hoover. Speaking to them, he said:

" 'The majority of the men who dominate and control the electric utilities themselves belong to a new school of public understanding as to the responsibility of big business to the people.' (Laughter.)

"Well, I will follow another Republican idea. I will take the former President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, for my purpose. Speaking about monopoly, he said:

" 'It is still in its infancy, and unless it is controlled, the history of the oil industry will be reported in the hydro-electric industry with results far more oppressive and disastrous to the people.'

Warning Issued by Roosevelt.

"Speaking in Watertown 13 years ago, Col. Roosevelt then knew about the attempts of the Aluminum Trust of America to get control of that valuable water power on the St. Lawrence River. Here is what he said about it:

" 'You have in this section a most valuable asset in your natural waterpower. You have elected too many men in the past who have taken what belongs to the Nation. Coal and oil barons cannot compare to waterpower barons. Do not let them get a monopoly on what belongs to this State. There has been a persistent effort to give private corporations control of the waterpower in this country. There has been an effort to give that control to the aluminum trust. If the aluminum trust makes its money fairly, all right, but when it gets money and power by taking the natural resources of the state, it is time for us to object. Do not give up your waterpower for a promise of quick development. We are poor citizens if we allow the things worth most to get into the hands of a few.'

Prescription for Boulder Dam.

"Now, let's get off an another track for a little while. There are pending in Washington now two definite propositions for Federal development: One is at Boulder Canyon, on the Colorado River, and the other is for the completion of Muscle Shoals. The other night in Omaha, after I spoke on the farm problem and outlined the ills and needs of the situation, I undertook to write a prescription for it. So that there will be no misunderstanding or misinterpretation or misquotation, here is the prescription for Boulder Canyon:

"The special need with respect to Boulder Canyon, while the general principle applies to it, is action, and immediate action. Lands of priceless value, farm houses, and human life in parts of Arizona and California are in imminent danger of destruction from the annual floods of the Colorado River. To allow this situation to continue I believe to be a travesty on government. The floods of the Colorado River must be harnessed to protect not only property, but human life, and make the flow of that stream no the master but the servant of mankind.

"There must be no further delay. It is true that all of the seven Colorado River basin states have rights to the use of the water of the Colorado River. The States should enjoy such benefits consistently with the right and duty of Congress, under the Constitution, to regulate navigation and the flow of navigable streams.

"When legislation finally passes through Congress, I want to see it produce a dam and not a controversy. It is vital, therefore, that the seven Colorado basin states come to honest and reasonable agreement as to their rights in the Colorado River. At the same time, it is the duty of Congress, under the Constitution in such a case, to build such levees and impounding dams as may be necessary to regulate the flow of this river with incidental protection against the destructive forces of floods.

Engineering and Economic Problem

"Likewise, there is an engineering and an economic problem. A board of distinguished engineers and geologists has been appointed under the authority of Congress to survey, study and report by Dec. 1, 1928, upon the problem relative to the construction of the proposed Boulder Dam.

"With that report the States may intelligently co-operate and agree. If in the light of that report and the attitude of the several states involved, it shall appear that the speediest and most effective way to bring about this great improvement is to have the Government build it, and Congress should so determine, it would be the duty of the President to abide by that decision and hasten the work upon that dam.

"If I should be elected President before action had been taken by Congress upon this great question, I would immediately submit to Congress the available data on this subject with the request for immediate action. The situation demands the fair co-operation among the States themselves and between the States and the Federal Government.

But, however this dam shall be constructed, one thing is sure: The site of the dam and the machinery generating this waterpower must be preserved in public ownership. Never should this priceless right be given away to private exploitation; and, in whatever form the power generated at Boulder Dam shall be distributed, public authority must retain the contractual right to control the rates to be charged to the ultimate consumer, and to control by contract the fair and reasonable distribution of the power to be generated. (Applause.)

"Now before I go further on this line let me make a statement about this federation of states. I had an experience with just this thing between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey in the setting up of the port of New York authority.

"When this program was first being launched, there were those who were pessimistic enough about it to think it could never be done, that there would be bound to be some jealousy, if not between the States, between some of the great industries inside of the States; but when the representatives of the great commonwealths sat down around the table, it took a very short time to iron out all the differences, and from that conference there grew a compact that knitted and bound and wedded the two States together on a joint plan for development satisfactory to all the people in the great Port District. (Applause.)

"Let me finish the prescription. If this question is not settled by the time I take the oath of the office of President by that met' od, I am confident that, without delay, I can succeed in letting you see the men at work building the Boulder Canyon Dam. (Applause.)

U. S. Ownership of Muscle Shoals.

"Now, as to Muscle Shoals, I believe that the Government should continue the full and complete development of that plant. The construction at Muscle Shoals was a war measure. Its purpose was to produce nitrates for explosives. It has been standing idle. The country's investment in it is a dead loss. The Republican administration in Washington has very little interest in it. President Coolidge himself said that there was too much of a fuss being made about Muscle Shoals; that it did not have the great value that the people thought it had; that it did not have value in excess of the cost of one first-class battleship. I entirely disagree with the President as to that. (Applause.) I think it has in principle a value greater than 100 battleships. (Applause.)

"It would be the policy of my administration to develop a method of operation for Muscle Shoals, under Government ownership and control, which would reclaim to the Government some fair revenue from the enormous expenditure already made for its development. The development of this plant should be completed so that the nation may be reimbursed, agriculture receive the benefit of cheaper nitrate production for fertilizer purposes, and the surplus power distributed fairly to the people of the 10 states which this plant could serve at rates which should remain under the control of the Government.

"I have done my very best tonight to lay this problem before you. I have explained to you the possibility of power development. I have explained to you that it is a great God-given natural resource that belongs to the people themselves.

"I have spoken about its treatment in the past. I have read the Republican platform to you. I have given you the Democratic ideas as expressed in their platform. I have given you the expressions of the candidate Hoover, both in his acceptance speech and in his other speech. I have outlined my own attitude, I think, in pretty clear, understandable language that anybody can comprehend.

"I leave that with you, as with all the other great issues in this great campaign, and I say to you here in the city of Denver, with all seriousness, that if there is any hope at all in the retention of these great waterpower resources and their development in the interest of the rank and file of the people that own them, that hope must come from Democratic victory on the sixth of November." (Applause.)

SMITH GIVES POSITION, ON CONTROL OF WATER POWER

10,000 Seats Filled Early.

The spacious Denver Auditorium, with its 10,000 seats in three tiers, filled up early, and there was the usual crush on the outside. Many in the crowd had brought little American flags. The strains of a great pipe organ at the rear of the platform reverberated through the hall and out into the streets.

The hall was decorated with a profusion of bunting and flags.

John W. Davis spoke here on his Western campaign trip four years ago, and it was here also that the late President Harding, in 1923, made the famous "dry" speech that was interpreted as committing him to personal teetotalism.

The excellence of the police arrangements, both in the hall and in the other places affected by Smith's visit, was the subject of much favorable comment. It was a treat to find one's self able to get around without a bone-crushing struggle.

Smith was not billed to start his speech until 8:30 but every seat in the hall was filled an hour before that time and hundreds of persons were standing along the walls. Crowds seeking admission were massed at each of the entrances.

A great cheer went up and hundreds of American flags were set a-flutter a few minutes before the Governor and his party entered. "The Sidewalks of New York" rolled out from the organ, and many in the crowd whistled the tune.

Noisiest Demonstration of Tour.

The Governor came in a car which was driven into the hall and right up to the edge of the platform. Then came by far the noisiest and the most colorful demonstration that Smith has seen on this trip. A deafening uproar filled the hall as he stood in his car and waved his hat before descending. The cheering was kept up for several minutes after he and his wife had reached the stage, and he was repeatedly brought to his feet to wave and smile at the crowd.

Mrs. Smith wore a smile of great happiness. She sat on the Governor's left and they chatted together while waiting for the tumult to die down. She wore a blue close-fitting hat and a black coat over a blue dress. The Governor had on a black sack suit and a bow tie.

Gov. William H. Adams of Colorado introduced Smith. He called him "the greatest and most widely known character in public life today."

Gets Tremendous Ovation.

Smith got another tremendous ovation as he rose to speak.

He held up his hand to silence the noise. "We're eating up radio time," he grinned. He pronounced it, as always, with a short "a."

Smith was heard attentively. It was plain that this was a crowd deeply interested in water power. He made the same points as in the advance version of his remarks, but departed from the text.

A tumultuous welcome greeted the arrival of the candidate in Denver shortly before noon.

Like Omaha and Oklahoma City, a crowd jammed the railway station and thousands stood along the line of a parade to the hotel selected as headquarters.

The brown derby was in constant motion as the smiling Governor acknowledged the cheers. The reception was of the same cordial character that marked the greeting given Smith yesterday in Republican Kansas.

Crowds Swarm About Car.

Observers on the campaign train were astonished at the size and enthusiasm of the throngs that swarmed about the rear platform at several points along the way. In the towns, where stops were made after dark, brilliant flares were used to light up the scene, a band was nearly always on hand, playing "The Sidewalks of New York." Especially large crowds were out at Wichita, Hutchinson, Kingsley and Dodge City.

Kansans, who were on the train as a reception committee, said that the crowd at Kinsley, apparently numbering 2000, was considerably larger than the population of the town, the difference being accounted for by hundreds who had driven in from the surrounding country. Considering the fact that Kansas is rated a Republican state, the welcome at all these places was most impressive.

It was a more enthusiastic greeting than Smith received in the small towns of Democratic Oklahoma.

At a meeting with an army of newspaper men upon his arrival at Denver Smith declined to make comparisons, but said that the reception everywhere had been 100 per cent. Smith was again questioned at a press conference about the equalization fee feature of the McNary-Haugen bill, the principle he indorsed in his Omaha speech. He replied that the address spoke for itself.

Gov. Smith will speak Monday night at Helena, Mont., where his subject is expected to be corruption in the Federal Government.

ST. LOUIS IN CHAIN OF FLYING SCHOOLS

Chief of New Aerial Service Concern Looks for Location Here.

St. Louis will be included in the chain of flying schools and aerial taxi stations to be established throughout the country by the Curtiss Flying Service, Inc., it was learned yesterday from Charles "Casey" Jones, pilot and chief of the new organization, who spent Friday here looking over prospective locations for the service.

Operations will begin here as soon as a suitable location and buildings can be obtained, Jones said.

The Curtiss Flying Service, Inc., is a $10,000,000 reorganization of a previous concern of that name, formed as an aerial exhibition company by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co. 18 years ago. The brokerage firm of Blair & Co., New York, and J. C. Wilson & Co. of Louisville, Ky., joined the Curtiss Co. in organizing the new concern. Approximately 750,000 shares of stock in the company are to be offered for sale at $15 a share.

Uniform System of Instruction.

The plan calls for the establishment of flying schools following a uniform system of instruction in virtually all large cities in the country. Service stations carrying complete stocks of standard parts for Curtiss airplanes will be operated in connection with the schools.

"The time has come when the servicing of airplanes must be carried on with methods similar to those developed in the automobile industry," Jones said. "The owner of an airplane should not be forced to wait weeks until a broken part can be replaced by a shipment from the factory. Operators of planes in commercial service cannot afford to do this. The chain-store idea of selling airplane and motor parts is to be developed to the point where replacements can be made in a few hours or days, instead of weeks."

In addition to conducting schools and chain stores, the Curtiss Flying Service, Inc., plans the establishment of an inter-city aerial passenger service similar to motorbus lines. Terminals will be established in principal cities and passengers will change planes several times on long flights.

Undecided on Location.

Jones said he had not decided on a location here. He spent several hours in conference with Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Maj. Robertson is a director of the Curtiss Flying Service, Inc. Jones also inspected Parks' Airport on the East Side. He said he would not decide on a location until he returned to St. Louis in about six weeks on his way to the Pacific Coast to put the service into operation there.

While in St. Louis Jones appointed Oliver L. Parks, vice president and general manager of Parks Airport and Air College, a member of the board to survey the flying school situation in the United States. Jones is chairman of the boay and "Tex" Rankin, a pilot of Portland, Ore., is the third member. The board will render a report at the aeronautical show at Chicago next winter.

Jones departed yesterday morning for Cincinnati in a Challenger-Robin monoplane with H. Clay Ferguson, of Trans-Continental Air Transport Inc., as a passenger. Ferguson arrived in St. Louis by train from the West and spent an hour in consultation with T. Preston Sultan of the firm of Love & Sultan, air consultants.

WILSON QUOTED BY BORAH IN CLEARING HOOVER RECORD

Senator Asserts Nominee Took No Part in Fixing Price of Wheat—Answers Questionnaire.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 22.—The shade of Woodrow Wilson was invoked to extol the merits of Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for the presidency, by Senator William E. Borah in an address here tonight.

Faced with two questionnaires addressed to him by Democratic foes, Senator Borah ignored one signed by Congressman Joseph W. Byrns of Nashville, and answered the questions in a shorter list signed by 14 prominent Tennessee Democrats.

He directed his address at Democrats in the audience and charged that prohibition was the principal issue of the campaign.

Dealing in detail with questions regarding his opposition to Hoover's wartime positions on price fixing and other emergency measures, the senator read a direct quotation from Wilson asserting that Hoover did not take any direct part in the wartime price fixing of wheat, but that this was handled by a committee on which the food director did not sit.

In reply to another question, he said: "The Republican party has made an honest effort to enforce the Volstead act. I am not in favor of changing a single letter of the Volstead law."

Questioned if he considered that the Roman Church would influence or dictate the Government under Gov. Smith he replied: "My opposition to Gov. Smith is no pronounced politically that I will not discuss his religious affiliations. If he were a Presbyterian elder or a Methodist deacon and held his present views, I would be equally against him."

NEW FIGHT FOR NINE-FOOT CHANNEL NORTH OF ST. LOUIS

Shippers Say Mississippi Deepening Would Save 7 Cents Per 100 Pounds of Grain.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—A saving of 7 cents on every hundred pounds of 50,000,000 bushels of grain shipped down the Mississippi would be realized through the deepening of the river to a nine-foot channel from the Twin Cities to St. Louis, shippers declared yesterday as they met here to lay the groundwork for a new fight for waterway improvements.

The conference was called by a group of Mississippi Valley shippers who met last week at Minneapolis and appointed an Executive Committee to take their plea to Washington. Col George S. Albert of St. Paul headed the committee.

The adverse report of a Government engineer who opposed the nine-foot waterway stirred the shippers to new action.

The argument was advanced that the nine-foot "standard guage" channel through to the Twin Cities would make possible five times the cargo now carried in barges. It was brought out, also, that the transfer of cargoes at St. Louis is a principal element in the cost of transportation, and this would be eliminated by the deep water thoroughfare directly into the heavy tonnage production areas of the Northwest.

Submarine S-17 Is Floated.

By the Associated Press.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 22.—The submarine S-17, which went aground at Juan Point in Almirante Bay, 90 miles from Coco Solo, Panama Canal Zone, Thursday morning, was floated yesterday afternoon and proceeded to her base at Coco Solo apparently undamaged, according to a message to Real Admiral Frank H. Brumby, commander of the control force at the submarine base here.

WIFE AGAIN SUES JIM TULLY

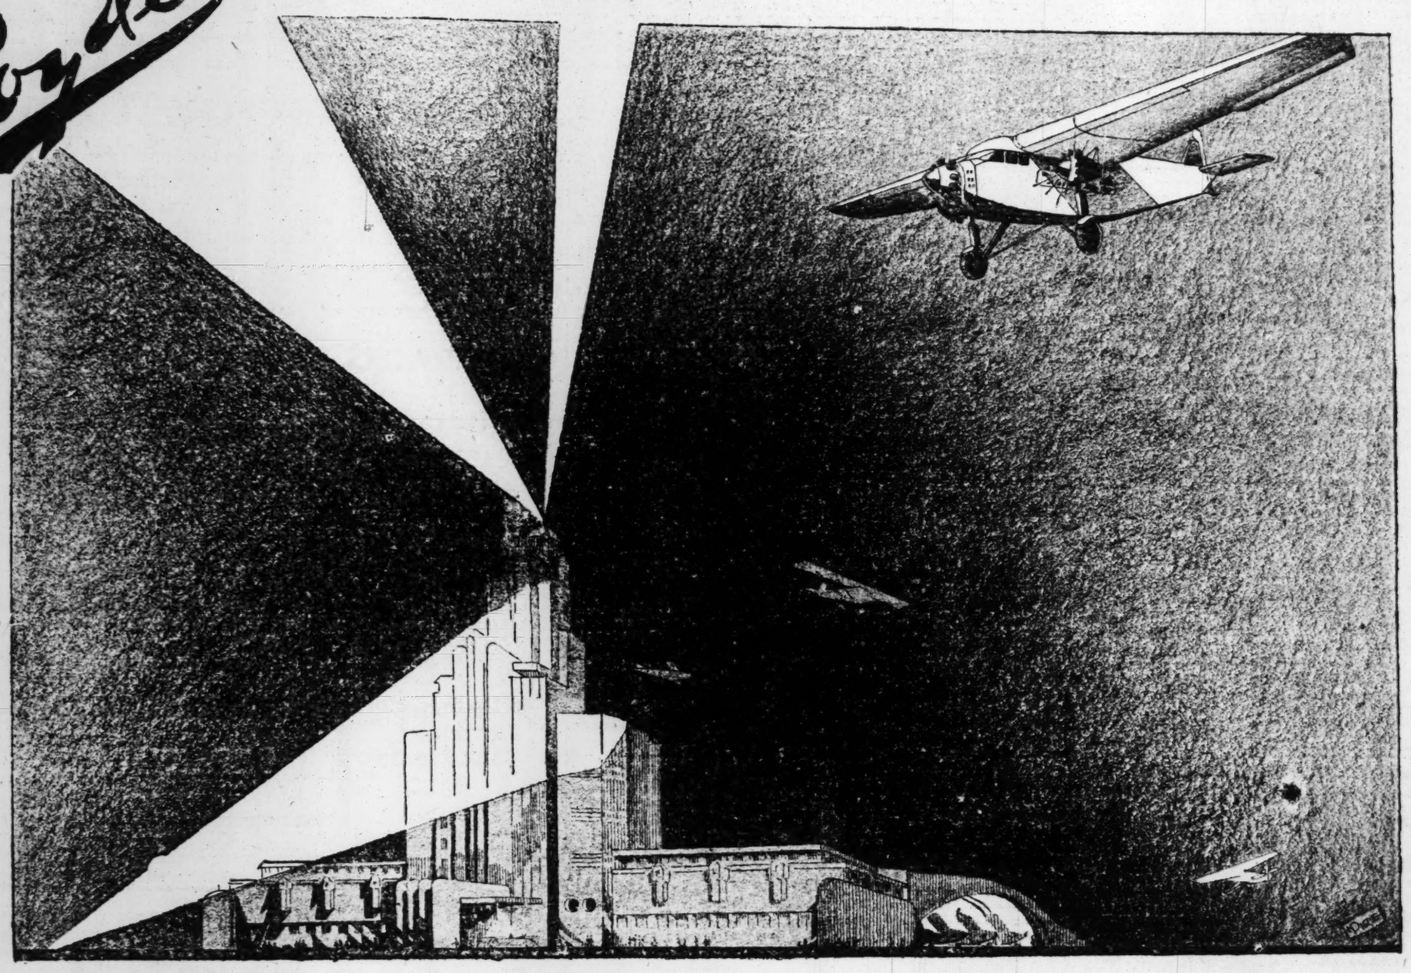
Hobo Novelist Broke Her Nose in Beating, She Says.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—Marital affairs of Jim Tully who from a hobo became a widely read novelist, were back in the divorce court here today for the second time in the last few months.

After having withdrawn her first suit for a divorce soon after it was filed last June, Mrs. Margaret M. Tully, yesterday filed a new action against the novelist. Fully, at the time of the previous reconciliation blamed the domestic trouble on "Hollywood whisperers" who attempted to "attack him through his home," in her suit yesterday. Mrs. Tully accused her husband of beating her so severely that he broke her nose on one occasion.

OLIVE AT SIXTH — "ST. LOUIS' GREATEST STORE FOR MEN" ~ ~ ~ BOYD-RICHARDSON

Boyd's



Boyd's Invite All St. Louis to Their 52ND BIRTHDAY PARTY

A Progressive greater St. Louis scores again. On the eve of the completion of one of the most comprehensive Metropolitan Bond Issue Building Programs, St. Louis announces to the world its air-mindedness by authorizing the building of one of America's greatest air ports.

No longer will St. Louis be listed as a "Phantom Port" with only the most necessary landing facilities. The illustration above is an artist's conception of the new St. Louis air port. A coming reality which will be built to facilitate the increasing air traffic to air-minded St. Louis. And with such modern facilities more and more air traffic of America will gravitate to this great port for ships of the air ... and attract many more modern industries to the city.

It is this progressive St. Louis that has urged us to greater efforts and as St. Louis is growing, so are we. Again, this has been our most successful year. For this we are deeply grateful and again in return for your liberal patronage we invite you to celebrate our 52nd Birthday Party with us.

ASSAILS TROLLEY HOLDING COMPANY AS 'EXPLOITATION'

Henry S. Priest Asserts Delaware Concern Is 'Tramp Corporation'—Calls Plan a 'Delusion.'

SAYS PRESENT FIRM IS BETTER FINANCED

Minority Stockholders' Counsel Declares No Benefit to Public Service Co. Is Assured.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 22.—The proposed transfer of stock control of the St. Louis Public Service Company to a Delaware holding company is declared contrary to public policy in Missouri, and is alleged to be a scheme for "exploitation" of the street railways by a few individuals, with a minimum investment, in a brief filed today with the Public Service Commission by former Judge Henry S. Priest, attorney for a minority group of Public Service Company stockholders.

Priest charged the holding company, the City Utilities Company, would be able through its plan of stock control, to force upon the Public Service Company any special service or advice it saw fit to impose, and at any cost it might choose, with no assurance of benefits to the operating company.

His brief is in opposition to the application of the holding company, which was organized by J. K. Newman of New York and his associates in reorganization of the St. Louis street railways, to acquire and hold more than 10 per cent of the stock of the operating company. The holding company proposes to acquire slightly less than 50 per cent of the common stock and 35,000 of the 73,000 outstanding shares of preferred stock of the St. Louis Public Service Company.

Beyond Reach of Commission.

Granting of application would place control of the management of the operating company in the hands of the holding company. The holding company itself would not be subject to regulation by the Public Service Commission of Missouri.

A motion by Priest to reopen the hearings and to summon Newman and other stockholders of the holding company for questioning is pending before the Commission.

Newman and his assistants in the reorganization now are in control of the Public Service Co., but seek to transfer their holdings to the holding company. The grounds offered in support of the application were that the holding company could render financial, managerial, supervisory and technical assistance to the operating company.

Priest declared the holding company had made no showing that it could furnish such service, or that it was necessary. He said the commission would have no power to enforce their performance, once the control was acquired.

Calls It "Tramp Corporation."

The brief characterized the holding company as a "tramp" corporation, "with a roving commission to go anywhere and everywhere to aid by advice and credit any lame or halting public enterprize that may enlist its affection."

"St. Louis seems to be a favorite feeding grounds for these migratory birds," he said. "It does not appear that the city or the Public Service Co. has called for its aid, or needs it."

Discussing the section of the Public Service Commission law which requires approval of the commission before a corporation may acquire more than 10 per cent of the stock of a public utility, Priest said it defined the public policy as limiting the amount of stock that may be acquired in this manner.

Holding Company Owes.

He said there was no showing that the Public Service Co. needed financial aid, and declared that if it was needed, the holding company apparently was less able than the operating company to obtain it. He said the holding company appeared to have received $2,418,632 for its outstanding stock, but asserted it owed $3,642,887 to banks in St. Louis and New York.

"How is there any assurance that it has better resources of credit than the Public Service Co., whose shares of stock constitute its (the holding company's) only assets," Priest said. He declared the plan was a "delusion to the shareholders of the Public Service Co., "in that it would impose upon the dividends they otherwise would receive the heavy burden of the expense of the management of the holding company."

Run on Illinois Bank Checked.

By the Associated Press.

FREEPORT, Ill., Sept. 22.—A run on the Second National Bank of Freeport this morning was quickly checked when officials announced that all depositors would be paid on demand. Bank officers said there was no foundation for the rumor that caused depositors to call for money.

GASOLINE, RADIO AND FOOD TO PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN WILKINS ANTARCTIC PARTY

Flyer Says Planes Will Be Crowded With Supplies and Instruments on Cruise Into South.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 22.—With fiancees of two members of the group waving a farewell, Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins and his Antarctic expedition sailed today on the Munson liner Southern Cross.

One of the girls who said goodby was Suzanne Bennett,, actress, who earlier in the day had announced her betrothal to Wilkins.

The other romance was disclosed when reporters found Orval Porter, one of Wilkins' mechanics and Miss Orpha Boree of Anderson, Ind., in an embrace on the after-deck.

"A man can't get married and leave on this sort of an expedition," Wilkins said, in explaining why the ceremony did not take place before his departure. "There will be plenty of time to get married when I come back."

Others in the party include Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson, pilot of Wilkins' plane on the 2200-mile flight from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen, and Joe Crossan, relief pilot.

The two Lockheed-Vega seaplanes, which they will use in mapping Graham Land in the Antarctic, were lashed on the deck of the Southern Cross, one fore and the other aft.

Wilkins said that they would leave the steamer at Montevideo and there take passage in a whaler for Deception Island. Wilkins will be gone for a year at least.

By CAPT. SIR GEORGE HUBERT WILKINS.
Commander of the Wilkins Antarctic Expedition.
(Copyright, 1928.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Food and fuel will play a major part in the success of the Wilkins Antarctic expedition.

Ships that go down to the sea can choose and carry the things they need in abundance and variety, but modern clippers of the skies—the swift, trim airplanes of today—face problems peculiarly their own. An army may, as Napoleon said, "march on its belly;" it takes a lot of bulging fuel tanks to keep a plane in the air.

"Gas, gas, and more gas" is the never-ending cry of a powerful motor as it roars over stretches of unexplored land or ice. The human half of the expedition will resort to rations if things go wrong. Tender steaks give way to pemmican; humble raisins take the place of the more toothsome delicacies, but a 200-horsepower motor knows no compromise. It wants gasoline, it wants it "straight," and it wants it "right now." In the Arctic or Antarctic, over land or sea, night and day, there is no substitute for gas—at least not yet.

Many Sciences Play Part.

"The liner she's a lady, an' she never looks nor 'eeds'"—Sang Kipling before liners of the air began sailing over uncharted horizons. The modern explorer who ventures across desolate mountains and 2000-mile gaps of land and ice never before viewed by human eyes, must more than "look and heed." He must enlist the aid of mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, radio—faithful and unerring mates, every one of them, but each speaking its own language through delicate and precise instruments.

A place for everything, and everything in its place, plus speed, endurance, direction, navigation, and the provision for emergencies—these and many more are the leastcommon demoninator of a polar expedition.

Let me give a brief outline of what I must take along with my expedition, and how it must be transported far below the last fringe of civilization, into the "home of the blizzards"—the Antarctic continent.

First and foremost come the planes. It must be remembered that our problems will be varied. We will unload the two Lockheed monoplanes from the whaling ship Ronald at Deception Island and lower them into the open water. This means that the planes must be fitted with pontoons when loaded on the steamer in New York. An extra set of floats will be shipped to the Pacific side of the Antarctic continent, at Ross Sea, on board the S. S. Nellson-Alonzo. In addition to these, there will be two sets of wheels, the original equipment of the Lockheed planes, and three sets of skiis. These will be of my own design.

Each Plane Has Radio.

Our radio equipment is very important. Each plane will be supplied with a transmitting set and a receiver. In each there will be a wind-driven generator, set flush with the leading edge of the wings. Then there will be a portable radio generator, driven by a small air-cooled gasoline motor. This set is a marvel of radio engineering. It was built for me in San Francisco, and is similar in every detail to the sets taken by Commander Richard E. Byrd on his expedition.

The Neilson-Alonzo, the huge "factory ship" of the Norwegian whalers, to be stationed in the Ross Sea area, has radio equipment with which to keep in touch with us across the unknown Antarctic wastes. The radio operator on the Ronald, near the Weddell Sea, has similar sets. Thus the invisible chain across the unexplored regions will be complete.

The operator at station 6ARD, San Francisco, recently assured me he was frequently in communication with whaling ships in the Antarctic last year, and that he expected no trouble in keeping contact with us this trip.

Plenty to Eat on Way Out.

Until about the end of November, when we expect to reach Deception Island, our food problems will be simple. They will consist in using good judgment and not overeating. The "galleys" on the whaling ships are well stocked and the cooks are experts.

On Deception Island we will have no worries. The whaling ships will serve as a base, and everything will be comfortable and pleasant. But once we are out on the ice, 500 miles below Deception Island, it will be a case of "checking the cjecks."

"Cjecks" is the Norwegian name for biscuits, the backbone of polar diet. They are the acme of scientific food. There is no waste—they are practically all food value. Oatmeal, whole wheat flour, whites of eggs, sugar and a few ingredients known only to the manufacturers go into these humble cjecks. What pork is to beans, bacon to eggs and sauerkraut to frankfurters, the Norwegian biscuits are to chocolate. The two are polar "bitemates," and they go a long way when one has a long way to go.

Live on 12 Biscuits a Day.

In 1927 Lieut. Ben Eielson and I lived on chocolate and biscuits 18 days while we walked 125 miles over polar ice to a fur trader's station at Beechy Point, Alaska, after our last forced landing. We lived and walked on 15 ounces a day—12 small biscuits, the size of soda crackers, and two small bars of chocolate.

We plan to take with us to the Weddell Sea side of the Antarctic 100 pounds of biscuits and 100 pounds of chocolate of a special make, especially prepared in Norway for polar diet, and the same brand which was supplied to Shackleton, Amundsen and our own three Arctic expeditions. One hundred pounds of pemmican, 100 pounds of malted milk, 50 pounds of almonds and 50 pounds of raisins will complete our supplies.

Pemmican is the concentrated meat and fat food. The Rockford flyers, recently rescued in Greenland, lived on eight ounces of pemmican a day. The malted milk, almonds and raisins supply everything needed. Simplicity is the key to comfort in emergencies. All this food can be eaten without any preparation. No need for cooking, no danger of scurvy. Fresh water to drink—melted as needed. No tea, no coffee, no stimulants.

Expects to Eat Seals.

And, if luck is with us, we can look forward to fresh meat from seals. Seal meat, when properly prepared, tastes like mutton. If we are forced to make a landing, and can keep our plane and supplies with us, seal meat can be cooked without difficulty.

The same things we'll have on the Weddell Sea side will await us on the Pacific side, in the Ross Sea. We will have one-half of the amounts, but the same selection. This supply will be an emergency depot.

But our food is only half of the problem. The motors must be fed with good gasoline, and filling stations are not to be found in Antarctica.

Two thousand gallons of high test gasoline already have gone forward to Hobart, Tasmania. The fuel will be picked up there by the Nellsen-Alonzo. This whaling ship also will take on board the extra set of seaplane floats, the food supplies and a few extras, including the spare radio set. One hundred and fifty gallons of lubricating oil also will be on hand for our motors when we land in the Ross Sea area.

Whalers to Carry Gasoline.

The gasoline for the Weddell Sea side will be taken there by the Norwegian whalers. From Deception Island we will carry this gasoline to our "farthest south' base in Graham Land.

Then come the instruments—servants in storms and guides across the unknown.

In each plane, on the instrument board in front of the pilot, is a maze of dials, levers and trim little contrivances. Each has its work to do and each will do it faithfully if given a chance—and if read and interpreted correctly.

The oil temperature gauge will watch over the motor and warn the pilot if any trouble developes. The tachometer will tell the pilot how well the motor is performing its work. This instrument records the number of revolutions a minute. The air speed indicator, working in conjunction, will help measure the efficiency of the propellor, and also give us a gentle hint if the nose of the ship is pointed too far up or too far down.

Fingers on Pulse of Motor.

Another modest little dial will keep an accurate check on the fuel pressure. Close to the oil temperature gauge there is an oil pressure dial—another sentinel to keep a metallic finger on the motor's pulse. A turn-and-bank indicator will keep automatic eyes on the invisible horizon in the darkness. The old familiar and mysterious laws of gravity and mechanics will do this work. An inclinometer will watch the fore and aft movements of the plane, and an altimeter will record the height above sea level of the plane in flight.

Two compasses, one on the instrument board and one on the floor between the pilot's feet, complete the instrument assembly in the front cockpit. Ignition switches, feul tank valves, a hand pump and motor throttles finish up the interior decorations of the pilot's little den, leaving no room for a tea table or a smoking stand. It takes a "heap" of watching to keep a plane in flight.

In my own cockpit, just back of the wing and inside the comfortable body of the plane, will be another collection of instruments. First and foremost come two sextants. The sun and a sextant, with the aid of mathematics, can help a navigator tell just where he is provided he can see the sun and measure its position in the heavens in relation to the horizon. But if clouds or haze obscure the horizon, then the bubble sextant must be employed. The bubble, delicately placed in a closed compartment, does the work. It supplies an artificial horizon. We can do without a horizon, but the sun must be visible.

Technical Devices Needed.

A course and distance calculator and navigation compass, with an azimuth circle and a drift-bearing plate for measuring the angle between the sun's position and the true north, or the direction of flight, are as important as they are technical. These will be close to my elbow as we speed across the unknown Antarctic country. A wind drift indicator will help determine how much we are drifting off our course and how much that course must be changed to compensate for the drift.

The American Geographical Society has prepared some special charts which I shall use in this flight. Astronomical notebooks and tables, special curves, lines cut in transparent material, and things of that sort will be close at hand.

When you consider that several special cameras for mapping the country as we fly over it, for taking movies of the trip, and a special camera which I have designed for making a continuous photographic record of the entire trip, are on the list of things that simply must be taken along, you can see that the navigator as well as the pilot is crowded for space.

Needs Space for Charts.

The navgation instruments have to be handled carefully. Room must be provided for work on the charts, and space is none too plentiful on a 41-foot monoplane carrying nearly two tons of gasoline and supplies.

This outline gives an idea of how the details of the expedition will have to be worked out and arranged. In previous articles I have tried to sketch the background of the country and the objects of the expedition.

In my next article I will relate some of the interesting experiences of previous expeditions and tell a little of the strange, faraway islands and continent where we will have to set the stage for the next big drama, the attempt to wrest from Mother Earth some of the secrets has guarded for centuries in ice-locked Antarctica.

OBREGON'S LIFE REPORTED INSURED FOR $1,000,000

Slain Mexican President-Elect Said to Have Had Policies With U. S. Companies.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—The newspaper La Prensa reports that the late President-elect Obregon carried about $1,000,000 life insurance in various American companies issued by agencies in Los Angeles.

The newspaper says the companies have indicated they may contest the payments because of the murder of Obregon and that consequently there are likely to be lawsuits in the Los Angeles courts, brought by Obregon's heirs.

No confirmation of the story could be obtained in Mexico City.

14 BRITISH EDITORS SAIL FOR STUDY TOUR OF U. S.

Guests of Carnegie Peace Endowment Visit in Interest of Anglo-American Accord.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Fourteen prominent British editors—pilgrims of the press—sailed from London this afternoon in the steamship Minnewaska for a two months' tour of the United States as guests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The object of the tour is promotion of good will and understanding between the American and British people.

The British Institute of Journalists chose the pilgrims from all over the British Isles. It will be their purpose to probe into the heart of the American in a manner impossible for the ordinary tourist, so that upon their return to Britain, when writing of matters concerning the United States, the editors will be able to make full use of their observations.

The Minnewaska is due in New York Oct. 1, landing the editors in the midst of the presidential election campaign and affording them the opportunity of studying American politics at close range. The leader of the party is H. D. Hinmenfeld, president of the Institute of Journalists and editor of the Daily Express.

SHIPPERS IN EAST OBJECT TO NEW OCEAN RATE PLAN

Concerns Along Seaboard Would Be Forced Out of Business in Southwest, They Assert to I. C. C.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Three witnesses representing many shippers along the Atlantic Seaboard told the Interstate Commerce Commission today that proposed new ocean rates would put them out of business in the Southwest.

The first of the witnesses, who testified at the rehearing into the consolidated Southwestern cases, was William R. Moore, secretary-manager of the Eastern Confectioners' Traffic Bureau, which represents 90 manufacturers, providing 57 per cent of all the candy moved in the country. The second was Milton P. Bauman, traffic manager for 18 companies, including the R. B. Davis Baking Powder Co. of Hoboken, N. J.; Colgate & Co. of Jersey City; the New Jersey Industrial Traffic League and the American Druggists' Syndicate. He was followed by F. M. Varah, representing the Syracuse, N. Y., Chamber of Commerce.

Moore said the present candy rates from the Atlantic Seaboard by way of the Gulf port lines have been made on a competitive basis with Chicago and St. Louis, but that under the proposed rates this basis is eliminated and the Atlantic Seaboard would no longer have the advantage of the ocean routes.

Danger of Losing Market.

"The competition between Eastern and Midwest manufacturers on less-than-carload candy and confectionery has been vigorous and is growing keener," he said. "If the exceptions and less-carload commodity rates are eliminated, together with the disadvantage in which Eastern manufacturers have been placed by reason of the proposed rates, producers on the Atlantic Seaboard will lose their market."

He furnished tables to show how the new rates would affect candy shipments to Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, and advocated that the Gulf lines be allowed to establish rates from the Atlantic seaboard to compete with other producing territory.

Bauman testified that the interests he represented thought material hardships would result if the proposed rail-ocean-rail rates were permitted to become effective.

"Findings No. 11 and 27 are strongly objected to by us," he said, "insofar as they pertain to routes including ocean transportation. Their application to water rates will wipe us out of business.

How Trade Was Built Up.

"The history of market development in the South and Southwest by seaboard manufacturers is conclusive that it has been fostered by the coastwise lines and that it originated at the South Atlantic and Gulf port cities. The port-to-port rates and the rail and ocean rates to the destination ports have permitted seaboard manufacturers to obtain a foothold in these distant markets which resulted through increased investment in a development of interior markets in Texas, Louisiana, and to some extent, in Arkansas and Oklahoma.

"Our plants and facilities, our agents and establishments in these markets have increased to such an extent that a continuation of our ability to compete with mid-western producers is vital to our existence."

Would Leave Lines Free.

By way of illustration, Bauman analyzed the new rates as they would affect shipments of baking powder, asserting they would force the R. B. Davis Baking Powder Co. out of the Dallas market. He disclosed that 75 per cent of the business of the interests he represents is moved by way of the New-Tex lines, an unregulated competitor of the standard Gulf lines, and supported the contention of the standard lines that they should be left free to meet such unregulated water competition.

Varah testified that Syracuse shippers obtained business in the Southwest largely by use of ocean routes and that if they were to be denied the natural advantage of cheap water transportation under the proposed rate schedule, they would be forced out of business in that territory as regards many products.

The hearing will be resumed Monday at 10 a. m.

HAY AT IRONTON SAYS PATTERSON IS EVADING ISSUES

Democratic Candidate for Senate Contrasts Position With Opponent's and Hoover's.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

IRONTON, Mo., Sept. 22.—Charles M. Hay, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, the principal speaker tonight at a Thirteenth Congressional District political meeting, contrasted his position on issues of the campaign with that taken by his opponent, Roscoe C. Patterson, at the opening of the Republican campaign in Springfield a week ago.

On agriculture, Hay said he stood with the Democratic platform and with Gov. Smith, the presidential nominee, in a pledge to work out the detail of farm relief on the theory that control of surplus stocks of farm products was the crux of the whole agricultural problem. Hoover and Patterson and the Republican platform, Hay said, were vague and indefinite, though he said Patterson went on record at Springfield as opposed to the definite Democratic position.

Contrast on Water Power.

On the subject of conservation of water power and the supervision of public utilities, which Hay said was an "outstanding and vital issue," he drew a sharp contrast.

He quoted Smith's acceptance speech to the effect that the Government, Federal or state, must retain control of the sites and plants for generating electricity which are now public property, and that no private monopoly should be permitted to capitalize for rate-making purposes water power sites that are the property of the whole people.

Hay directed attention to his first campaign speech, in which he took a position directly in accord with the later platform declarations and the Smith acceptance speech.

"On this issue the Republican platform is evasive," Hay said. "Mr. Hoover is indefinite, and the Republican candidate for Senator is silent. In his keynote speech at Springfield he had not one word to say about this outstanding issue, one of such vital importance to the people of Missouri.

"The most definite thing Mr. Hoover has said is that he stands for the Coolidge policy. The Coolidge policy with respect to the conservation and distribution of water power is well indicated by his pocekt veto of the Muscle Shoals bill and his appointment of the attorney of the Insull interests to a place on the commission which is vested with the power to pass on applications for water-power privileges by the Insull and other power interests of the country."

On the armament question, Hay said his position and that of the Democratic platform specifically was for the reduction and limitation of armaments, keeping in mind that the country must not be made defenseless. He said the Republican administration had favored a $700,000,000 special navy-building program, notwithstanding the fact that the armaments of other countries had been reduced and that this country, except during the war, never had expended to exceed $297,400,000 a year on the army and navy.

"The Republican candidate for President in his acceptance speech makes it clear that this program has his approval," Hay said. "The Republican candidate for Senator does likewise. I know that both made general approval in polite terms of the movements for armament limitation, but the emphasis is placed on the building program. I fear that the taxpayers and the fathers and mothers of America do not yet realize the deep and frightful significance of all this."

Hay reviewed the scandals of the Harding administration, and to the Democratic pledge for integrity in the conduct of the Government.

"I challenge any Missouri voter to point to a single line or word in the Republican platform in renunication, repudiation, criticism or deunuciation of the known frauds and crimes, or the prepetrators thereof," he said.

"Mr. Hoover in his acceptance speech used this exact language: 'The record of these seven and one-half years constitute a period of rare courage in leadership and constructive action. Never has a political party been able to look back upon a similar period with more satisfaction.'

"My opponent in his keynote speech at Springfield echoed this unblushing boast in almost identical language. He said: 'The records of achievements of the past seven and one-half years will go down in history as accomplishments of the highest order.'

"So we differ on this question, too."

Democrats from Iron and other counties of the district gathered for the meeting today and tonight, the first of a series of meetings to be held under auspices of the Democratic State Committee in all Congressional districts. Monday there will be a meeting in Sikeston and Tuesday one in West Plains, both in the Fourteenth district, and Wednesday one in Salem in the Sixteenth district.

State and local candidates addressed the crowd this afternoon, among the speakers being Dwight H. Brown, nominee for Secretary of State; Elmer O. Jones, nominee for Attorney-General; Forrest Smith, nominee for State Auditor; Richard Nacy, nominee for State Treasurer, and George R. Ellison, nominee for Supreme Judge.

IRONWORKERS DOUBLE THEIR PRESIDENT'S PAY

Paul J. Morrin Re-elected by Union With Salary of $15,000 a Year.

Paul J. Morrin's salary as president of the International Association of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers was doubled yesterday with his unanimous re-election yesterday for a four-year-term. Henceforth he will receive $15,000 a year.

Thus things have brightened for the St. Louis labor leader since he came out of Leavenworth prison in 1913 with dark prospects, although he and his associates here had maintained he was innocent of the charge of conspiracy in labor dynamiting cases for which he served two years of a three-year sentence following trial of 54 labor leaders in the Federal Court at Indianapolis.

Prior to conviction he had been business agent of the St. Louis union. As a vindication he got his old job back, and in 1918 was elected international president, having held that post 10 years. Shortly after his release his citizenship was restored by President Wilson.

Other officers of the international union, which has 28,000 members, were elected as follows: William J. McCain of Kansas City, secretary; John L. Lyons of Cleveland, treasurer, and John Fitzpatrick of Atlanta, Ga., new member of the board of nine vice presidents. McCain has been acting secretary for about a year. The office of treasurer was established at the convention.

ANGLO-FRENCH SECRET PACT ON ARMS REPORTED

Said to Have 'Unwritten Gentlemen's Agreement' on All Questions on Disarmament.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT,
Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Publisher Publishing Cos., the New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 22.—An unwritten "gentlemen's agreement," far surpassing in importance the naval compromise, is thought to exist between France and Great Britain on all questions relating to disarmament.

The naval compromise itself, formerly regarded as something of the greatest moment, is thought to be no more than a detail of this sweeping agreement and is said to have been put in written form by the French and British navies only so that it could be presented to the United States, which is regarded as being interested directly in naval disarmament, though only indirectly in European land and air forces.

In official quarters here it is generally understood that, under the "gentlemen's agreement," Great Britain accepts the French position on land disarmament, and that conscription in the reduced form now in existence in France will not be opposed by Great Britain in any disarmament conference, nor will the French reserves be counted as active armed forces.

The French stand is that they should not be counted because the present year of service does not turn the men into soldiers, but merely gives them a preliminary training toward becoming soldiers.

In the air, Great Britian and France consider they have a common interest on account of the importance and size of the new German air services. The mutuality of their ideas, however, is less developed in the air than on land and sea.

Neither the American nor any other Government has received any information about the unwritten understanding. In fact, it is considered as question of private and mutual interest between the two powers, rather than a formal agreement.

The naval agreement however, according to the most reliable sources here, was placed before the Governments in Washington, Tokio and Rome, in its entirety, and no detail of this written compromise has been unknown to Washington since Aug. 3.

The general letter of explanations to Ambassadors, which was published the other day in American newspapers was sent out by M. Berthelot of the French Foreign Office, in almost exactly to same form from the French embassy in Washington to the State Department six weeks ago. It is, therefore, new to the American public in that form, but not, I am reliably informed, to the State Department.

BOILERMAKER SHOT IN HIP WHEN HE REFUSES TO MOVE ON Electrical Shop Proprietor Says He Fired Shotgun When Man Drew Knife.

Charles Aubuchon, 21 years old, a boilermaker, 404 Gratiot street, was shot in the left hip last night by Harry Dawson, proprietor of an electrical shop at 1120 South Fourth street, in an altercation arising from an order to "move on."

Dawson told the police that Aubuchon came into his place at about 6:45 o'clock last night, and that he ordered him out because of disagreeable conduct. When Aubuchon drew his knife, Dawson said, he took up his shotgun and shot him. The injured man was taken to city hospital.

Dawson was released on bond.

SUGAR RAISERS CAN'T AGREE ON RESTRICTIONS

Java Planters Refuse to Curtail Production, and Cuba Follows Suit.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. — Sugar-raising countries outside of Europe, particularly Cuba and Java, are generally blamed here for the failure of the projected conference among sugar producers because of the impossibility of obtaining an agreement with them on restricted outputs.

Representatives of the sugar industry in Germany, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia yesterday decided to cancel the international conference which had been called for next month.

The Amsterdam negotiations of November, 1927, are stated clearly to have established that Java planters would refuse to entertain restrictions, and the Cuban tentative proposal to reduce production, which hinges on the Javanese attitude, also came to naught.

Yesterday's conference was attended by 25 producers, including five Poles, two Szechs and one Dutchman. The Germans and the Poles made efforts to arrive at least at some sort of an agreement to raise consumption and to regulate exports, but the Czechs moved "that negotiations cease forthwith on the proposal for next month's international conference. The motion was accepted after lengthy debate, during which the Czechs were accused of dumping on the German market.

Last year's Berlin convention fixing the joint exports of Germany, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia at 1,150,000 tons, therefore lapses automatically, and all that the conference achieved was said to be that the next international conference, if and when called, will find the European industries in closer agreement.

GUESTS OF 50 YEARS AGO TO ATTEND BALL

Survivors of First Veiled Prophet Affair to Be Entertained This Year.

The Veiled Prophet, at his fiftieth anniversary ball in the Coliseum, Oct. 3, will see several of the "old faces that he shook hands with" at his first appearance in 1878.

A request was sent out lately that surviving guests of the first ball should communicate with the Prophet. A number of them have responded. Plans for special entertainment of these persons at the coming ball are being made.

Paul Robyn, insurance man, writes that he was at the first ball, and that he remembers also the first parade, illuminated by torches carried by Negro youths. He recalls that at one of the early balls—he is not sure it was the first—a woman guest, stopping at the Southern Hotel, returned there three times in the course of the evening to change her costume.

George W. Kriegesman, editor of the Webster Groves News-Times, writes that as a boy of 12 he viewed the first parade and later the ball.

Was Prophet's Quadrille Partner.

Mrs. James T. Whittaker, formerly Miss Virginia Joy, said to have been the Prophet's quadrille partner at the first ball, has written from Massachusetts to the committee. A queen was not chosen until 1894.

Mrs. Robert M. Wilson of Hotel Avalon writes: "With my husband I attended the first ball. Gas lights cast a brilliant glow over the ballroom at the Merchants' Exchange. With a fanfare of music, the Prophet entered, followed by a procession of masked attendants. The dress I wore was indicative of the style of that period. It was of heavy white corded silk. The tight-fitting bodice and sleeves were draped with Duchess lace. The full straight skirt touched the floor and ended in a flowing train."

Mrs. James King, 4393 West Pine boulevard, whose father, Michael McEnnis, was once president of the Merchants' Exchange, attended the first ball and 30 subsequent ones.

On First Reception Committee.

Francis D. Healy, 4514 Olive street, writes that he was a member of the first reception committee for the Veiled Prophet. "As a lad of 17," he writes, "I had the honor of being special courier to the men who organized the ball. A badge 'Reception Committee' was pinned on my lapel. The night of the first Veiled Prophet ball remains the most memorable event of my youth."

"Escorted by my late uncle, Judge Horatio D. Wood, I attended the first Veiled Prophet Ball," says Mrs. Laura Lake, 1925 Hodiamont avenue.

Mrs. Walter B. Watson, then Miss Fannie S. Jones, returned from Kentucky to St. Louis for the express purpose of attending the first Veiled Prophet Ball. Her father was Judge William C. Jones of the Criminal Court.

Samuel Leathe, 3855 DeTonty street, attended the first ball with a friend and his two sisters.

NEW GERMAN HOUSE CORNERSTONE PLACED

Parade Precedes Exercises on Site of $300,000 Project at 2345 Lafayette.

Flags fluttered, a band played, a male chorus sang German songs as several hundred members of the German-American community gathered yesterday afternoon to lay the cornerstone of the $300,000 German House at 2345 Lafayette avenue.

This is to be a popular institution, to hold the meeting and recreation halls of the numerous German societies of the city, a German theater seating 1500 persons, bowling alleys, restaurants and the like. It is being financed entirely by the sale of stock, largely to those persons most interested in the project. Ground was broken on May 21, with the three visiting flyers of the trans-Atlantic airplane Bremen, Von Huenefeld, Koehl and Fitzmaurice, participating.

Now the concrete foundations have been completed and forms have been erected on the first level. The cornerstone, containing records of the organization, copies of newspapers having accounts of its progress and pictures of the Bremen flyers, was placed in the lower part of the facade.

Parade Opens Festivities.

The festivities began with a parade of German society members from nearby Lafayette Park, led by a brass band. In the mass of flags at the head of the column were the American banner, the historic "'48 flag," the old German imperial flag and the banners of various local organizations. The "'48 flag," consisting of stripes of black, red and gold, dates from the German revolution 80 years ago and its colors are the same as the present emblem of the republic. It and the imperial flag are relics of the early days of the societies.

After a prayer by the Rev. Carl Bleibtreu of Carondelet Evangelical Church and a song by the male chorus, Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the Chamber of Commerce, addressed the throng.

Weisenburger praised the house for its dedication to "noble ideas of citizenship," advancement of health and perpetuation of Teutonic culture. Then F. Ernest Cramer, president of German House and chairman of the day, placed the box of records in tse stone and Weisenburger laid the stone in place, while the band played.

Kiel Reports on Finances.

Former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, chairman of the German House Finance Committee, who resides around the corner, described the value of the establishment to the community and its place in teaching good citizenship. He related that $255,000 of the needed fund had been raised, but that $45,000 more in stock must be sold; there is no mortgage, he emphasized.

Dr. Georg Ahrens, German Consul, showed the audience a postcard picture of Aviator Von Huenefeld which he had recently received and said: "Just as the sun is shining over the festival today, so may the friendship between our two dear peoples shine over this house forever." In conclusion, John Toensfeldt, honorary president of German House, suggested that the place should be a means of converting German immigrants at the earliest moment to American citizenship.

BOOK SEIZED IN PHILADELPHIA RAID LISTS BRIBES TO POLICE

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—The special grand jury investigating gang murders, bootlegging and police bribery in this city probably will go on until after the new year, John Monaghan, District Attorney, said today. Sensational as have been some of the disclosures heretofore, he said, he had reason to believe he had uncovered only a small part of the "scandalous conditions."

At the same time he disclosed that Samuel O. Wynne, Federal Prohibition Administrator for Eastern Pennsylvania, turned over to him today a black book taken when a 75-gallon still was seized in South Philadelphia. The book contained entries showing that bribes were paid to the Captain, the district detectives and to patrolmen in whose territory the still was operated.

"This Captain, and his subordinates whose names are mentioned in the black book, will be summoned before the grand jury," Monaghan said.

Speaking of the length of time the investigation is likely to continue, the District Attorney said:

"I never tackled a more gigantic task, but I don't intend to stop. The so-called 'higher-ups' won't stop me, notwithstanding bootleg propaganda to the contrary."

MOSES TO DEBATE HARRISON

By the Associated Press.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 22.—Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire announced today that he would debate with Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi in New York City Oct. 14 on the subject, "Hoover and Smith." He said the debate would be broadcast.

Dr. Hildreth in Senatorial Race.

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 22.—Dr. A. G. Hildreth of Macon, was placed on the Republican ticket as Senatorial candidate from the Ninth District at a meeting of the Senatorial Committee today. He now is Senator from the Ninth District but he declined to enter his name in the primary race. Dr. Hildreth said he would accept the candidacy.

ADMITS $450,000 FRAUD

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 22.—George W. Forrester, Atlanta business man, pleaded guilty to two charges of larceny after trust and one charge of cheating and swindling the Superior Court today and was sentenced to serve from three to 11 years in prison on the three cases.

Forrester, who is alleged by creditors' attorneys to have liabilities of $450,000 and practically no assets, was indicted yesterday and pleaded guilty today. The charges involved use of money turned over to him for investment.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 22.—Extradition of J. E. Hardison from St. Louis to Kay County, Ok., on a charge of forgery of a check for $150 was ordered today by Gov Baker upon a requisition from the Governor of Oklahoma. The Governor issued a requisition on Oklahoma for extradition of [illegible] Hockerville.

CORN SUFFERS SHARP DROP; WHEAT WEAKENS

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 22.—A reaction in grain prices today carried wheat and corn lower here. December wheat, which closed yesterday at $1.18⅝, was down to $1.17⅞ and September wheat was ½c lower.

September corn was not active locally but for December corn closed 1¾c lower, and Cash corn was 5c to 7c lower and Cash oats was steady to 1c higher for cash wheat and steady for hard. Oats were soft and steady.

Early grain prices were irregular here. After opening ⅛c lower at $1.18, December wheat went as high as $1.19⅜ for a gain of 1¾c and then declined to a new low below yesterday's close. September corn was lower from the start and December corn was 2¾c down at 77⅜c. Subsequently it fell 5c down.

The Liverpool market closed strong with gains of 2¾c for October and March wheat and 1¾c for December wheat.

Local wheat receipts which were 176 cars, compared with 170,800 a year ago, 400 bushels, compared with 107,800 a year ago, in the week ended 84 cars local and 42 through. Corn receipts, which were 163,800 bushels, compared with 33,600 a week ago and 30,800 a year ago, included 30 cars local and 24 through. Oats receipts, which were 70,000 bushels, compared with 40,000 bushels a week ago and 56,000 a year ago, included 53 cars local and 2 through. Hay receipts were 12 cars local and 3 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators amounted to 4,103,400 bushels of wheat, 95,967 bu of corn and 138,188 bu of oats. Grain stocks comprised 137,033 bu of No. 2 red winter wheat, 670,645 bu of No. 1 red winter wheat, 1,351,791 bu of No. 2 and 3 red winter wheat, 1495 bu of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 2,500 bu of No. 2 yellow corn, 58,285 bu of No. 3 yellow corn, 8027 bu of No. 4 yellow corn, 8027 bu of No. 2 white corn, 9824 bu of No. 3 white corn, 2 bu of No. 2 white oats, 62,938 bu of No. 3 white oats.

In the cash grain market Saturday, No. 2 red winter was steady and No. 3c were 2 cents up. Offerings were light, and the demand, although rather narrow, was sufficient for a close clearance. Hard wheat was possibly 1 and 1½ cent dearer. Milling buyers bought No. 2 Hard late at 1c over bought Nebraska No. 2 Hard at $1.17½. Corn $1.18⅛ and No. 3 white oats.

There was a good demand for the cash grain offered locally and the receipts were creased receipts and the firm September contracts, hiding were light, and the offerings cleared closely. Mills, industries and shippers bought No. 2 corn. Oats were steady to ½c higher. Demand on local account was fair, but shippers were small buyers.

BIG WHEAT GAIN CANCELED, CORN LOWER, AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Wildness of price fluctuations went hand in hand today with a big volume of trading in grain. Wheat scored a sudden fresh advance to 6c above yesterday's lowest figures, but efforts to realize profits gave the market an upset toward the last. The outstanding new factor which hoisted wheat values temporarily was heavy buying on the part of millers. Corn made a sneer drop of nearly 8c a bushel in the absence of any aggressive support.

Closing quotations on wheat were higher everywhere at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜c down, corn at 1¼c to 7⅞c decline, oats varying from ⅛c setback to ⅛c advance, and provisions unchanged to 20c off.

At first, the wheat market displayed hesitancy, being affected by Liverpool quotations, which failed to reflect fully the sharp upturns in price that had been scored yesterday on this side of the Atlantic. Soon, however, word went around that milling interests were buying on a large scale both here and at Minneapolis. Immediately the market shot skyward. Chicago December delivery soaring until it had surpassed any previous level of prices reached since July 31 last.

Contributing impetus to the rapid ascent of the wheat market was news that 1,500,000 bu of Canadian wheat had been bought overnight for shipment to the Orient. Besides, arrivals of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth were continuing to dwindle notwithstanding recent prediction of an increase at the end of this week. Receipts today at the two terminals named totaled only 1104 cars, against 1530 cars a week ago and 1606 cars on the corresponding date last year. Many traders construed this circumstance as additional proof that farmers were holding wheat back wholesale.

Sensational weakness which meanwhile had developed in the corn market let to a rush of profit-taking sales in wheat as the day drew to an end. Reactions that ensued in wheat values were emphasized by persistent slackness of European demand for wheat from North America. Furthermore, country deliveries of wheat in Canada were a scene of record proportions.

Disclosure that the September delivery of corn was minus the active backing of bull leaders served as a signal for miscellaneous selling that forced into operation a number of standing orders to close out various buying and thus put a stop to looser. Ideal weather conditions and liberal receipts in Chicago, 202 cars today, were also a bearish influence.

Frosts last night and more expected tonight were practically ignored as threatening no serious damage to the new corn crop at this stage of the season. Oats went higher early with wheat, but reacted.

Cows steady, bulls 25c lower, stocker and feeder steers 15 to 25 cents off and veals 25c lower. Steer top $17.75, bulk $12.75 to $16.75. Top heifers $16.25, top cows $12. Bologna bull top $9, stocker and feeder steers up to $12.75. Veal calves closed $17.75 top, other classes downward in proportion.

Hog receipts modest, market 75c to $1 lower; top $13.25, bulk of sales $13 to $13.20 pigs $9.50 to $12.50, sows $11 to $11.50.

Sheep receipts moderate, market weak to 25c lower, top lambs $14.25, bulk $13.50 to $14, culls $9.50, fat ewes $6.50 down.

Hog Review—Most of the past week's hog trade was characterized by lower and draggy affairs with a reaction late in the week which caused a part recovery of prices. Top at the stopping point of the decline was down to $13.50, while today's top was $12.80. However, as compared with a week ago, values are 50c to $1 lower, taking all classes. Lack of demand with continued receipts caused the break. Quality was fair to good. High top for the period was $13.25 with most desirable kinds for the week at $12.50 to $13. Order buyers continued to be the best outlet, with packers very limited operators.

Pigs and light lights bore the brunt of the decline, that class selling at the full decline each day. Packing sows held up fairly well early in the week, but dropped back after mid-week.

Medium and heavy hogs were scarce during the latter part of the week and that class was working to the top, while lighter lines were being discriminated against. Extreme heavies sold down to $11.90 at the week's low time.

CATTLE—Under heavy receipts here the current week the general trend was lower, all classes with the exception of cows closing considerably off. The run of Western grassers fell off in volume but natives increased sharply.

Native beef steers carried the biggest decline, strictly choice steers selling at $17 or better were 25c lower, most others 50c to 75c off and spots $1 under the previous week. Top reached $17.75 for one load of well-fatted steers, an equal of the year's best price. A few other loads sold from $17 to $17.40, bulk of supplies cashing from $12.75 to $16.75. Common killers too inferior in quality for stockers sold as low as the $8 row occasionally.

Kansas and Oklahoma grass steers ranged from $8.50 to $12.75 during the six-day period, with bulk cashing from $10 to $12.40. Market was mostly 50c lower for the week on this class, however, with slow demand featured toward the close.

Butcher yearlings, both mixed and heifers, lost 50c from the previous week's standing, selling exceedingly slow into the bargain. Top was $16.25 for straight heifers in carload lots, few choice kinds better than $15. Medium and grassy grades sold principally from $12 down, common kinds around $7.

Although canner cows declined early in the week there was a recovery of price made later on and closing deals were fairly steady for all kinds of cows. Top was $12 for best grades, a fair showing of sales in the $10 and $11 outmums. Bulls sold from $8 to $9.50, however. Canners and cutters bulked at $6 to $7.50, numerous deals in Monday's session as low as $5.85, on canners, however.

Bulls sold 25c lower for the week, demand continued fair, however. Beef and butcher animals sold from $9 upward, some light butcher animals reaching $11. Bolognas ranged from $8 to $9 with common and inferior bulls down to $7, occasionally $6.50.

Stocker and feeder steers encountered a 15c to 25c loss in applying the market strictly choice kinds, however. Top was $12.75, bulk selling from $9 to $11.75. Cows and heifers sold from $8 upward.

Veal calves fluctuated considerably in the week's trade, but on the close were only 25c lower, top at $17.75. Culls and cuts principally around $15 to $15.50, second cuts and heavies from $8 to $12. Common canner yearlings bulked at $6.85 to $7.

Sheep Review.

Receipts around the 11-market circuit were liberal the past week, but the local quota was lighter than in previous periods lately. Heavily fed offerings of the week caused price breaks and the local movement was influenced somewhat by these receipts. Yesterday's trade broke about 25c, but late in the week a strengthening took locally erased part of this decline and values today are 50c to $1 lower than last Saturday. Aged sheep remained steady throughout the week.

High top for the period was $14 to packers; $14.25 to butchers. Bulk of desirable lambs went to packers at $13.50 to $14, with common to fair kinds ranging from $10.50 to $13.50. Culls sold to packers at $6.50, to butchers at $10. Skins largely $7.

Aged sheep drifted along under a meager offering and prices were unchanged from day to day. Ewes selling top lots at $6.50 and cull sheep $1 to $3.50, largely $2 to $3.

Quotations—Slaughter stock: Good to choice ewe and wether lambs, $13.75 to $14; fair to good, $13 to $13.75; plain to fair, $10.50 to $12; culls and common, $8 to $10.50; skins, $6 to $8. Good to choice yearling wethers, $11 to $11.50; medium to good, $10 to $11; plain to fair, $9 to $10; cull and common, $7 to $8. Good to choice mutton ewes, $6 to $6.50; plain to good, $4 to $5; shippers and bucks, $3 to $3.50; canners, $1 to $2.

Horse and Mule Review—One of the heaviest range horse runs of the season has received here during the past week and quality was slightly better than the average shown in previous runs. Prices held to a steady basis. Native horses were largely of cheap grade, but sold about like previous weeks. There is a good trade for work horses and orders for better horses than have been available here for sometime past.

Good selling was encountered by cotton mules regardless of size if of good quality and broke. Miners, big mules and wagon mules also sold well, but farm mules, rough mules and smooth-mouthed kinds sold cheap, the usual fall slowness prevailing in trade for these classes. There are orders on hand now to be filled next week for above described mules and also an order for five-inch mules inches of 15.2, good ages, colors and broken.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"It is becoming clearer all the time that a stock market which got its impetus from cheap money does not propose now to give up on a show of dear funds. A rise in the charge on call funds to 9 per cent and a precipitous advance in 90-day time money to a new high since 1921 of 7½ per cent, certainly are events calculated to emphasize sufficiently the shrinking supply of money available for market uses. No ordinary market could have stood its ground against attack at so vulnerable a point. Yet in the face of advancing money rates the Coolidge-Mellon bull market rose to fresh peaks in history with the eager public apparently more confident than ever that the market at least is safe for a while.

Market followers have a way of fixing some date in their minds likely to mark a passing from safety to the danger zone. The present boldness is based partly on a general feeling that nothing can happen until after election.

Sees Ample Credit.

Just who will step in to buy stocks to prevent any serious setback previous to Nov. 6, in the event it becomes necessary to protect the public against a liquidating movement, is not entirely plain. Nevertheless the public can be excused for drawing such conclusions perhaps when so prominent an official as the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, speaking at Gary, Ind., on the general credit position, weaves into his remarks the statement that "many people in America seem to be more concerned about the present situation than the Federal Reserve System is." Gov. Young's remarks doubtless were intended as a rebuke to those who helped "build up a credit structure by resorting to the inverted pyramid principle" but the thunder in his warnings was softened by his apparent desire to assure the country there is "no cause for concern." He expects discounts to rise further but feels that if after January, 1929, the banks still owe the system a billion dollars the situation "will have been handled admirably."

No evidence will be found in the Federal Reserve system's weekly statements of a reversal in its firm money policy directed against the rapid expansion in credit for use in the stock market. And yet such inferences as those deliberately woven into Gov. Young's speech, coming at a time when the system has temporarily abandoned its aggressive action, do give the market the assurance it most seeks—that the credit reservoir still is ample. Dear rates for money do not worry speculators in an advancing market so long as money can be obtained at a price. It must nevertheless be significant that in the adjustment of the money market now in process tenders are shifting their funds from time portfolios to the call market. The banks no longer are anxious to put money out on time even at the prevailing attractive rates offered by borrowers.

Bonds on Lower Price Level.

They apparently realize not only the possibility of further advances but the still more serious possibility that a sudden withdrawal of funds held on call might become embarrassing. Doubtless the reluctance of the banks to lend funds over any great period reflects their desire to keep close to shore in the event it becomes necessary to get money back quickly to protect reserve positions.

The flow of new capital offerings continues substantially higher than during the summer months. In the face of stiffening rates for time money the money in bonds has risen. Dealers report a ready sale of new issues brought out on attractive yield levels but opinion in this field is sharply divided with regard to the underlying trend in bonds. It is plain that the success of recent issues rests on a recognition by underwriting houses of the fact that at least for the present a new price basis for bonds is here.

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.— Sales of fine broadcloths, voiles, ravon and cotton mixtures, and some of the fine combed cloths of a staple character were largest today, ebtable for delivery in the next three months. Print cloths and some other lines advanced a little. Raw silk was steady at Yokohama stocks there being reported at 24,650 bales. Silk crepes and velvets were most active in the cutting trades. Spring worsted dress goods lines will be opened by the American Woolen Co. on Tuesday. Burlaps showed a firmer tendency.

MOTOR ISSUES LEAD IN WEEK'S ACTIVE MARKET

Many New Highs Reached in General Advance—Commodity Prices Strengthen.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.— High call money rates provided stiff opposition to speculative operations for the advance in this week's stock market, but special issues continued to push forward into new high ground under the stimulus of pool operations and heavy public participation. Weak spots cropped out here and there, and some of the recent favorites, particularly in the amusement and airplane groups, fell back under the weight of profit taking.

Motors regained their place as market leaders in the closing days of the week. The rapid rise in General Motors was based on President Sloan's expectation of record-breaking earnings this year, and the hope held out for a stock dividend at the November meeting of directors. Chrysler, Packard, Hupp, Graham-Paige, Briggs, Murray, Electric Auto Lite and Kelsey-Hayes Wheel were among the other automotive issues to reach new 1928 high levels.

Commodity Markets Higher.

Prices in the general list show surprising steadiness in the face of the unfavorable credit situation. Call money mounted as high as 9 per cent on Thursday, and short term time loans were quoted at 7¼. Meanwhile, hope of further gold imports from Great Britain failed to materialize, although sterling exchange dropped to new low levels for the year.

Commodity markets also gathered strength after an early period of irregularity. Wheat closed several cents a bushel higher on less favorable South American crop reports. The rise in cotton was based on reports of storm damage and fears of frost before the crop is harvested.

Brokers' loans increased $55,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday, but the total is still below that reached just before the June break in prices. The ratio of Stock Exchange member loans to the aggregate quoted value of listed securities, as of Sept. 1, showed a small decrease as compared with the month before. No change was made in the New York and Chicago Federal Reserve rediscount rates.

Oils Get Speculative Interest.

Coppers continued to respond to the recent increase in red metal prices, and reports of new re discoveries by some of the leading producers. Speculation in the oils shifted to the low priced shares. Sinclair, Superior and several others moving into new high ground. Amusement shares fell back on realizing. Food issues presented several points of strength, notably National Dairy Products, Fleischman, Penick & Ford and the Purity Baking shares, all of which reached new high ground.

Popular steel shares ran into profit taking, but operations for the rise were successfully conducted in a few of the so-called independents and specialty steels, particularly Ludlum, tobacco, packing, mail order and chemical shares failed to participate to any great extent in the upward movement.

Rails were mixed with some selling developing in the Southern issues on reports of heavy storm damage. The latest car loadings statement made a favorable comparison with the same week last year, but was still below the corresponding period of 1926.

NUMEROUS ISSUES LOWER ON IRREGULAR CURB MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The curb market turned irregular in today's short session as a week-end profit-taking carried a number of issues lower. Oils displayed group strength in sympathy with the upturn in that group on the "big board," and a few industrials and specialties were pushed into new high territory.

Safeway Stores sold up 20 points to a new peak at 730, and Sanitary Grocéries mounted 7½ points to a new top at 42½. Oakes Products A and B shares mounted 3 and 6 points to new highs and Checker Cab touched a new top at 97¾ up 2½ points. Deere increased by 8 points while Campbell Wyant Doehler Die Casting, Hall Lamp, A. C. Horn and Marconi "B" reached new high levels. Industrial Rayon went to a new high at 143, but later sagged to 137 on realizing. Crocker-Wheeler dropped 4 and Swedish-American Investment 5 points on profit-taking, and Atlas Portland Cement, Bliss & Co., Lakey Foundry, Newton Steel and Bancitaly were in supply.

In the oils, Imperial of Canada went to a new high at 80½ in buying inspired by rumors of a stock split up, then sagged on realizing. Gulf, Creole, Prairie and Standard of Indiana were strong, while Humble fell more than a point.

In the mines, New Cornelia was firm.

Utilities were irregular. Electric Bond and share, Electric Investors and United Light and Power issues easing, while Empire jumped more than 2 points, and Penn-Ohio Edison issues were strong.

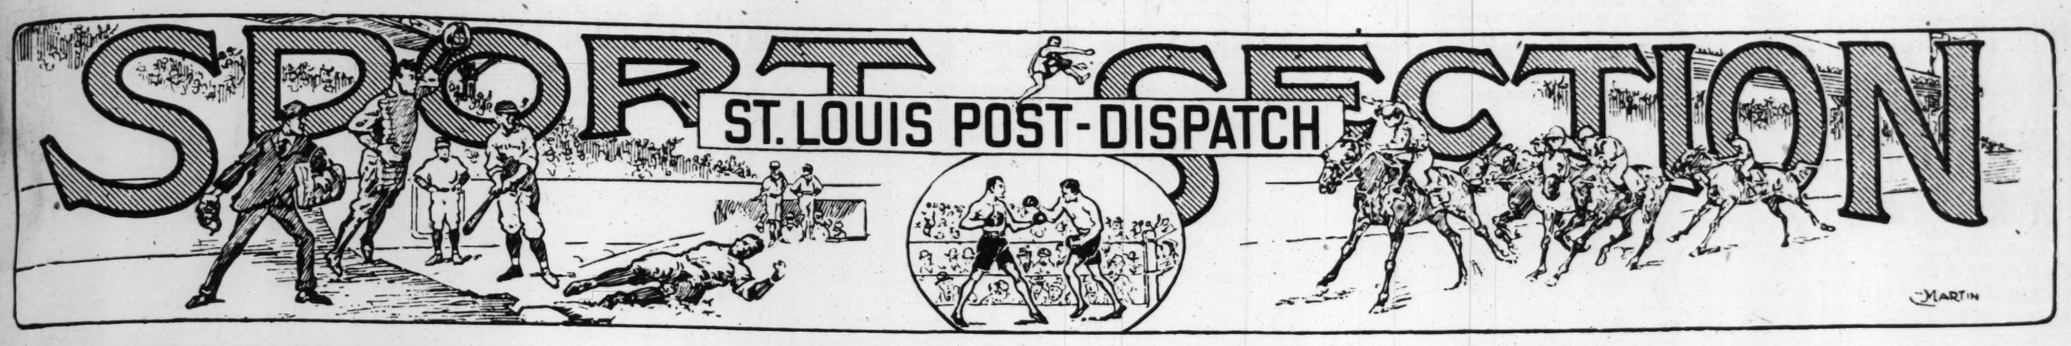
TODT'S TWO HOME RUNS HELP RED SOX BEAT BROWNS, 5-3 (SEE PAGE 3S)



PART TWO. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 23, 1928. PAGES 1—6S

SUN BEAU WINS $20,000 POTOMAC STAKES

VICTORIAN, AT ODDS ON, IS SECOND BY LENGTH

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Sept. 22.—The Harry Payne Whitney crack, Victorian, was soundly beaten in the running of the $20,000 added Potomac Handicap, this afternoon, when Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau beat him out a length in the big feature race on the program.

It was a brilliant crowd that turned out to witness the running of this feature, some 25,000 making the trip from Baltimore and Philadelphia to witness the race.

Sun Beau's victory was a clean cut one, and Victorian had no excuses to offer. Breaking in front and out-running his opposition to the first turn, Victorian had a lead of a length and a half entering the back stretch. Sun Beau was sixth.

Going to the half-mile post, Craigmyle found an opening near to the inside rail and, rushing Sun Beau through, he was on even terms with Victorian at the middle of the back stretch. Sun Beau was going strong, full of run and rounding the far turn, shook off Victorian and drew away, leading for the remainder of the trip.

The pace was very fast considering that the track was not at its best. The fractional time was :23, :47 2-5; 1:12, 1:39 and the full distance, a mile and a sixteenth in 1:46. The stakes had a net value of $18,500, with Victorian a 2 to 5 favorite.

Nella R., a chestnut filly that races for the Linton Farm, showed a smart performance when she came from behind in the stretch run to beat Beau Wrack in the first race. A field of 15 went to the post in this race and in the early running Autumn Bloom and Beau Wrack alternated in making the pace. Entering the home stretch, Beau Wrack looked to have his field beaten, but in the final furlong he weakened under punishment and Nella R. out-lasted him to win going away by a length under a drive.

A terrible stretch duel came with the running of the Bay View Purse, and the Whitney Stable furnished the winner in Zoom, which came from behind to get up in the last 50 yards to beat Neddie by half a length. There were nine starters and Zoom and Beacon Hill were coupled as the Whitney entry. Neddie and Beacon Hill out-footing the others from the break, ran like a team the entire trip, but in the final drive both weakened.

Oh Susanna, which beat a good field here opening day, came back with another good performance when she beat a band of fast sprinters in the running of the Blackstone Purse. Ridden by W. Garner and setting a rapid pace from the start, Oh Susanna in a furious finish, just latsted to win by a nose from Greenock. The latter was a scant two lengths in front of Aucilla.

The Autumn Handicap proved rather an easy victory for J. N. Camden's Hydromel, ridden by W. Garner. Hydromel moved into an easy lead in the stretch and Quiet Recreation by three and a half lengths.

Miss Wills Breaks Even With Brown and Triumphs in Doubles

By Jack Alexander.

One of those action pictures that have a way of recurring in the imagination — like Grange's runs for touchdowns against Penn in 1925 or the bobbing chin straps of West Pointers on dress parade—had its first showing in St. Louis yesterday when Helen Wills gave an exhibition on the Triple A courts of the skill and personality that have made her a world champion woman tennis player and an applauded figure wherever tennis is popular.

Miss Wills divided two sets with Wray Brown, St. Louis' district champion, losing 6—2 and winning 9—7, and, paired with Ted Drewes, won a set of doubles from Brown and Junior Boehmer, 6—3. This afternoon's program will be much the same, a two-set match between Miss Wills and Wray Brown opening the program at 2:30 o'clock, and a doubles exhibition closing it with the women's champion paired with Teddy Eggmann, former Cornell tennis captain, against Brown and Karl Hodge.

Crowd Cheers Champion.

More than 2000 persons packed the stands yesterday and cheered the champion lustily as she smote the ball hip and thigh from the baseline. The visitor's personality instantly won the crowd and after the first service, there wasn't a Brown rooter in the stands. Even when Wray dropped his deadly chop shots a foot on the hither side of the net and Miss Wills almost broke her neck sprinting to get them—unsuccessfully, usually—the applause which followed was more in response to Miss Wills' smiling exclamation of dismay than in appreciation of Brown's splendidly timed and executed "cut" shots.

Miss Wills was, in fact, unable to cope with this tantalizing stroke in the first set. She played her usual baseline game, driving forehand and backhand to the corners of Brown's court. Brown elected to play the same sort of game and their driving was about equal, except that the girl's backhand shots had considerably more force. But from Brown's backhand, and occasionally from his forehand, came now and then that masterfully wrought "drop" shot and Miss Wills, playing far to the back of the court, was seldom able to touch it. The "pace" which Brown habitually used bothered her throughout the set and caused her to make frequent errors and Brown won rather easily, 6—2.

Miss Wills Takes Second Set.

Similar tactics proved a handicap for Miss Wills in the second set and soon Brown had a 3—1 lead. Again he moved up to 5—3 and then Miss Wills decided on a change of tactics. Instead of driving the ball with all her force she lobbed most of her shots. The change caught Brown off balance and caused him to commit mistakes. He strove to end the set by going to the net, but Miss Wills passed him along the alleys and squared matters at 6-all. From there out the set proved to be a slam-bang affair, both players using the most diversified game they knew, rushing the net, and flicking the chalk lines with placements. They alternated at winning single games until the score stood 7—7, when Miss Wills spurted, won two in a row and took the set.

In the first set Brown scored 40 points to Miss Wills' 33, and in the second Miss Wills scored 54 to Brown's 50.

Victor in Doubles Play.

Handicapped by lack of teamwork, both doubles teams played raggedly, Miss Wills and Drewes winning, 6—3. In a preliminary, Warren Davis, boys' champion, defeated Junior Poelker, 6—1.

Yesterday's affair was a sell-out and only a few seats are left for today. Prices range from $1 to $2.50.

Mertz Brothers In Title Final

The Mertz brothers, Bill and Harvey, will meet in the final of the St. Clair Country Club golf championship tournament today as a result of their victories in the semifinals yesterday.

Bill Mertz defeated M. Whipple in a hard-fought match, 2 and 1, while Harvey had an easier time, winning from Gerald Smith by default.

HUGGINS SENDS OUT S. O. S. FOR AL SHEALY, DISCARDED PITCHER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Al Shealy, right-handed pitcher sent to St. Paul by the Yankees in the Heimach deal, will rejoin the champions at Cleveland tomorrow, Miller Huggins announced here tonight before boarding a train for the Ohio city. The Saints already have clinched fourth place in the American Association, and are willing for Shealy to return Huggins added.

YANKS, BEATEN BY WHITE SOX, RETAIN LEAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Alphonse Thomas pitched masterful ball today to score the first victory of his big League career over the Yankees by 5 to 2. The pennant race was not affected by the result, as the Athletics were defeated in Detroit, 5 to 4, enabling the leading Yankees to retain their margin of two full games.

Henry Johnson essayed the box duties for the champions, but gave way under a four-run fusillade in the fourth. He was followed in turn by Fred Heimach, Myles Thomas and George Pipgras. The White Sox could do nothing with the southpaw slants of Heimach, but quickly pounced upon Myles Thomas after the St. Paul southpaw had given way to a pinch batsman in the eighth. Pipgras limited the damage to one run.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Cardinals had three great opportunities to take a commanding over the Giants this afternoon in the third game of the series, but they were unable to deliver the killing punch and McGraw's hordes, pounding Clarence Mitchell and Bill Sherdel for fifteen hits, cut the league leaders' first-place margin to one game by scoring a victory, 8 to 5.

McKechnie's warriors waged a courageous fight in the early innings. They overcame a two-run lead that Welsh's single and Reese's home run gave the Giants in the first inning. They tied the score at three-three in the fourth and knocked out Fred Fitzsimmons and took a two-run lead in the fifth. But they had a chance to clinch a victory in those two innings and again in the sixth and they failed. They scored three runs in three innings when they might have scored two or three times that many.

It was not all a story of Cardinal failure. There was brilliant fielding by the Giants, two double plays that crushed threatening St. Louis rallies, and there was brilliant relief pitching by Carl Hubbell, a 24-year-old left-hander who spent the spring and early summer months with the Beaumont club, with no idea that he would be called by the Giants to help them down the stretch, perhaps to a pennant.

A Life-Saver for McGraw.

McGraw started this hectic season with three promising left-handers in Walker, Faulkner and Henry. When they all faltered, McGraw sent for Hubbell and if the Giants win the pennant, the young man will have played an important part in the triumphant drive.

Hubbell pitched a full game on Thursday. He opposed Grover Cleveland Alexander, who was a great pitcher when Hubbell was in swaddling clothes. He beat Alexander, thanks to some lucky breaks and then, with only a day's rest, he answered McGraw's call this afternoon.

The bases were filled with none out and the score was tied at 3—3 when Hubbell was summoned from the bull pen in the fifth inning. Jim Bottomley nicked the youngster for a single to center, driving two runs over the plate.

This gave the Cardinals a lead, but that was the end of the St. Louis scoring for the afternoon. Hubbell struck out the dangerous Chick Hafey, who previously had made two slashing doubles, and the frail-looking left-hander then pitched so craftily to George Harper that the home-run hero of Thursday hit into a double play.

Four more hits the League leaders made off Hubbell, but they were all singles and so well scattered that thereafter no Cardinal advanced further than second base.

The Early Scoring.

After the Welsh single and the Andy Reese home run had put the Giants two runs ahead in the first, Bottomley started the second inning with a line triple to left center and scored when Hafey slashed a double past Lindstrom. Harper's fly to Welsh sent Hafey to third and Chick scored when Jimmy Wilson bounced a single to center.

Welsh, one of the villains of the afternoon, walked to start the third inning. Reese's single to right sent Jimmy to third and he scored on Mann's sacrifice fly to Douthit.

Fitzsimmons turned back the Cardinals in order in the third, but in the fourth he was in grave trouble. With one out, Hafey doubled to left, Harper walked and Wilson beat out a grounder to Jackson, filling the bases.

Here was the first big opportunity for the Red Birds and their first failure. Hafey scored while Jackson was throwing out Maranville on a grounder which caromed off Fitzsimmons' glove, but that was all, as Mitchell filed to Welsh.

Wasted Opportunities.

Then came the fifth inning and the Cardinals' finest opportunity to put the contest in the bag to crack the morale of the Giants, who were beginning to wilt under the St. Louis attack.

Douthit drew a pass and High singled to left. Fitzsimmons thought Frisch was going to bunt and trying to pitch outside and low to him, issued another pass, filling the bases.

McGraw didn't hesitate. Fitzsimmons was waved from the picture and Hubbell was summoned.

PENNANT IFS

If the Cardinals win five and lose three of their remaining games and finish with 94 victories and 60 defeats, the Giants must win seven of their eight games to beat them out of the pennant.

If the Cardinals travel at a .500 clip (win four and lose four), the Giants will have to play at the following pace to take first place and win the pennant:

CARDINALS OF 1928 AS GOOD IN SOME DEPARTMENTS AS 1926 WINNERS

THREE PITCHERS AND 3 REGULARS MAY PLAY AGAIN IN WORLD SERIES

1926 AND 1928 MARKS OF CARDS WHO PLAYED IN THE WORLD SERIES

By Herman Wecke.

If the Cardinals win the 1928 National League pennant and again represent the circuit in the world series, only three athletes who were regarded as regulars in 1926 will again face the American League entry. These players are Jim Bottomley, Taylor Douthit and Chick Hafey.

For pitchers, however, it is probable that Bill McKechnie, if his team wins the honor, will depend on the same men Rogers Hornsby used in the year of St. Louis' first triumph, 1926. The main cogs, this season, as in 1926, are Bill Sherdel, Jess Haines and Grover Alexander.

A comparison of the athletes who will represent St. Louis this season, providing that the Cardinals win, on figures for 1926 and 1928 bring out some interesting facts. They show that in a few departments the Cardinals will be as good as under Hornsby.

Pitchers Have Better Records.

First, consider the pitchers, the backbone of any club. The figures show that Jess Haines, Bill Sherdel and Grover Alexander have won and lost records either as good or better than in 1926. This despite the two added campaigns of service.

Haines had a 13-4 mark in 1926 and this season owns 17-8. Sherdel is far ahead with 18-9 for 1928, as compared to 16-12. Alexander's figure of 15-8 puts him in front of his 12-10 under Hornsby. The work of Old Pete in 1926, however, can be discounted in that he lost a great many of his games while with the Cubs and then did his greatest work for Hornsby. One thing, however—Alexander has been batted harder this season than he was in 1926. The efficiency records of the other are about the same.

One 1926 regular, however, has fallen down badly. This is Flint Rhem. Under Hornsby, Rhem was the club's leading winner, with a 20-7 record. Now however, his mark is 11-8. Another who has slipped is Art Reinhart, who had a 10-5 mark in 1926, against one of 4-6 for this season.

High-Class Relief Hurlers.

As regards relief twirlers, it is probable that the Cardinal pitching staff this year is better fortified than the one Hornsby owned. Not only that, McKechnie has one other regular who probably will see service. This is Clarence Mitchell, veteran left-hander, who has won eight games and dropped a like number.

For first aid, McKechnie will be able to call on Syl Johnson, Fred Frankhouse and Hal Haid. They all compare favorably with Herman Bell, Vic Keen and Bill Hallahan, who broke into the 1926 series in that hectic game at Sportsman's Park, in which Babe Ruth hit three homers and established no fewer than nine new records.

The 1928 Infield.

And now for the regulars.

There is, for instance, Jim Bottomley at first base. Bottomley was a great player in 1926, but this season he is batting 37 points better than he did under Hornsby, and he is fielding just as well. And at driving in runs, Sunny Jim is just as good, inasmuch as he now is leading the National League in this feature. Bottomley's batting mark this season is .335, as compared to .298 while battling for Hornsby. Thus the team is as strong here as in the first world series.

At second base there will be Frank Frisch instead of Rogers Hornsby. The campaign of 1928, one of injuries, was a bad one for Hornsby in that he hit but .317. That, however, is better than Frisch's present figure of .298. In fielding, they are about on a par, with a slight edge in favor of Frisch, because of his ability to go back to grab pop flies.

Third base is a position at which the Cardinals are not so well fortified. The Lester Bell of 1926 was a great player, who batted .325 and fielded sensationally. Wattie Holm and Andy High have not done as well. Holm is hitting .270, as compared to his .285 under Hornsby, while High's figure is .288. Neither has fielded as well as Bell did when he aided the Cardinals in the pennant and world series victory.

Then at shortstop, Tommy Thevenow was a real sensation in 1926, in spite of his .255 batting average. Tommy, it will be remembered, batted better than .400 in the games with the Yankees. But Tommy this season is a bench warmer, while the ancient Rabbit Maranville is playing between second and third. But Maranville is not as good as the Thevenow of 1926.

Thus the Cardinals of 1928 have lost strength at two positions, are equal at another and have picked up at one—first base.

Hafey and Douthit Improved.

In the outfield, Chick Hafey is a better player. He is hitting .329 as compared to .271. He has developed into a real slugger, one of the most dangerous batters on the St. Louis club.

Taylor Douthit, because of his experience, is a better man than he was in 1926, despite the fact that lately he has been in a batting slump. Thus at these two positions, the Cardinals seem to be stronger, if anything.

But in right field, there is no Billy Southworth. Southworth was a real terror in the pinch. He batted .320 and a majority of those smashes came when needed most. For this place, McKechnie will have to rely on George Harper, with a .295 swat mark, or Ernie Orsatti, who is clubbing .333. Both have played good ball; have come through with timely smashes, but they do not rate with Southworth.

Weaker Behind Bat.

Behind the bat is another position where the Cardinals of this year suffer. It was in 1926 that Bob O'Farrell had his greatest season. He missed but few innings. He was chosen the most valuable player in the league. He batted .293; he handled pitchers in perfect style. In fact, he was the main cog.

Jimmy Wilson and Earl Smith are on hand now. Wilson is a good catcher, but he's no O'Farrell of 1926. Catchers like the O'Farrell of that campaign come about once in 10 years. Earl Smith is too slow and he has been found wanting in previous title series, so it is probable that Wilson would be called upon to do all the work behind the plate.

In regard to team batting, the Cardinal team of today is just about on a par with 1926, when the swat figure was .286 for the season as compared to .284 this year.

Cards' Lead Cut to One Game When Giants Win

Bottomley delivered a single to center that looked for the moment like the $500,000 hit of the season. Douthit and High scampered home and Frisch romped to third. Two runs ahead, runners on first and third and still nobody out. It certainly appeared to be the time for the coup de grace. But Hafey could not connect with Hubbell's shoots and struck out and Hubbell grabbed Harper's tap and started a double play, with Jackson pivoting at second.

Mitchell Also Departs.

Mitchell also departed in the fifth, but the Giants gave a convincing demonstration of how to take advantage of opportunity and pushed two runs over the plate, to tie the count.

When Welsh singled to center and Reese put him on second with a one-bagger to right, Sherdel was called from the bullpen. Mann worked his string to 3 and 2 and with the runners in full flight, High was unable to turn Leslie's grounder into a double play or force out and had to throw the runner out at first.

Lindstrom hit a slow bounder to Sherdel's right and Sherry, hustling after the ball, fumbled it a bit and Welsh scored, Reese reached third and Lindstrom was credited with a single. Hogan then bounced a grounder off Sherdel's glove to Frisch and while Frank was making the throw to first, Reese crossed the plate with the tying run.

In the sixth came the Cardinals' third and final opportunity to pile up a lead. Wilson led off with a single to left and stopped at second when Maranville pulled a one-bagger to the same field. Sherdel is one of the few good bunters on the Cardinal team, but in this pinch, when he tried to lay one down, he popped to Lindstrom and Douthit quickly ended the inning with a grounder to Lindstrom, who stepped on third and threw to Terry for a double play.

And Then Defeat.

A break in the Cardinal defense enabled the Giants to take the lead in the seventh. Reese led off with his fourth straight hit, a single to center, and after Mann had popped to Frisch, Lindstrom hit a grounder over second. Frisch missed his dive for the ball and when Douthit failed to pick up the leather, it rolled to the centerfield fence and Lindstrom followed Reese over the plate.

The in the eighth, Andy Cohen hit into the left field seats to produce the Gian's eighth run.

Pinch hitters were thrown into the battle after it was too late to do anything. Holm batted for Harper in the eighth and flied out and Ray Blades batted for Maranville in the eighth with Hafey on first and took a called third strike to end the inning. Pepper Martin batted for Sherdel in the ninth and struck out.

That was merely a dismal fadeout, however. The story of the game fas told in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings, when the Cardinals failed to open wide the portals to a pennant when opportunity knocked so persistently.

RED BIRD NOTES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.

Jess Haines will pitch for the Cardinals tomorrow in the first game of the series with the Dodgers. Jess won two games from the Phils in the recent series, giving them five hits in one and six in the other.

Jess Petty is due for the Dodgers.

That four-game series with Brooklyn will be no soft snap for the league leaders. Ol-Weeny, Petty and Vance probably will appear on the hill for Wilbert Robinson and they are hard to beat.

Reese's home run in the first inning was within inches of the foul pole between the first and second decks of the stand.

New York estimates of the attendances ran as high at 50,000 but they were too high. Thursday the crowd was announced as more than 50,000, but the Cardinals were paid for only 42,000. With that as a basis of estimate, today's crowd was about 35,000 strong.

Bottomley turned a good play in the third when he took Harper's throw and tagged Reese, who had overrun first on his single. Reese knocked Jim sprawling, but the Nokomis kid held the ball.

Lots of Work for Pitchers.

When Fitzsimmons was in trouble in the fifth, McGraw called on Hubbell, though the young left-hander pitched a tough game Thursday. McKechnie took this as a lesson and when Mitchell faltered in the same frame, Sherdel was called from the bullpen.

With Hubbell on first in the sixth, Botomley was drawn out of position by Welsh's grounder, but Frisch backed him up and a snap throw to Maranville forced Hubbell at second.

Previously Welsh had made two singles, drawn a walk and scored three runs.

High, Frisch and Bottomley grounded to Cohen in the seventh inning.

NEW YORK, Sept 22.—The New York Yankees today announced provisional conditions under which they now are accepting orders for world series tickets. They indicate a record capacity of 70,000 for the series.

Applications for approximately 25,000 reserved pasteboards will not be accepted unless accompanied by certified checks or money orders. In addition to the reserved seats, priced at $5.50 for the grand stand and $6.60 for boxes, there will be 25,000 unreserved grand stand tickets at $3 each and 20,000 bleacher tickets at $1 each to be sold starting at 10 a. m. each day of the series.

IRVIN TO COACH ST. LOUIS TEAM IN HOCKEY RACE

Alec Irvin, coach of a hockey team that won the Canadian Amateur Hockey championship four years in a row, and last year a referee in the American Hockey Association, has signed as coach for the St Louis Hockey Club for the coming season, according to announcement by F. D. McDonald of the St. Louis club yesterday.

Irvin will come to St. Louis from his home in Vancouver, Canada, about Nov. 1, to take charge of the squad that will represent St. Louis in the National Hockey Association. The league opening date has been set at Nov. 20.

A. IRVIN.

The new coach of the St. Louis team earned a wide reputation in hockey circles as a successful leader when he led the Vancouver Monarchs to the Canadian Amateur hockey championship in 1921-22-23 and 24. In those years Irvin's team carried off the Allen Cup, the most sought after trophy in Canadian amateur hockey. In 1926 Irvin coached the Hudson Bay team in Winnipeg, Canada.

Once Was Star Player.

Before entering the coaching game, Irvin was a hockey player of note, being a regular on the Vancouver and later the Calgary teams, but in the playing end of the game he did not approach his brother, Dick, who this season will be captain of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National League. Dick, known as the "Silver Fox," is considered as one of the outstanding hockey players in America.

Six cities will comprise the circuit of which St. Louis is a member. In addition to St Louis, the league will be composed of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Kansas City and Tulsa.

Each team will play 40 games, 20 at home and 20 on the road, making two complete trips around the circuit. The official schedule will be released next week.

Pittsburg Again in Hockey League.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Adoption of the schedule for the season 1928-29 and the announcement that Pittsburg would again have a major league hockey team featured the forenoon session of the meeting of the board of governors for the National Hocky League here today.

TIGERS BATTER WALBERG, BEAT ATHLETICS 5-4

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 22.—The pennant road became even more difficult for the tiring forces of Cornelius McGillicuddy here today when the Tigers shaded the old man's Athletics by 5 to 4 in the final game between the two teams this season. The victory not only gave Detroit two out of three from the contenders, but prevented the Macks from gaining on the Yankees, who held their lead of two games even though defeated by the White Sox in Chicago, 5 to 2.

The Tigers routed Rube Walberg in the very first inning with a four-run assault, and although they were able to do little against George Earnshaw through the rest of the game, the Athletics never managed to catch up.

Before the game Ty Cobb drew the applause of the multitude by practicing in right field. The 10,000 fans gave the retiring warrior an ovation as he made his last appearance in uniform in the city which claimed 22 of the 24 seasons of his baseball career. Ty ended up by not playing, although there were spots, it seemed, where he was the logical pinch batsman. He failed to take part in any of the three contests of the series.

JOHNNY EVERS JR. TO PLAY WITH GEORGETOWN

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Georgetown University's baseball team has sound reasons for planning its future strategy on the basis of an airtight infield for a Johnny Evers probably will hold down the keystone sack and it recalls to baseball fans memories of the famous Chicago Cub combination — Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance.

Young Evers, John J. Jr., enrolled in a pre-legal course at the Washington school. The sandy-haired youngster is something of a ball player already. For four years he played on the Troy (N. Y.) High School team. In his second and third years the nine played through to the semifinals of the Northeastern New York interscholastic championship.

HENNESSEY AND LOTT TO OPPOSE AUSTRALIANS IN DOUBLES FINAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—George Lott and John Hennessey, national doubles champion, went into the finals of the United States intersectional team championships today, but Hennessey once again was the victim of the jinx that has followed him since returning from Davis Cup competition.

Hennessey, who has failed to win an important singles match since Davis Cup play, had as his nemesis today young Sam Gilpin of Philadelphia, twenty-sixth ranking player and a former Drexall Institute net Ace. With no apparent regard for the reputation of the Indianapolis star, who ranks second among the nation's best, Gilpin swept through a straight set victory in the singles, 6—2, 6—4, on the Chicago Town and Tennis Club courts.

Going into the finals with Lott and Hennessey were the youngsters of the Australians' Davis Cup team, Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman.

The Australians played startling tennis to eliminate the Eastern Association team of Johnny Van Ryn, former Princeton player, and Gregory Mangin.

Hennessey's Collapse Stuns Crowd.

The sudden and complete collapse of Hennessey so dumbfounded the gallery that it overshadowed the brilliant work of Lott, of Chicago, who evened matters by defeating Frits Mercur of the Middle States team, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—2.

With the result of today's matches hinging on the doubles, Mercur and Gilpin fought gam

By Herman Wecke.

Danny MacFayden and Phil. Todt combined to send the Browns down to defeat in the final game of the series here yesterday afternoon. The score was 5 to 3 and the victory gave the Sox the edge on the series, two games to one.

As a result the teams finished the season's series with the Browns winning 13 and dropping nine decisions.

MacFayden did the pitching and Todt the batting in the final. MacFayden stopped the Browns with six hits, three of them coming in the last two rounds, and Todt did the batting, and how—

He had two home runs and drove in three markers. He made the first hit off young Ed. Strelecki, who pitched six hitless innings, and then he plastered Dick Coffman, St. Louis' relief pitcher, for a four-bagger.

Two of the Browns' tallies also were due to circuit smashes, hit by Heine Manush and Otis Brannon.

Some Tight Pitching.

For six innings, the contest was a pretty a hurling duel as has been seen here in some time. In those rounds, the Sox had failed to make a single hit off Strelecki, while but one batter, MacFayden, got a pass in the third, had even as much as reached first. The Brownies, against MacFayden were little better, being credited with but one rap, an infield smash by Mannush in the fourth. Several other men had reached first, but never did the Brownies threaten to tally.

It was a different story in the seventh. Phil Todt, St. Lou's boy, was first up. He made the first safety for the visitors and what a smash it was. It landed on top of the right field pavilion for a circuit wallop. Myer was retired on a fly.

Then the outburst started anew. Rothrock singled and promptly stole second. He pilfered third when Taitt walked. Regan then managed to score Rothrock, while Taitt got home when Gerber socked an ace into right.

Ashjorson, or Asby, then rapped into a double play to end the session with three runs.

Another Homer for Todt.

Mowley's men made two hits in their portion, but it did not good. Brannon again tested this young Sox's arm, trying to hike from first to third on a single, but he found the throw to Myer waiting for him.

Carrigan's heavy artillery swung into action again in the eighth, this time against Coffman, who had replaced Strelecki. MacFayden opened with a pop double to right and was sacrificed to third. Up came Mr. Todt. To show that his former in the previous round was not an accident, he slapped another out of the park, this time over towards right and the Sox had two more tallies.

ATHLETICS HERE TODAY; BLAEHOLDER IS DUE TO PITCH

Heine Manush's sock into the left pavilion produced the first tally for the home side in the eighth. It was the second hit in four attempts for the man who is trying to give St. Louis the American League swatting championship.

Mowley's men put on a storm in the ninth, when Brannon's home run, a pass to McGowan and McNeely's pinch double accounted for two runs, which just added to the individual records of the athletes and did not affect the club standings.

George Blaeholder, big right-hander, probably will draw the assignment to work against the second-place Athletics in the opener of the series here today. The Mackmen did not have an enjoyable stay in Detroit, but they have found the men of Howley the softest kind of picking this season.

What was probably the smallest Saturday crowd of the season, fewer than 2000 paying spectators turned out to see hostilities between the Browns and Sox in the final.

Bettencourt Behind Bat.

The rival managers went down in the bag and drew out some new tricks. Howley, for instance, introduced Larry Bettencourt as a catcher. Ie was the first time in his life that he had ever been behind the bat. At that he looked pretty good.

And then there was Carrigan. He sent Loepp to center and then there was a yow g cat her, who as a voter is Asbjorson, but who for baseball purposes will be known as Asby.

Because he can hit, Carrigan had to find a place for Rothrock, so he benched Kenny Williams and sent Rothrock to left. He proved as poor a fielder in the outfield as at short. He muffed an easy fly from Mannush in the first.

Gerber Shines in Field.

This Walter Gerber was a busy individual. He had eight chances in the first three rounds and a total of 11 for the passtime. That ancient covered plenty of territory, going to his left and right equal- well.

Folks started to situp and take notice of Strelecki's no-hit performance after six innings and commenced to cheer the young

Washington First and Second Elevens Play to Scoreless Tie

By Jerry Bernoudy.

Dr. Al Sharpe's Washington University football team got a taste of real action yesterday afternoon at Francis Field when the first and second teams played a 32-minute game which ended in a scoreless tie. Rough spots and plenty of them were in evidence, but considering the fact that the squad has been in training for only a week, the showing was quite satisfactory.

Neither team showed much offensive power, except in the last few minutes, when the varsity made a march which might have ended in a touchdown with a few more minutes of play. Only simple formations were tried by each team, however, and the lack of any great amount of work on interference allowed tacklers to slip through time and again, which a smooth working offense would have taken out. Only five first downs were made in the entire conflict, and all of these were made by the varsity. Forward passes were mostly inaccurate, but just before the game ended John Duncan flipped a straight one to Whitler for a 20-yard gain.

Both teams showed evidence of having been well drilled in fundamentals, and this was especially manifest in the tackling department. Most of the tackles yesterday were of the low, hard-hitting type which every coach likes to see. Hornsby, fullback on the second eleven, played a splendid defensive game, while Butz and Paris were getting their men for the regulars.

The most pleasing result of the encounter to the coaching staff was the fact that it showed an abundance of good reserve material in almost every position.

Laz Sommers, a letter man of two years ago, was a welcome addition to Coach Benson's wingmen. Sommers formerly played at guard or center, but he was used at a wing positon during a greater part of the game. Glazer, the only other letter man yet to return, is on his way home from Europe.

Classes will commence at the university tomorrow, so practice will be held only in the afternoon. In order to get in shape for the opening game with Westminster next Saturday, secret practice will be held every day this week until 5 o'clock. Visitors will be allowed on the field only after this hour.

Wagoner Place Team Defeats Memphis, 10-4

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 22.—In a well played baseball game today the Wagoner Place team, winners of the St. Louis Sunday School League defeated the La Belle Baptist team of Memphis by a score of 10 to 4.

The St. Louis team jumped into a two-run lead on a walked batsman, a single and a double by Breck. From this inning on until the first half of the seventh it was a pitcher's battle between Collier of La Belle and Longhoffer of St. Louis.

At the start of the seventh the St. Louis batters hit Collier hard and scored eight runs in the last three frames.

Longhoffer was pitching great ball for the St. Louis team and up until the last inning he had allowed only six hits, but he eased up in the last frame and allowed La Belle three runs.

Fielding plays by Hatchard and Rosenau helped Longhoffer greatly in the pinches.

The hitting and general play of Breck was a sparkling feature. The La Belle team will tender the St. Louis team a banquet tonight and the St. Louis team will leave for St. Louis Sunday night, arriving at 7:05 Monday morning.

Henry Puts His Tigers Through 5-Hour Drill

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 22. — A full week of practice behind them, the Missouri Tigers this afternoon went through a long scrimmage with the yearlings in a fashion indicating that they are nearing game condition.

Usually the Tiger mentor is slow about working his men in scrimmage, but all this week the Missourians have been in hard scrimmages with a heavy freshman 11. Henry believes his men are already in shape for a game.

With Missouri plays already drilled into them from spring practice, the Tigers have been worked mostly this week on the finer points on passing, line play and blocking.

Passing, in 1927, was largely a matter of last resort for Gwinn Henry, but with the outfit of ends and backs he has this year, an aerial attack is going to be one of the strongest features of the Tiger offensive.

A Five-Hour Workout.

Coach Henry worked his squad for more than five hours today. Going onto the field before 2 o'clock, it was dark before Henry was through with his squad. Five teams worked the ball through the freshmen for touchdowns in rapid succession.

Much of the coach's time and attention has been given to Kern Reece, 210-pound sophomore fullback. Reece was worked again today with the veteran pony back combination of Mehrle, Rosenheim and Riemund. Henry spent a half hour of his coaching time instructing the big sophomore in backfield play.

Earle Diemund, veteran back, was expected to carry the brunt fo the passing and punting work for the Tigers, but his passing has failed to come up to par with that of Reece or Billy Oldham, a sophomore half. Oldham has also been getting punts off for more than 40 yards with consistency.

A New Line Combination.

Henry partially solved his problem of placing linemen with a combination that worked better than any previously used. The new set of forwards has Waldorf, utility star, and Willner, 190-pound veteran tackle, at guards. The rest of the line was made up of Huff and Smith, 200-pound tackles; Ray Smith, sophomore center, and Hursley and Brown, veteran ends.

Twice passes by Reece and Brown found their way into the arms of Hursley, end, at a distance of more than 40 yards.

The Tiger passing attack this year will show a new system of blocking in the line which worked perfectly against the Frosh. Bob Mehrle gave several demonstratoins of his elusiveness by breaking away in center field to run for tuochdowns.

Another combination of backs gave Russell Dills, sophomore; Scott Kennedy, junior, and Bob Byars and Bernard Schaff, seniors, a chance to run over the freshmen. Kennedy was impressive in his line bucks. Carrying 187 pounds with ease and running 100 yards in 9.8 seconds, Kennedy is likely to show frequently in the Tiger backfield.

ARMY GRID STAR IS COACHING IN GEORGIA

By the Associated Press.

COLLEGE PARK, Ga., Sept. 22.—Capt. Claude McQuarrie, former football star for Army, University of Montana and Missoula (Mont.) High School, is now teaching the gridiron game which he formerly played so well.

He is athletic director of the Georgia Military Academy here, where he also teaches military tactics.

MOST BIG TEN SQUADS SHY ON END MATERIAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Unless some reliable ends spring up or develop, the aerial attack in the Big Ten this season may be more impotent than it has been for a decade.

A week of training has now passed but in almost every conference football camp the end problem was perplexing. "Hurry Up" Yost has been looking for another Oosterbaan at Michigan, Illinois seek another Garland Grange and Ohio State is searching for someone to fill the shoes of the fleet Robin Bell.

In other camps, notably at the University of Chicago and at Northwestern, the same puzzle confronted the coaches. In many camps, backfield men were being tried out for the wing positions.

Many teams of the conference engaged in their first real scrimmage of the season today. Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg, who has 13 men out because of ineligibility and 10 hobbling along the side lines with injuries, barely had enough for two teams. Good gains were made, but the forward walls were miserably weak. Cliff Alger, who is out for a halfback job, showed up well despite his lack of poundage.

Coach Zuppke gave his large, battered and bruised squad a light workout today. Friday's heavy scrimmage sent many to the camp's medicine chest and kept them out today. Pete Yanuskus, a promising halfback candidate, may be last for the season because of a peculiar foot injury which trainers and coaches have been unable to diagnose. He is not troubled only when running.

Coach Jimmy Phelan drove his Purdue charges hard again today to get them in shape for the De Pauw game on Oct. 6 and the Minnesota battle a week later. Not since 1897 have the Gophers and Boilermakers met on the gridiron and Phelan wants a victory.

The largest and heaviest freshman squad in years turned out at Northwestern today. There were 116 and Coach Dick Hanley was pleased. He sent his varsity team candidates through two hours scrimmage, stressing passing and open field running.

WRAY'S COLUMN

World Series Backfires.

ROGERS HORNSBY, as leader of pennant contenders, has written that there is no "kick" in life equal to "hurtling down the pennant stretch with a pack of rivals right at your heels."

Rogers may get a kick out of it, but ask the office force of any club its opinion of the prospect of winning a hair-raising championship and breaking into a world series. You will receive one wicked look and a mean retort.

Th office portion of the ball club probably hopes secretly that the club finishes a bang-up second. The said office aids are apt to finish in the mad house, otherwise.

Wire Pullers on the Job.

For weeks the officials of the Cardinals, and probably all other clubs with a pennant chance, have been answering hundreds of world series questions daily by mail and phone and sending back checks from everywhere. Letters pleading, commanding, abusive and persuasive have to be dealt with.

Individuals and firms start early and quit late in an effort to get an inside track on a block of seats. Business houses swing every ounce of influence to obtain promise of tickets for out-of-town clients.

The wear and tear on the club workers is severe and if the team wins the world series, the peak of suffering is still to come. When it's all over, every man on the official squad is ready for the padded cell or a long vacation.

The Athletics and the Yankees have been selling world series seats already. One club is sure to lose and all its efforts go for naught. In the National League it is even worse.

No wonder Col. Robert Hedges once said: "It might be better for any ball club to run a close second than to win the pennant." He preferred to remain sane.

The Big Stick.

ONE of the features of every world series is the pressure some employers put on their employes to obtain tickets for out-of-town clients.

The writer has seen the 1928 form-letter of one St. Louis house sent to employes, numbering several hundred, in which the firm in effect ordered each employe to apply for world series tickets in his own name, the business house supplying the certified check. Those who obtained tickets were to turn them over to their employers, for the benefit of the country clients.

The effect of this was to deprive 600 employes of their individual hope of obtaining a world series allotment for themselves or their families.

One employe ventured to complain to his employer.

"What right has a man in your position and salary to purchase baseball tickets that cost $16.75 a set?" was the boss's comeback.

That's surely swinging the big stick.

They Have Been Worse.

MOANS concerning the "cheese" quality of our heavyweight fight division today must come from those who have come up in this generation.

Older men recall that terrible period between 1910 and 1919, when the "white hope" epidemic raged. Those were the days when heavyweights like Al Palzer, Tom Kennedy, Arthur Pelkey, Lute McCarthy, Carl Morris and Jess Willard made up the white candidates for the role of logical contender.

Not in all the history of the ring has such a variegated assortment of eggs had the effrontery to bid for recognition.

Jess Willard became the champion, but there is really no telling what happened to Jack Johnson to bring this about. Old as Johnson was, overweight by more than 30 pounds, there still persists in the minds of many the wonder how the Negro could have lost.

Willard was one of the poorest fighters that ever gained a crown. His fights with Dempsey and with the Wild Bull Firpo, were ludicrous. If he had strength, he did not know how to use it. And boxing skill he had none.

Imagine what the white hopes whom he defeated must have looked like!

Today some of our heavyweights are fairly proficient. Gene Tunney was a great boxer, by comparison with the "white hope" crew. Jack Sharkey and Tommy Loughran would have boxed rings around the lot of them. Dempsey would have knocked them all out, one by one, the same evening.

Still they are raving that the boxers of today are the "worst ever."

Their horizons are limited who say that.

Urban Shocker Said:

"NO use putting all you have on every pitch. Study the batters. Learn what they DON'T like. Feed it to 'em. If you do that, you can worry along through many a game without bearing down and hurting your arm. Then, when the pinch comes, you have something left to bear down with."

Sound advice that for young pitchers—a bequest to the rising generation of ball players by the late Yankee hurler. Pitchers who put all they have on every pitch not only burn out their arms quickly, but they have no reserve left for an emergency.

Knocking at the Door.

ONCE more let us bring up the subject of Young Stribling, who all his life to this year has been a safety-first fighter, one who did not please fans, but who now is declared to "look like a title contender" and to be "knocking at the door."

Stribling's boosts followed two shifts in his fortunes:

1. The engaging of Leo P. Flynn as manager.

2—A knockout victory over a third-rater named John Squires of South Africa.

One writer, who attributed little pretensions to Stribling because of the Squires' victory, wrote: "Of the fight there is little to say. Squires looked very awkward and Stribling had no trouble sticking him with lefts to the face. It was no trouble for Stribling to stab his foe off with lefts and place him in position for a right-hand sock."

From which we judge that a piece of limberger would have given a stronger argument than Squires.

It will take more than the suave Mr. Flynn's palaver and a victory over a poor boob like Squires to win Stribling recognition.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22. — The Cincinnati New Eras had to go 10 innings today to beat the Detroit men's wear team of Detroit, 5 to 3, in the first of three games for the championship of the National Baseball Federation.

Harry Borgman's home run in the tenth with a mate in base gave victory to his brother Fritz and the New Eras, defending the title for the second straight year, now need to win only one game in tomorrow's double-header to make it four titles in a row.

Never before in the six rounds of play among 18 teams had the local club been pushed so close to the wall. It had survived the elimination rounds undefeated, while Detroit lost one game to Cleveland. Two defeats were needed to eliminate a team. The final play-off began today.

Kozlowski, Detroit third baseman, made three hits in three tries, one of them a triple. He handled 10 out of 11 fielding chances cleanly, nine of them being sensational plays. The entire Detroit infield sparkled and held down Cincinnati's score.

Fritz Borgman took the hill when Born was batted out in the fifth. He held Detroit safe thereafter. Each team made 10 hits. Cincinnati made one error to two for Detroit.

Twins on Team.

SELMA, Ok., Sept. 22.—Ebb and Bob James, twins, are members of the Selma Club in the Southeastern League. Ebb is a catcher and Bob a first baseman.

BILLIKEN COACH FINDS HIS MEN NEED LOTS OF SIGNAL PRACTICE

By Gerald Holland.

The four varsity teams of the St. Louis University football squad failed to make much impression on Coach Heartley Anderson in two and a half hours of continuous scrimmage yesterday afternoon. In fact, it was the Freshmen, beaten five touchdown to two, who took the honors of the afternoon.

Anderson discovered that his squad is in need of a lot of signal practice and just as much scrimmage. He will give the boys plenty of each during the next five days preceding the first game of the season. He found Joe Lintzenich to be sound enough as far as the injured knee is concerned, but still short of being in his best condition. Lintzenich had about 45 minutes of action during the workout and punted, bucked the line and ran interference in impressive fashion, but he tired easily. However, that failing may easily be remedied.

The Bright Side of It.

Any satisfaction that Anderson gained from the workout was prompted by individual performances. "Snakes" Gazelle and Maxwell, halfbacks, carried the ball for consistent gains and are likely to be promoted temporarily to the first team. Of the quarterbacks, Saul Naidorff was most impressive and according to Anderson he will jump from the third team to the first. Jack Joyce, varsity halfback of last season, showed to good advantage in throwing forward passes and Ford Brown looked good on the receiving end.

The scrimmage was marked by the poor passing of all centers. Corcoran, Downey and Davison, leading candidates for that position, will be required to give lots of attention to that department during the week. The work of the other linemen was only fair, but "Firpo" Joseph, Freshman back last year, adapted himself well at tackle and is likely to be retained at that position. Charley Eaton and Lyle Drury, who gave otherwise creditable performances, were handicapped by poor condition.

Freshman Injured.

The scrimmage brought out several promising Freshmen and resulted in the possible serious injury of one—Ray Murphy of New Haven, Conn. Murphy, after recovering a fumble and running 65 yards for a touchdown, was caught in a pileup and received an abdominal injury that may prove serious. He was taken to St. John's Hospital immediately.

Antoon and Newton, Freshmen guards, gave good defensive exhibitions, according to Anderson. Charley McKinney did a good job at quarterback for the yearlings, but he ought to be good. He was second-string quarterback at Notre Dame last year.

JOHNNY FARRELL IS LEADING PRO TOURNEY ARMOUR IS SECOND

By the Associated Press.

SHINNECOCK HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Johnny Farrell, National Open Golf champion, led the field of 25 today at the end of the first half of the first annual professional invitation tournament played over the national golf links of America. In third place with 149 was Bobby Cruickshank of the Progress Club. Three stars tied at 152 for next position, Gene Sarazen, Bill Mehlhorn and Bill Burke.

Stribling Outpoints Wine.

MISSTEP BEATS MIKE HALL IN LA SALLE HANDICAP AT LINCOLN FIELDS

WINNER SETS TRACK RECORD FOR ONE MILE AND SIXTEENTH

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Misstep, 3-year-old son of Upset, from the Le Mar Stock Farm, ridden by M. Garner, captured the La Salle Handicap, $10,000 added, at a mile and a sixteenth, for 3-year-olds and upward, the feature on the program at Lincoln Fields here this afternoon. Mike Hall finished second and Martie Flynn third. The winner established a new track record of 1:57 1-5 for the distance.

Misstep broke on top, set a fast pace throughout and won easily by a margin of four lengths. Martie Flynn, with C. Meyer up, and coupled with Flat Iron as the Stuyvesant-Peabody entry, raced in second position, to the middle of the stretch, where Mike Hall, ridden by L. McDermott and carrying top weight of 122 pounds, came up with a rush and took second money by half a length. Lancer and Sankari finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Twelve starters faced the barrier. Misstep was the favorite in the betting and paid $5.58 straight, $4.50 place and $3.52 show. The La Salle Handicap was worth $8520 net to the owner of the winner, and a crowd of 15,000 turf fans saw the race.

Gotham Takes Opener.

Phil Reuter put over a good one in the opening race, a dash of seven furlongs, when Gotham, with Elmo Shropshire in the saddle, won in a drive by half a length from Theo Fay, owned by O. L. Foster. Harned Bros. Honest was third, a neck behind Theo Fay.

Theo Fay set a fast pace but tired after reaching the middle of the stretch. Gotham closing fast, took the lead and won going away. Honest just missed landing the place. Gotham paid $13.44.

Truckee Butch, making his first start since the close of the winter racing season, accounted for the second race, also at seven furlongs. Truckee Butch was ridden by Hurst Philpot and won driving by a head from Ann Curtis. San-Utar, the favorite, was third. Truckee Butch was raced in second position until the stretch where Philpot applied the whip. The colt responded with great speed and passed the tiring Ann Curtis as the field passed under the wire. Truckee Butch is owned by G. J. Miller and refunded $14.30 for each $2 win ticket.

Torchilla Wins Easily.

Clyde Van Dusen's Torchilla, son of Torchbearer, easily took the third race from a field of good platers. Hal Price Headley's Pigeon Hole was second and E. Ellis' Stampdale third. Torchilla took the lead at the break and led throughout to win by three lengths. Pigeon Hole was close up all the way and when Florida Gold tired in the stretch took the place and finished a length and a half ahead of Stampdale. The latter, slow to get going, could never get to the leaders.

Torchilla was ridden by C. McCrossen and paid $7.78.

Mally Jane lead from flagfall to finish to win the fourth race, at one mile and one sixteenth, for the Royal Stable. Bonaire was second and George DeMar third. H. Philpot rode the winner, his second of the day. Mally Jane won by five lengths. Bonaire beat George DeMar a neck for the place. The winner paid $4.30.

BLUE LARKSPUR CAN WIN SOME LOST LAURELS AT PIMLICO

By Clement Glaub.

Blue Larkspur, Edward R. Bradley's Kentucky-bred juvenile, rated champion of 2-year-olds, but which performed like a plater in the rich Belmont Futurity Sept. 15, will have a chance to regain his lost laurels if he faces the barrier in the Pimlico Futurity, to be decided during the fall race meeting at Pimlico, scheduled to open Nov. 1. If he starts, Blue Larkspur will meet most of the colts which matched strides with him in the Belmont classic.

High Strung, winner of the Belmont Futurity, and Jack High, third in the same race, are regarded as certain starters, barring unforeseen accidents, in the Pimlico race. High Strung, leading juvenile money-winner, races in the silks of Marshall Field and has won three races in four starts. Jack High, which has defeated Blue Larkspur in two out of five meetings, carries George D. Widener's silks and is considered Blue Larkspur's most dangerous rival for the 2-year-old crown.

Blue Larkspur's surprisingly poor performance in the Belmont race was attributed to his hard campaign this summer. He has started seven times since June 15 and has competed against the fastest juveniles in the country. Before the Belmont Futurity he was given fast trials every day for a week. Many veteran turf writers who witnessed the running, were of the opinion that the Bradley colt was trained too fine.

High Strung Title Factor.

High Strung's great race in the Belmont puts him in line for the juvenile championship. In the rich stake he clipped two and three-fifths seconds off Valorous' track record for the Widener course of about seven furlongs. Led from start to finish and won by a head in a driving finish from Roguish Eye and Jack High. Prior to his Belmont victory he was seventh to Blue Larkspur and won over Healey, winner of the Champagne Stakes, and Belittlin, a Bradley horse.

Most of the juveniles which paraded in the Belmont are eligible for the Pimlico Futurity. J. O. Keene's Jean Valjean, lauded as a coming star, may be a starter as well as Roguish Eye. J. J. Coughlin's good distance horse, J. E. Widener's Curate and Marine, Gifford Cochran's Healy, H. P. Whitney's Zoom, Oak Ridge Stable's Chestnut Oak and Rancocas Stable's Lycidas.

The Pimlico Futurity, to be run over the mile course, will be worth about $55,000 to the winner and if won by Blue Larkspur it will place him at the top of the juvenile money winners of the year. Jack High also has a chance to top the youngsters if he takes down first money.

Glade, a filly owned by the Greentree Stable, won last year's renewal and earned $53,210. Fair Star, another filly, earned $53,660 by winning in 1926. The Pimlico Futurity is at scale weights and is for colts and fillies, geldings barred.

Championship and Cup at Latonia.

The feature events on the fall programs for 3-year-olds and over are the Latonia Championship Stake sand Latonia Cup. The former event for 3-year-olds only, carries an added value of $15,000. The Cup, a gallop of two miles and one-quarter, for older horses is worth $7500 in added money. Both races will be run at Latonia.

Reigh Count, champion three-year-old, will be an absentee from the Championship Stakes. It was announced last week that the fast son of Sun Reigh will either go to England for the Ascot Stakes or be retired. With Reigh Count out, the Championship will be an open affair. Misstep, Leo J. Marks good horse; W. S. Kilmer's Sun Beau, and E. F. Seagram's Solace are considered starters in the distance classic.

The Championship will be worth about $26,000 to the winner and is sure to draw a large and high-class field.

Galahad a Cup Candidate.

The Latonia Cup has drawn only 24 horses and a field of about four or five thoroughbreds is expected to start. Galahad, Phil Reuter's German-bred 3-year-old which is not eligible for the Latonia Championship, will start in the Cup. He has shown fine performances in long races this season, but the distances have been too short. The two miles and one-quarter of the Latonia Cup should be to his liking and if the track is in good condition he will probably be made favorite over such stars as Rolled Stockings, Handmandy and Hydromel.

Last year's winner was H. P. Headley's Mike Hall with Royal Julian second and Wooldridge third. The winner took down $6900.

Torchilla, showing most speed from start, took good lead after reaching turn and held it, but pulled up very sore. Pigeon Hole went up from start and lacked to save much ground, held on resolutely. IRONSIDES EASILY CAPTURES EDGEMERE HANDICAP AT AQUEDUCT

CLOSES FAST TO BEAT BYRD BY FOUR LENGTHS; SORTIE THIRD

By the Associated Press.

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Returning from a long let up, Robert L. Gerry's Ironsides, well played and perfectly ridden by Tony McAtee, easily won the Edgemere Handicap, a mile and a f[illegible] long gallop here today. It was the second score of the day for the popular trainer, George Odom. He saddled the winner of the first race. Just a week ago Odom won the Futurity with High Strung.

Ironsides and McAtee had a lot of rough traveling in the early part of the race. He was in a pocket around the turn but McAtee would not take back. He finally got through and closing fast, took the lead and won by four lengths. Byrd took the place by three lengths from Sortie.

The race was worth $6300 net to the winner.

St. Charles Wins From Alumni, 13-0 In Grid Contest

St. Charles High School football team showing more power and promise than any team of recent years, defeated the Alumni yesterday afternoon by a score of 13 to 0. The game was played on St. Charles High School Athletic Field.

Quarterback Feldmann scored a touchdown early inthe first quarter for the school team. From that point until late in the last quarter neither team could reach the goal line, but in the closing minutes of play Feldmann clinched the victory with another touchdown and Halfback Bacon scored the extra point. A strong, heavy line and a light but very fast backfield gave the high school team sturdiness and flexibility.

Next Saturday St. Charles opposes Beaumont of the St. Louis High School League.

Fullback James Moore was the only serious casualty of the game. He suffered a wrenched right knee which appeared of such consequence that he probably will miss next Saturday's game.

CHICAGO GIANTS BEAT ST. LOUIS STARS IN SERIES OPENER, 7-3

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 22.—A capacity crowd saw the Chicago American Giants defeat the St. Louis Stars in the opening game of the Negro National baseball championship series here yesterday afternoon at the Giants' Park. The score was 7 to 3. Timely hitting coupled with two errors, one made by J. Russell when he overthrew first and the other when J. Bell misjudged a fly ball in deep center, enabled the local to clinch the contest.

The Stars did not count a tally until the eighth inning when they put on a rally to score three runs off two singles, a double and a triple. Suttles was the leading hitter, making a single, a double and a triple in four trips to the plate. R. Russell hit a triple during the batting rally in the eighth frame.

The second game of the series will be played here this afternoon.

McANA AND GOODWIN LEAD INDIVIDUAL LEAGUE AT ROGERS

J. McAna and D. Goodwin are leading the field in the Recreation individual league at Rogers, with three wins each. R. Grimme heads the individual three-game department with 672, while H. Mitchell tops the singles with 235.

Tonight's schedule: O. Ambrosius vs. W. Kopp; R. Grimme vs. H. Mitchell; F. Messmer vs. G. Kuehner; J. McAna vs. J. Airola; H. Capone. Games start at 7 o'clock.

NARROW fairways or closely guarded greens are troublesome mainly because of the effect upon the player's attitude toward the shot. Driving down a very wide fairway there is nothing to think about except the exact point where the ball is expected to go. There is no worry about keeping it away from this side or that. The result is that it is far easier to hit a straight drive.

I shall not soon forget how I struggled at Olympia Fields to overcome a fear of getting off the course. The fairways of that course appeared to be impossibly narrow, and in trying to guide the ball down the restricted lanes, I would alternately push it off on one side or the other. And try as I would, although I knew my trouble was purely a mental one, not until the last round of the playoff was I able to swing without a tenseness caused by anxiety over the result of the stroke.

That, in a nutshell, explains the difficulty experienced by ranking players when opposed to men of less reputation in an 18-hole match. Afraid to allow his opponent to gain encouragement and inspiration by an early lead, the seeded player begins by being over-cautious, attempting to keep meticulously to the paths of virtue and thus give no openings. The other man, feeling that he is expected to be beaten in any event, starts off in an aggressive frame of mind, intent only upon playing his best, or better than his best if possible.

Forget the Direction.

STEWART MAIDEN expressed the whole idea in a characteristically brief telegram to Watts Gunn. Watts had had a very bad first round in the open championship at Oakmont last year, driving literally all over the course. Next morning he received this message from Stewart:

"Hit 'em hard, they'll land somewhere."

That is a very splendid attitude to cultivate. Even the narrowest fairways are wide enough for a well-hit shot. The difficulty arises when we allow the sight of them to upset the manner of hitting. If we ease off at the last minute, or whip the club through with a jerk no fairway in the world will be vast enough to hold the ball.

On the seventeenth hole at Brae Burn in the first qualifying round I hit one of the worst shots I can remember. I had had a very shaky round and needed a 3-4 to finish for a 76, which though not good, would be quite acceptable under the circumstances. The seventeenth hole measures 255 yards and requires a very accurate brassie shot. The more serious difficulty lies to the right, and this side I determined to avoid.

Hard Fault to Correct.

BUT as I addressed the ball I was thinking more about keeping away from the right than about driving the green, and as I hit the ball I did something, heaven knows what, that sent the ball an inconceivable distance into the very woods I was trying to avoid. I was very lucky to scrape out with a four.

This desire to guide the shot is the easiest thing in the world to recognize. You know you should hit the ball, that only in that way can you hit it straight. But for some reason your muscles will not obey. It is the most difficult fault in golf to overcome.

MACK'S RECRUIT PLAYED All GAMES BUT BASEBALL AT SCHOOL

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 22.

T. MILLER BROWN, Missouri U. athlete, announced here today that he would don the uniform of the Philadelphia Athletics before their game with the Browns Monday for a pitching tryout.

The appearance of Brown, who is playing his last year on the Missouri eleven, in a big league baseball uniform, will not affect the big Missourian's football eligibility. He is under contract with the Philadelphia Club and the purpose of the visit is to give managers and coaches an idea of his ability, according to Brown.

Brown, peculiarly, has played in every sport at Missouri but baseball. He thas been an outstanding man in the Valley in football and weight throwing and was a member of the basketball ssuad last winter.

KIRKWOOD AND WEBSTER RESUME GRID RELATIONS

By Harold Tuthill.

Early prospects of powerful football teams at Webster and Kirkwood High Schools should make the Thanksgiving Day game between the two schools an interesting one, is the belief of followers of the teams, following the announcement yesterday that the schools would resume football relationships after a lapse of four years.

Disagreement over the eligibility of some of Kirkwood's athletes caused Webster to break off relations between the two schools but that has been forgotten and the season's schedule will wind up with Kirkwood playing at Webster.

Coach Charles Roberts of Webster has a bright outlook for the coming season with seven lettermen and nine capable men from last year's second-string all back in his fold. The lettermen are Capt. Max Tyrell, quarter; Edmond Nicholson and Ted Shaveter, tackles; Toddy Crippen, end; Paul Sibley and Dick Woods, halfbacks and Bob Schmidt, fullback. In addition to these, Dick Coe and Craig McCloud, tackles; Carl Yeckel, center; Bill Baxter and Ramsey, halfbacks; Eddie Alt, guard; Bill Freschi, Paulmeyer and Wesrup, ends, are the newcomers who are making strong bids for places on the regular team.

The lettermen on Coach Lyons' Kirkwood squad include Capt. Earl Kline, quarterback; George Harsh, fullback; John Burgland and Ralph Hagar, tackles; and Chester Lindhoff and Benny Tepper, guards. The new lot has James Thompson and Don Howe, halfbacks and Bob Rule and Walter Fedder, ends, as men who saw service under Lyons last year. The squad at Kirkwood totals about 45 men.

Kirkwood opens the County League football season Friday, when it plays Wellston at Wellston. Ritenour will start the season at Webster, when the two teams meet Saturday on the Webster field.

ROCHESTER WINS TWO GAMES AND REMAINS IN PENNANT FIGHT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Rochester remained in the thick of the International League pennant fight by taking two games from the Royals at Montreal today, 9 to 3 and 3 to 2. Buffalo defeated Toronto, 9 to 2.

The Red Wings now are in a position to win the flag by taking a double header from the Royals tomorrow, even if Buffalo should defeat Toronto in the single clash which closes the season at Buffalo. Rochester has lost two games fewer than the Bisons, and has won three fewer, representing a margin of half a game for Buffalo.

The Red Wings can gain no more than half a game by taking two while Buffalo wins one tomorrow, but such a combination would give the Southworth forces a margin in percentage. If Buffalo should lose tomorrow, one Rochester victory would clinch the flag.

"Listen, my dear, I'll tell you how

Jack and I got out of debt so quickly. When he was sick, bills piled up dreadfully fast and we thought they would never stop. Naturally they worried Jack and kept him down. One day I found a folder from the Phoenix Finance Co. and showed it to him. He seemed to pick up from that time. The next day we went to the Phoenix office and the nicest man showed us how practical it was to pay all our debts with a loan. But the best part was the way he arranged for us to pay it back — small payments at regular intervals. Yes, if it hadn't been for the Phoenix Plan we would never have gotten on our feet so quickly."

This is just one of the many ways in which Phoenix Service serves. If you need ready cash, investigate the Phoenix Plan now. Call or write

FRENCH STARS AT TOP IN TILDEN'S ALL-WORLD TENNIS RANKING

AMERICAN ACE PUTS HIMSELF THIRD, HUNTER FOURTH ON LIST

By William T. Tilden II.

An all-world first 10 is no easy task this year and one that I know I will not succeed in meeting with any degree of satisfaction to all my readers, but at least I am offering a selection to pick to pieces. My choice is:

1. Henri Cochet, France.
2. Rene Lacoste, France.
3. M. T. Tilden II, U. S. A.
4. F. T. Hunter, U. S. A.
5. Jean Borotra, France.
6. Baron de Morpurgo, Italy.
7. Jack Crawford, Australia.
8. George Lott Jr., U. S. A.
9. John Hennessey, U. S. A.
10. Christian Boussus, France.

There can be little dispute about Henri Cochet's claim to first position. He won the French and American championships and all his Davis cup matches, beating Lacoste, myself, Borotra and Hunter (two), losing only to Lacoste at Wimlbedon in the final round. Lacoste has a slight claim over me for two, since he is English champion, runner-up in France, has beaten Cochet, myself, Lott and Hennessey.

I come third by virtue of wins from Lacoste, Hennessey, Crawford, Hunter, Lott and Borotra, with defeats by Lacoste, Cochet and an early-season loss to Hennessey.

Hunter is clearly four by virtue of beating Borota (two) Lott Hennessey (early season two) and Crawford, with two close defeats by Cochet, but several bad defeats by lesser stars. He won the International Federation championship in Holland and was runner-up at London and United States championship.

Jean Borotra at five has a list of five matches lost against the men ahead of him and no bad defeats to mar his year.

Italian Has Fine Record.

Baron de Morpurgo might precede Lott, Hunter and Borotra on his Davis cup record, but his only big tournament, Wimbledon, he met no one really good except Lacoste, to whom he lost badly, so I am placing him sixth, even though his position might be justified at four.

Jack Crawford by virtue of his string of close matches with Borotra, including a couple of victories, coupled with his otherwise good record, comes seventh.

His five-set battle at Wimbledon against Borotra and his great four-set match with Hunter in the United States gives him his place.

George Lott on his general ..ty, especially in the United States championship, and John Hennessey on his Davis Cup record, notwithstanding his upset in the United States championship, must come next while Christian Boussus by virtue of being semi-finalist at Wimbledon is another first ten player.

I cannot see just who else should come in at the expense of any of these. "Bunny" Austin of England, by his win from Lott, Hennessy and Coen, in England, and five sets with Lacoste is the only one to seriously consider, but these were just after the American boys arrived in England.

Fordham to Use One-Piece Grid Suits This Year

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.

An improvement on the silk pants idea of Notre Dame teams of former years will find the Fordham football squad sporting something new in the line of uniforms this season. Head Coach Major Frank Cavanaugh will equip his men with a football suit which he believes will be conducive to greater speed.

The new uniform which the Maroon warriors will wear this fall is a one-piece affair. The jersey and the pants are not detachable and give an overall effect. it will be lighter to wear than the old uniform and greater speed is therefore anticipated among the backs.

Hoffmeisters Can Clinch Muny Title by Winning Again Today

The Hoffmeisters, representing the South End League, and the Pants Store nine of the Empire circuit, will fight it out this afternoon at Fairground No. 1 in the second of the series to decide the Municipal Baseball Association championship. A victory for the Hoffmeisters will end the series, while a Pants conquest will necessitate the playing of another contest to decide the city championship.

In the opening game last Sunday, the Hoffmeisters gained victory, 8 to 6, in a loosely-played battle. All the runs for the losers came in a big early inning after which they were stopped without great difficulty by the Hoffmeister twirlers.

The championship game will be started at 3 o'clock with the Naps Buddies of the Downtown Employed Boys' League and the St. Peters of the Evangelical Intermediate League, playing a preliminary at 12:30 o'clock to decide the intermediate circuit title winner.

For the game tomorrow, the Hoffmeisters will rely on the same battle front as was used in the opener a week ago. Del Gehner, one of the star pitchers of the team, will start on the hill

Manager Sowash of the Pants nine, however, has announced that he will make several changes. Harold Readman, who did some fine relief pitching in the first game after Ed Steinmann was batted off the hill, will do the twirling. Marxer, regular third sacker, will be shifted to third, while Steinmann will cover the hot corner. Riecker also will replace Davis behind the plate. Sowash is making the changes in an effort to bolster the defense of his aggregation.

Three umpires, Ecoff, Amman and Donovan, will be in charge of the title contest.

SEVEN 6-ROUND BOUTS ON PRO CARD TUESDAY

Professional boxers of seven weight divisions are slated to clash Tuesday night at the New Coliseum arena in bouts of six rounds each, in a card arranged by Matchmaker Jack Tippett for the Fred W. Stockham American Legion Post's first show of the indoor season. Most of the talent was drawn from the local field though visiting boxers are slated to oppose St. Louisans in three contests.

Jimmy Watts of Atlanta, Ga., Jimmy Sayers of Indianapolis, Ind., and Moan Baumgartner of Fort Wayne, Ind., are the invaders. All three fighters will be making their introductory appearance in local competition. Watts is paired with Paul Steadman for a featherweight event, while Sayers meets Mike Sansone in the flyweight feature, and Baumgartner opposes Al McCoy in a welterweight bout.

The fact that Watts' record includes a 10-round decision over Claude Wilson, the Birmingham boxer, who shaded Johnny Kaiser in a local 10-rounder last season, indicates Steadman is facing a tough assignment. Watts also holds decisions over Milton Manguna of Little Rock.

Sonsone Faces Strong Opponent.

Sansone's engagement with Sayers brings the local midget against a fighter who has lost only three decisions in a total of 31 fights. Sansone knocked out Denver Kid, a clever Mexican bantam, in the seventh round of a match at Little Rock three weeks ago. In his last local bout Mike won over Tommy Maroon of Kansas City, in 10 rounds.

McCoy, who sprang a surprise a few weeks ago when he stopped Eddie Goldberg in five rounds, also seems to have a rough voyage awaiting him for Baumgartner's record includes decisions over Roy Hahn of Indianapolis, Rex Ripple of New Orleans, Johnny Boyle and Jack Hutchins of Chicago.

Adams to Meet Pivac.

Sergt. Jack Adams of Scott Field and Tom Pivac of this city, will meet in a heavyweight event of the four bouts featuring local talent. This match is a return bout, marking an attempt by Adams to launch a comeback after a lay-off of ten months. The previous battle between these hefty punchers was contested in an East St. Louis ring a year ago, the decision going to Pivac after ten rounds.

Lou Terry and Walter "Red" Roland in a lightweight attraction which will mark Terry's return to local competition after an absence of two years. During his absence from St. Louis Terry lost but one decision in a total of 21 bouts, avenging his one defeat in a return match with Buster Brown. Among the fighters he defeated during this period are: Frankie Larrabbee, Lew Kelly, Ralph Mendoza, Don Davis, Jimmy Borde, Tony Escalante, Walter Moody, Mickey Duvane, Rollie French, Ted Blatt, Ruty Evans and Donnie Dundee.

Ghnouly Makes Pro Debut.

A bantamweight bout will mark the professional debut of Joe Ghnouly, Western A. A. U. senior champion of his class for the past three years and finalist in last year's National junior championships. Ghnouly is matched with Paul Lang, a fighter who has been a consistent winner in professional ring circles over a period of two years. In a match with Leroy "Kid" Dugan of Memphis, two weeks ago, Lang won the decision in ten rounds.

Frank Power and Harry [illegible] are booked for the middleweight setto. Power graduated last year from the local amateur ranks in which he held titular honors for three years. He kayoed Norman Travis and Jack Kelly in two professional bouts to date. Webb is a veteran who has not shown his wares in a local ring since he defeated Harry Ritzer five years ago, breaking that fighter's jaw.

New Price Scale in Effect.

Tippett announces a new scale of admission prices for the Stockham Post shows with general admissions seats reduced to 75 cents and a top price of $2.20 for ringside reservations. The advance sale began yesterday with distribution agencies located at the New Coliseum box office and various gymnasiums.

Bridle Spur Club Announces First Hunt of Season

Red-Coated Riders Will Make Drag Chase Next Sunday, With Annual Breakfast Following.

IN anticipation of clear skies the Bridle Spur Club has sent out invitations to its first hunt of the season, to take place next Sunday morning. A real fox hunt has been promised later. The preliminary meet will be similar to the drag hunts of last season, and all of the several hundred acres of woods to the west of the clubhouse have been made ready.

The red-coated riders, men and women, will assemble at the clubhouse at 10 o'clock, and after the chase, will return there for the annual hunt breakfast. The interior decorations of the club, with its English hunting chintz, trophies of the chase and flagstoned floors, lend themselves admirably to arrangements for such an affair, and will make a charming background for hunting togs.

Adalbert von Gontard will be master of the hounds; Arthur Preece, huntsman; August A. Busch Jr., first whip; Roy Siegel, second whip, and Louis A. Hager Jr., secretary.

Several dinner parties are given at the Bridal Spur each week. Last night Mr. von Gontard entertained 40 guests at dinner and dancing in honor of Mrs. von Gontard, celebrating her birthday. Friday night Mr. and Mrs. William D. Orthwein II will give a dinner dance for a group of their friends, and last Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. Stewart McDonald of 24 Washington terrace entertained 20 guests at a dinner dance.

Josephine Adreon a Debutante

THE name of Miss Josephine Adreon, daughter of Mrs. Edward L. Adreon of 5706 Cabanne avenue, has been added to the list of this season's debutantes. Miss Adreon has recently returned from abroad where she spent the summer. She attended Visitation Convent.

Miss Sarah Boogher And G. W. Gardner Married Last Night

Several Hundred Guests Attend Marriage of Former Veiled Prophet's Maid of Honor and Kentucky Man.

AN early autumn wedding of interest was solemnized last evening at 6 o'clock when Miss Sarah Boogher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boogher of 6241 Waterman avenue, became the bride of George W. Gardner. The marriage service was read at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boogher by Bishop William F. McMurry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the presence of several hundred guests.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Frances Boogher, as maid of honor, and by Miss Katherine Gardner McGinnis of Lexington, Ky., Miss Dorothy Hoag and her cousin, Miss Olive B. Moffitt, as bridesmaids. George A. R. Schuster of Kansas City, formerly of St. Louis, was best man for Mr. Gardner. The groomsmen were Mervin B. Smith, Henry H. Mudd, Ericson Lewis, Dr. Louis Freimuth, Benjamin D. Choate of Louisville, Ky., and Arnold Boogher, a brother of the bride.

An improvised altar arranged before the large fireplace made an attractive background for the bridal party. Bouquets of lilies and yellow dahlias were used with charming effect about the mantel which was banked in palms and ferns. Cathedral candles in tall candelabra softly lighted the room. Following the ceremony, a reception was held. The wedding supper was spread in a marquee which had been added to the dining room. The marquee was decorated in greenery and a profusion of autumn flowers, and its latticed walls were entwined with garlands of smilax. The bridal table seating 22 guests was lighted by pink tapers and was adorned in lilies of the valley, pink roses and yellow dahlias.

Names of Matrons For 50th V. P. Ball

SHOULD his mysterious and fickle majesty, the Veiled Prophet, allow himself a few moments of retrospection as he awaits the arrival of a new consort at the fiftieth annual ball in his honor at the Coliseum Oct. 3, he will reflect upon a picture in striking contrast to the present day arrangements.

He will perhaps think of the mere handful of 500 guests gathered to welcome him at his first visit, compared with the more than 6000 assembled to do him honor a half century later. He will see full length gowns fashioned from voluminous yards of material held en bouffant by numerous petticoats in contrast to the scant knee length frocks of today; wreaths of flowers adorning curls

BEFORE an altar banked with palms and ferns interspersed with clusters of pink gladioli, and lighted with white cathedral tapers, Miss Florence Breitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Breitt of 203 Orchard avenue, Webster Groves, became the bride last night of Webster Groves, of Charles E. Naumer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Naumer of Altamont, Ill. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Wofford C. Timmons of the First Congregational Church of St. Louis.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. J. S. Young, as matron of honor, and by Miss Josephine McCormick, Miss Marguerite Vierheller and Miss Ethel Bromeyer, as bridesmaids. Her small niece, Marjorie Young, was flower girl.

The attendants were gowned in four shades of pink tulle, made with close fitting bodices and ruffled tulle skirts caught at one side with a two-toned bow of taffeta and a spray of flowers. The flower girl wore a white Valenciennes lace frock over pink satin and carried a basket of pink roses.

The bride's gown was of white transparent velvet faced in flesh satin, and was fashioned with a sleeveless, close fitting bodice and full skirt, short at one side, with a moire bow from the left hip to form a train. The full tulle veil was arranged to her hair with a band of pearls, and over it fell a second veil of princess lace. She carried lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated with pink and white dahlias and pink gladioli, with a reception table embellished in pink roses.

Fred L. Naumer was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen were Frank R. Falvey, Alvin Woenthe, and Dr. Besto Tate of Crowden, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Naumer have departed on an Eastern wedding trip and will make their home when they return at 7348 Dale avenue.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and National Park Seminary in Washington, D. C. Mr. Naumer is a graduate of Washington University and is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Their gowns will be fashioned simply, of transparent velvet—the maid of honor in cornflower blue, and the bridesmaids in shell pink and deep rose. They will carry arm bouquets of pink roses and blue larkspur. The three flower girls, Betty Ann Garvey, Mary Raterman and Josephine Hartnett, will wear dainty frocks of pink taffeta.

a new trend in millinery fashions is forecast in our Autumn collections at $10 $12 $15

Many of the new hats dare to be "pretty"! A radical change from the severe skull-cap of seasons past, is the poke-bonnet in an audacious modernized version sponsored by Madame Agnes; the hats with brims adroitly cut to frame the face, with one long side or with a long back; the toques and turbans and berets cleverly draped to give softness; these are proof that the new hats have been designed to make every woman look her most feminine best.

These are the styles one sees in our specialized groups at $10, $12, $15 . . . . in felt, in velours, in velvet . . . . in large and small headsizes . . . . for women and misses.

KING NOW HAS ELECTRIC LIGHTS

They Replace Oil Lamps in Italian Summer Residence.

By the Associated Press.

SANT' ANNA DI VALDIERI, Italy, Sept. 22.—The Italian royal family at last has electric lighting in their summer residence here. Up to the end of August they were still using old-fashioned oil lamps like anyone of the countryside.

This is a mountainous region where water-power abounds, but nobody thought of installing an electric light plant until four months ago. It took the new podesta, or local Governor, Cavalliero Porta, to put the deal through. A firm of Turin engineers made the hydro-electric installation a reality within three months from the time they started work. Princess Giovanna, the comely daughter of the House of Savoy, presided at the opening, pressing the button that turned on the current.

Quickly Beautifies An Ugly Complexion

Keep face free from all blemishes by regularly using pure mercolized wax. Get an ounce from druggist and apply nightly, like a cold cream. It gently absorbs the thin outer layer of soiled, grimy skin, removing with it every defect such as freckles, dryness, sallowness and blackheads. In a few days the young skin beneath comes to the surface clear, velvety smooth and white. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and restore facial contour, use as an astringent 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.

We Do The Hard Part

With every piece washed immaculately and rinsed in eight changes of water, and all the flat pieces ironed and folded, means our Soft Finish Service does the hard part. The underwear, bath towels and stockings are fluffed dry and only the form pieces, the "interesting part of ironing" is left for you to do.

Women's Clubs Resume Activities

THE executive board of the Eighth District of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs will hold the first meeting of the club year at the Town Club Wednesday, at 10:30 a. m. The district president, Mrs. Charles A. Houts, will conduct the session.

Reports will be given by the 14 district delegates who attended the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Club in San Antonio last June. Several reports will be illustrated with pictures. Mrs. F. B. Hall, State chairman of fine arts, has included in her report pictures taken on a trip to Mexico. Mrs. Clay E. Jordan and Miss Ettie A. Jordan, delegates at large from Missouri, have assembled a film of moving pictures of convention scenes and celebrities.

An important item of business will be consideration of a plan to endow beds in the new bone and joint surgery department of Missouri Baptist Sanitarium. This new addition is being erected at a cost of $300,000. It is the outgrowth of the work begun in behalf of indigent cripples by the club women of the eighth district in connection with Dr. B. A. Wilkes, superintendent of the sanitarium, and Dr. M. L. Klinefelter, head of its orthopedic department.

Another matter of importance will be the choice of a date and program for the annual fall convention of the clubs of the eighth district.

The committee, of which Mrs. W. P. Erhart is chairman, has announced the eighth district directory for 1928-29 will be ready for distribution Oct. 1.

The State executive board of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs will meet in Rolla, Mo., Oct. 1. The Rolla Saturday Club and Civics Club will be hostesses for the occasion. On Oct. 2 and 3 the sixth district will hold its annual meeting in Rolla. The president, Mrs. F. E. Taylor, will preside.

The unveiling of the D. A. R. state marker, "The Pioneer Mother," at Lexington, Mo., Monday was participated in by St. Louis members of a number of patriotic organizations who placed wreaths at the foot of the monument following the dedication. Mrs. Ben F. Gray, former vice president general of the National Society, D. A. R., placed a wreath in honor of the first families of Virginia, founders of Jamestown, Va. Mrs. Howard Bailey represented Mrs. William Bagnell by placing a wreath for the Society of Colonial Dames. Mrs. Joseph M. Long, state president of the Daughters of American Colonists, placed one for her organization, and Mrs. Clement W. Nelson represented Mrs. Joseph S. Calfee by presenting a wreath for the St. Louis chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The St. Louis Chapter, D. A. R., was represented by a party of 14 traveling in four automobiles, the members visiting the State University at Columbia, Mo., and the Confederate Home and Memorial Park at Higginsville, on the western drive, and the Old Tavern at Arrow Rock on the homeward trip. A meeting of the Arrow Rock Chapter, D. A. R., was held in the tavern, the St. Louis Chapter members participating. This meeting followed a dinner given at the tavern for the St. Louis Chapter members. At Lexington several luncheon and dinner parties were given for the St. Louis Chapter members, and an interesting visit was made at the old ancestral home of Mrs. Benton H. Pollock, a member of the party.

Two members of the St. Louis Chapter party were invited to act as judges for the parade held in the morning, preceding the unveiling of the D. A. R. marker, in which the citizens of Lexington and the surrounding country took part. Seven prizes were offered for floats. "William Penn and the Indians," "Betsy Ross Making the Flag" and "Soldiers in the Trenches" were among the most attractive.

Several members of the D. A. R. at Boonville greeted the St. Louis members when they stopped at the hotel on the westward trip for dinner.

Phi Delphian Chapter held its first regular meeting at Cabanne Branch Library, Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. John C. Pritchard, president, presiding. The program, "English Poetry of the Fifteenth Century," was directed by Mrs. Erwin G. Ossing, assisted by Mrs. Stickney, Mrs. La Rue, Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. Gale.

The next meeting of Phi Chapter will be held at Cabanne Branch Library, Oct. 3, at 1:30 p. m., subject of discussion, "The Early History of Music," under the leadership of Mrs. Charles H. Stickney.

The Stephens College Club met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Fred S. Milam. Mrs. Edwin Niehaus read a paper on "The American Home, Primitive and Modern." The next meeting will be held Oct. 17, at the home of Mrs. Charles Herald, 6 Hortus court. Mrs. R. B. McDonald will review "The Mother," by Grazzia Deledda.

Mrs. Lon Sanders, State vice regent Missouri Daughters American Revolution, motored to the unveiling of the statue of "The Pioneer Mother," marking the old trail across the continent, at Lexington, Mo., Monday.

She was accompanied by several members of the Jefferson Chapter, D. A. R., among whom were Mrs. R. Shad Bennett, Mrs. H. L. King, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Blythe and Miss Antoinette Taylor with Herbert Taylor. After leaving Lexington they motored to Arrow Rock to visit the Old Tavern.

The St. Louis Chapter of the United States Daughters of 1812 will meet at the Fairmount Hotel Thursday at 2 p. m. Mrs. Eugene Marsh, Mrs. Glenn F. May and Mrs. G. W. McElhiney will be the hostesses.

The first meeting of the season of the New Era Club will be held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. William W. Dings, 5784 Pershing avenue. A visit to the Art Museum has been planned to follow the regular program.

Daughters of Isabella, Baily Circle 170, will meet Oct. 1 at 8 p. m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall. The election of officers will be held at this meeting.

The executive board of the Monday Club of Webster Groves, Mrs. James McCleave, chairman, met Monday at 9:30 a. m. Reports were given by the president, Mrs. James Milne, and by the chairmen of sections and standing committees. The opening meeting will be held Monday afternoon, Oct. 1, at 2 o'clock.

The first meeting of the season of the Tuxedo Club will be held Tuesday, Oct. 2, with Mrs. Charles Hequenbourg, the president, at her home, 5539 Pershing avenue. Mrs. George M. Gill, the first president of the club, will give a resume of the history of the club, which was organized in 1899.

The St. Louis University High School George H. Backer Memorial Mothers' Club will hold its annual card party in the gymnasium at Kingshighway boulevard and Oakland avenue, Nov. 27. Mrs. A. A. Cervantes, general chairman, will be assisted by the following committee: Mrs. John Boe, Mrs. G. J. Clarke, Mrs. John Cramer, Mrs. J. P. Crowley, Mrs. Frank Corley, Mrs. G. T. Desloge, Mrs. R. J. Farrell, Mrs. G. W. Flym, Mrs. D. J. Forrestel, Mrs. Sol Gross, Mrs. E. G. Gorla, Mrs. Charles Henry, Mrs. R. J. Lancaster, Mrs. G. R. Nathen,

NO BOBS FOR OFFICERS' WIVES

Kiel Radio Commandant's Order Starts Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

KIEL, Germany, Sept. 22—Something like a mutiny is threatened in the German navy because of an edict that has gone forth from the chief of the government naval station here, that officers' wives must not be shingled.

Great indignation therefore, among the ladies, who declare one and all that whatever the authorities may decree in matters of male hirsute appendages, they will not tolerate any official and officious meddling with their own femine coiffures. The rule in the German navy is that officers shall be either clean shaven or else cultivate a full pointed beard like their admiral. Prince Henry of Prussia, the ex-kaiser's brother, who has copied the style from King George of England.

Always—a Perfect Wave

By Edna Wallace Hopper

NOW you can have the thrill of a lovely, natural-looking wave that will soften your features. So much depends upon a soft expression. The captivating face is vivacious, but it must be framed by a caressing wave. A rigid, "corrugated" wave has a hardening effect, which no one admires.

To give your hair the pliability that is necessary for a flattering wave, I want you to try my Wave and Sheen. It is more than a curling fluid. It not only sets a permanent in the shortest possible time but can be used just as well if you curl your own hair, as I do. My hair must always look at its best—my daily appearance on the stage demands it. Starring as a flapper in my sixties is a startling roll. So whatever else I do I must look young. And one of my greatest assets is the sheen of my hair. It simply glows with life. In fact, the first comments my audiences make are about my hair.

Send this coupon and ten cents for a sample of

Wave and Sheen

I will enclose with it a sample of my Youth Cream and Youth Powder. Both are results of my worldwide search for the best science produces in cream and face powder. They are of French formulae.

URGES VACATIONS FOR WIVES

BUCHAREST, Sept. 22. — A movement demanding vacations for wives has been created by a group of Rumanian feminist leaders.

Mrs. Otilia Ghibiu, one of the chief sponsors of the plan, thinks most marital difficulties could be avoided by allowing wives one or two months each year of complete freedom from household cares. The idea originated in Rumania from an American news dispatch describing the establishment of a camp for "wives only" at Vermilion, Ill.

CHANNEL ISLANDS REFUGE FROM HIGH ENGLISH TAXES

Legislation Under Way, However, to Prevent Escape from Levies in This Way.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Legislation is under way to settle in part the taxation difficulties between the Channel Islands of Guernsey and Jersey and the exchequer department of the British Government.

The legislation will conform to an agreement reached between the Lieutenant-Governors of these islands and the British Government to prevent British subjects and companies from moving to Guernsey and Jersey and registering there in order to avoid paying the higher English taxes.

If the proposed bill is passed by the British Parliament and the assemblies of the two islands, it will bring to an end negotiations which have lasted more than a decade. It also will solve one of the most difficult minor constitutional problems England has ever been called upon to face.

Because of the English income tax of four shillings in the pound, many wealthy Englishmen have established residences in the Channel Islands, where the taxes are only sixpence and 10 pence in the pound. British companies, too, in order to evade the corporation tax, have registered their incomes in the Channel Islands, even though carrying on business in England.

The Channel Islands, although they belog to England and acknowledge the suzerainty of the King, do not admit the control of Parliament.

Are You "Hitting on All Six"?

FOLKS, the human body is just like a good car, everything must be in good working order if you expect to get performance.

You can't expect to feel 100% if your liver is out of order, your stomach upset, nerves jumpy or bowels tied up. You must build up your vital forces and you weak, weary, despondent men and women who have been doctoring for ages trying to get back the vim and endurance of earlier years will be astonished, delighted and amazed to see how quickly strength, energy and vitality come back by using Tanlac.

For over 10 years this wonderful medicine has been helping whole families to build up sturdy, active bodies by purifying the blood, purging the poisons from the system and keeping the bowels open, free and regular. Go to your druggist now and get a bottle of Tanlac. Millions of folks have started back on the road to youth, health and happiness with this world-famous tonic and there is no reason why you, too, can't begin today to rebuild your worn-out tissues and revitalize your entire system. You will bless the day you started using Tanlac.

Just See How These Sufferers Were Helped

Mr. T. H. Bayes, 624 College St., Springfield, Mo., says: "After everything had failed us, along came Tanlac and easily and quickly ended 20 years' stomach suffering for my wife. She eats everything now, has gained 21 lbs. and has plenty of vim and energy."

Mr. Herbert Jones of 202 London Av., Lexington, Ky., says: "I suffered constantly from bad headaches, constipation and rheumatism. I was losing weight and sleeping poorly. After taking Tanlac two weeks, I felt better than in months!"

Mrs. Millie E. Roby of 2702 Guyan Av., Huntington, W. Va., says: "My blood was in bad condition, my stomach weakened and nerves unstrung. Tanlac changed me into a different woman. I've seldom had indigestion or constipation since taking it."

SUMMER OPERA HERE PRAISED IN NEW YORK

The Times and Morning Telegraph There and Kansas City Star Commend It.

In the 10 years since its inception, the St. Louis Municipal Opera has wrought "an honored place in American musical circles," the New York Times states in a recent article tracing the history of the city's open-air musical institution.

"The project, launched in a pioneering spirit, has grown from an experiment, persisted in in the face of deficit and failure, to an established institution with an honored place in the musical circles of America," the Times says. "Its development has been watched with interest that extends far beyond the city on the Mississippi, and its success has given encouragement to other enterprises of the kind elsewhere.

"Municipal opera in St. Louis was prehaps a bit forced in its inception. For many years the city had been too busy expanding to concern itself with artistic development, but it had artistic traditions that here and there struggled on in various groups. Soon after the war it was proposed that light opera be offered in summer. With this object in view, the Municipal Theater Association, originally organized to present a Fourth of July pageant, was revived and put to work.

"No recent visitor has 'done' St. Louis without finding his way to the hill in Forest Park where the Municipal Theater Association presents its open air programs. No outsider really tastes of the life of the city without remaining there through an evening's performance. In fact many outsiders make the journey to St. Louis for no other reason than that very purpose.

"The music lover who attended a production in the amphitheater its first summer, then returned this year, found much by way of contrast. Where there had been a vast, unfinished structure with which the city did not know quite what to do, is now a magnificently equipped plant."

The New York Morning Telegraph, devoted to theatrical and musical news, commented editorially on the Municipal Opera, in a recent issue, as follows:

"St. Louis music lovers, though ending the tenth season of the St. Louis Municipal Opera Association with a deficit, have invested the $6000 'in the red' for a mighty good cause. And we are happy to say that the energetic and patriotic backers of this most laudable enterprise have experienced no losses in previous years, and are confident that the association will be 'in the black' after the 1929 presentation.

"The 84 performances given by the association netted receipts of $380,000, with expenditures of approximately $386,000. As a matter of fact, the $6000 so-called loss was not a loss. It was a fine musical investment and the dividends paid to the thousands who heard the classical and delightful programs in Forest Park during the season just ended more than rewards the sponsors who furnished wholesome pleasure to those who crave the best and the most artistic in the field of musical divertissement. St. Louis is to be congratulated on its profitable—not loss—outdoor institution."

The Kansas City Star, in a recent editorial, said:

"All of Missouri has taken more than a neighborly interest in the municipal opera of St. Louis, which has grown into a real institution, inviting and rewarding attendance from St. Louis folk and from visitors of a large area."

THE MATCH 100 YEARS OLD; 6,000,000 A MINUTE USED

English Town Where Chemist Invented "Percussion Powder" Celebrates Event.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES, England, Sept. 22.—This little town in rural England is celebrating the one hundredth birthday of the match. It was here just a century ago that Johnny Walker, a chemist, invented a "percussion powder" which, placed on the ends of small sticks, became death flares for the old-fashioned tinder-box.

It is now estimated that 6,000,000 matches are lighted throughout the world every minute, while the world's consumption has been placed at 3,228,425,000,000 a year, based on an estimate of five matches a day per capita of population. Nearly a billion matches a day are used in the United States, while in England the annual consumption is 200 billion. In the United States the annual output is 300 billion.

If the matches manufactured each year were laid end to end, they would reach a distance of 95,538,145 miles, or 4000 times around the earth.

Chairman of Pro-Hoover Women.

Mrs. Frederick B. Wipperman, 1062 Thornby place, will be chairman of the Social Committee of the women's division, Engineers' National Hoover-for-President Club, which will have charge of the arrangements for a luncheon to be given at Hotel Statler Tuesday at noon. Gov. Davis of Idaho will be the speaker.

Women Voters' Leader to Speak.

Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, fifth vice president of the National League of Women Voters, will deliver a nonpartisan address on the national aspect of politics at the Y. W. C. A. building, 1411 Locust street, at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

ROAD BULLETIN RAKES GASOLINE TAX INCREASE

Organ of Bond Committee Says Object Attainable Without New Assessment.

Featuring an editorial under the caption "Do You Want Gas Tax Doubled?" replying to State Senator W. R. Painter's plan for a 2-cent increase in the present gasoline tax to take the place of a $75,000,000 road bond issue as provided in Proposition No. 3, the September issue of the Citizens' Road Bulletin, official publication of the Citizens' Road Bond Committee, is being distributed.

"Senator William R. Painter of Carrollton has torn the mask from the pretense of those who talk about finishing the Missouri highway system on the pay-as-you-go plan," the committee says. "Senator Painter knows this cannot be done to the satisfaction of any one, so he comes forward frankly with a proposal to double the gasoline tax as a means of avoiding another bond issue. A radical increase of automobile license fees would be the next step, no doubt.

"The Citizens' Road Bulletin does not believe the 600,000 automobile owners of Missouri want their gasoline taxes doubled or their state license fees increased. Those taxes and fees are already ample to complete the state highway system and add a farm-to-market system of roads in every county through the proposed $75,000,000 bond issue. A radical license of of additional taxation.

"Moral: Vote "Yes" scratch "No" on Proposition No. 3 and avoid a 100 per cent increase of your gasoline tax."

The September issue contains a complete set-up of the committee's campaign organization in virtually every county of the state, showing chairmen of the men's and women's campaign units. An additional feature of the number is a symposium of the tributes paid to the late John M. Malang, who died while campaigning for the bond amendment.

The text of the bond amendment is reproduced together with parts of both the political party platforms indorsing the proposition.

The campaign for the road bonds is reaching an intensive stage, according to Maj. Lloyd C. Stark, general chairman of the committee, and meetings are being held in all sections of the state. This will continue throughout October, and reports being received at state headquarters indicate a large majority vote will be cast in November for the amendment in virtually every county.

LORD ASQUITH'S DIARY

How Quarrels Over Gallipoli Fiasco Made Admiral Fisher Resign From British Cabinet

Sea Lord and Churchill in Bitter Feud, With Crisis in 1916, Followed by Angry Withdrawal of Veteran Naval Commander.

In this final installment of the war memoirs of Lord Asquith, he tells the inside story of the inception and inauguration of the famous expedition against the Turkish fortifications at Gallipoli on the Dardanelles in 1915. This turned out to be a disastrous enterprise for Great Britain and the Allies. One of the strongest opponents of the plan in the British Cabinet, in which Asquith was then Prime Minister, was Admiral John Fisher, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

In fact, the bitter disagreement over the Dardanelles expedition proved to be the climax of a long series of collisions over war policy between Admiral Fisher and Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, and led to Fisher's resignation in May, 1915, when the ill-fated operation at Gallipoli had borne out the veteran Admiral's original objection. Here is Lord Asquith's version of the historic controversy:

EARLY in January, 1915, the Grand Duke Nicholas, Commander-in-chief of the Russian Armies, made a very strong appeal to the Allies to combine in striking a serious—if possible, decisive—blow in the eastern theater of the war.

The consequences — political, diplomatic, economic, strategic—of a successful operation at that moment of all effort and resources on the West—the leaving of the East, so far as England and France were concerned, practically derelict—might have been fatal to the general cause of the Allies. That was, I believe, the opinion of every member, with a single exception, of the War Council, at that time.

After careful consideration of other alternatives, an expedition to the Dardanelles, with Constantinople as its objective, was resolved upon as the most likely to attain the desired result.

But the only practicable way under the then existing conditions was not—as every one would have preferred—a joint naval and military expedition, but a naval expedition alone. Why? Because Lord Kitchener, who strongly favored the project, declared that he had not available a sufficient number of troops for the purpose.

Survey of Men Is Made.

So far from the War Council taking no steps to satisfy themselves as to the correctness of Lord Kitchener's calculation, they spent the best part of three whole days—January 7, 8, 13—in surveying in the most comprehensive manner and in the greatest detail, all our available resources in men and the calls which could be made upon them.

Sir John French was sent for from France on purpose to assist in this investigation. We satisfied ourselves that Lord Kitchener was right, and, accordingly, Jan. 13, the Admiralty was ordered to prepare plans for an expedition, mainly naval in character, in February. The final decision was postponed for a fortnight, and, meanwhile, the French Admiralty was consulted, expressed its approval, and promised its co-operation.

Then came, Jan. 28, the critical meeting of the War Council, at which the final decision was taken. I assert unhesitatingly that at this time the whole of our expert naval opinion was in favor of a naval operation.

It is true that Lord Fisher disliked it. But his opinion, as he told me the same morning, was not based upon the technical or strategic demerits of a Dardanelles operation, but upon the fact that he preferred another and totally different objective in the Baltic. In that opinion, as Lord Kitchener appears to have pointed out to him, he was on the War Council in a minority of one.

Fisher Agrees to Go.

It was no doubt for that reason that he did not press his view. At the evening meeting the same day in Lord Fisher's presence, and with his consent, it was announced that he had decided to undertake the operation.

A fortnight later (Feb. 16) there was an important new development. The 29th Division—a fine regular division — which had previously been earmarked for other purposes, was believed to be now at liberty, and the repulse of the Turkish attack on the Suez Canal at the beginning of February had set free also a substantial part of the Egyptian garrison. The War Council ordered the division and a contingent of troops from Egypt to go to the Dardanelles to the support of the fleet.

Lord Kitchener was urgently pressed by both the British and French commanders in France not to divert the 29th Division from their theater, and for the moment yielded to their appeals. With much reluctance, his civilian colleagues deferred to his decision, and it was not until March 10 that he raised his embargo and consented to the dispatch of the division to the East.

Turks Make Use of Delay.

There is no doubt that this delay of three weeks gave the Turks time to improve their defenses. The first naval attack, March 19, failed in its purpose; the Admiral on the spot deemed it unwise to renew it, and the actual landing did not take place until April 25.

Personally, I was anxious, as I believe was Winston Churchill, head of the Admiralty, that the naval attack should be pushed. I thought at the time, and am still disposed to think, that it offered the best prospect for the prompt success of the expedition. But naval and military opinion was on the whole decidedly adverse to taking such a risk.

Apart from its later strategic developments, the early course of the Dardanelles operation had important political consequences at home. It led to the resignation of Lord Fisher. May 12 I received a letter from him of which the material part is as follows:

"It will be in your recollection that you saw me and the First Lord of the Admiralty in your private room prior to a meeting of the War Council to consider my protest against the Dardanelles undertaking when it was first mooted. With extreme reluctance and largely due to earnest words spoken to me by Kitchener I, b not resigning (as I see now should have done), remained a most unwilling beholder (and indeed a participator) of the gradual draining of our naval resources from the decisive theate of the war."

Enclosed was a memorandum for the War Council (dated May 11), in which he announced that he could not be a party to any order to Admiral de Robeck to make an attempt to pass the Dardanelles "until the shores have been effectively occupied."

Fisher's Resignation.

This was followed almost immediately by a letter (undated) in the following terms:

"My dear Prime Minister:

"As I find it increasingly difficult to adjust myself to the increasing policy of the First Lord in regard to the Dardanelles, have been reluctantly compelled to inform him this day that I am unable to remain as his colleague—and I am leaving at once for Scotland so as not to be embarrassed

THE LAKES-TO-THE-SEA WATERWAY

How Smith and Hoover Stand on This Important Question

New York Governor Put Up Strong Fight to Have Government Own and Operate Canal in His State as Most Advantageous, but Now Says He Is Willing to Leave Matter to Congress.

Republican Nominee Has Advocated St. Lawrence Route Over Long Period on Ground It Would Be Cheaper to Complete, Has Fewer Locks and Brings Middle West Closer to Europe.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.

THE ten questions published in an advertisement in a local newspaper which Gov. Alfred E. Smith answered at the conclusion of his Omaha speech included one of vital concern to the people of both the United States and Canada. The question was: "Are you still personally opposed to the St. Lawrence waterways?"

This question gave Smith an opportunity to emphasize the quite naturally different points of view of a Governor of New York and a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. His reply was:

"Why, if the gentlemen had just looked at my speech of acceptance, I made as clear a declaration on that as any man could make, and frankly said to the American people that while I was Governor of New York I favored the all-American route, because it went through that State; but inasmuch as the figures for the St. Lawrence canal as well as the all-American route were disputed by eminent engineers, I am willing to leave it to Congress after a study of the matter."

Until the Smith acceptance speech, it looked as though Smith and Herbert Hoover would take opposing views as to the best outlet from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard. Until that time Smith had been on record as belligerently for the all-American route, which includes an American canal around Niagara Falls and an enlargement of the present 14-foot deep New York State barge canal between Oswego and Albany.

1926 Letter Said Open Mind On Subject Was Impossible.

His preference for the New York State route over the St. Lawrence outlet was so marked that he wrote in 1926 to the New York Senators and Representatives at Washington that "in my consideration of the subject, that phrase so convenient to the vacillating, 'an open mind' has no place." This was taken as an indirect dig at President Coolidge, who at the time refused to say which route he preferred.

Hoover publicly espoused the St. Lawrence route as chairman of the President's Commission on the St. Lawrence waterway, which co-operated with a Canadian Commission, to study the feasibility of the St. Lawrence outlet. At the time he served as chairman of this Commission, he had the Commerce Department make an economic investigation of the two routes. The Commerce Department experts favored the St. Lawrence route, which goes by Montreal and Quebec and to the sea by way of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Regardless of the economic, diplomatic, engineering and power questions involved in a choice of the two routes, the impartial observer is forced to question the motives of the advocates of the New York route.

The present 14-foot New York barge canal cost $100,000,000 to develop. The present maintenance expense is slightly more than $10,000,000 a year. Its annual receipts are slightly less than $360,000 a year. It is used only to one-tenth of its capacity. Only five of its 53 warehouses are used for the purpose for which they were built and 16 of its terminals, which cost $3,000,000, received no freight in two years.

Says State Would Have Saved by Paying Freight.

Frederick S. Greene, New York Commissioner of Public Works, in a report to Gov. Smith, in urging that negotiations be started to turn the line over to the Federal Government for the basis of a ship canal, stated in 1926 that it would have been cheaper for the State to have paid rail charges on all the traffic handled than to have shipped it by way of the canal.

The New York canal is not only a white elephant. It is a ravenous white elephant.

After receiving Greene's report, Gov. Smith forwarded it to the State Legislature with the suggestion that Congress be memorialized to take over the canal, as Greene had suggested. This was done.

About the same time hearings were being held in Washington by a special Board of Army Engineers on the feasibility of the two routes. A preliminary report by this board had indicated that its findings would be adverse to the New York claims, and Representative S. Wallace Dempsey (Rep.) of New York, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, moved heaven and earth to influence the final findings, even to the extent of writing an ambiguous letter to Secretary of War Davis and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur asking for their opinion of the New York route as a military asset. At the time Dempsey was charged with attempting to influence the Army Board by getting general opinions from the Board's superior officers.

The Army Board reported, however, that after a consideration of the construction costs, maintenance charges and traffic, the project was economically unsound. A Federal investigation, started in 1918 and concluded in 1920, under Secretary of Commerce Redfield, similarly had advised against the project for the time being.

Cost of Deepening 14-Foot Canal Is Set at $506,000,000.

Undaunted by these reports, Chairman Dempsey and the New York supporters of the all-American route, declared the estimates of the special Army Board were too high on initial costs and maintenance and too low on traffic estimates. They presented no definite figures.

The estimate of the army engineers for the all-American route were $506,000,000 for deepening the present 14-foot New York barge canal to 25 feet, and $125,000,000 for a canal on the American side of Niagara Falls to compete with the almost completed Welland Canal on the Canadian side. The $125,000,000 Niagara Falls canal was proposed, because one of the talking points for the all-American route was that it should be all-American. The advocates of the all-American route could not logically accept the Canadian Welland Canal as a unit in Lake shipping.

The best sales talk for the all-American route was made by Gov. Smith in his letters to the New York Congressmen, at the time Chairman Dempsey was trying to go over the head of the special Army Board and get Congress to authorize the New York route and take the State's losing canal off its hands, which, incidentally, Congress refused to do.

In his letter, Gov. Smith said, in part: "It is natural and proper that every American should wish the supremacy of American ports continued; to accomplish this, a ship canal to the Lakes through American territory is a necessity.

Says Canals in U. S. Should Have Carried Freight Craft.

"The Canadian St. Lawrence canals in 1900 carried only 1,309,066 tons; in 1925 their business had increased to 6,206,988 tons. During the last eight years (1918 to 1925) the St. Lawrence canals carried 14,575,180 tons of freight that originated in the United States. Every ton of this should have been carried through an American canal to or through an American port.

"The American canal will not only provide the cheaper water rates desired by our Western States, but it will make Erie, Pa., Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Superior, Duluth and other Lake cities seaports, having the shortest water route to every Atlantic port and to the West Indies, Central and South American markets.

"That the American route is practical from the engineer's standpoint has been certified by the army engineers who recently reviewed the exhaustive reports of the Special Board, which surveyed and reported on this route in 1900. To my way of thinking, the advantages of the American route are so evident that only a few arguments are necessary to convince anyone not having some personal advantage to gain through the Canadian route that the American route is the one for this country at least to build.

"The distance from the Lakes to the Hudson is only 166 miles. It has been argued that canal navigation is too slow to meet modern traffic requirements, but a rate of five miles an hour is admitted to be practical on the canal proposed; this means that the actual canal journey can be made in 33½ hours.

Asserts Ships Could Reach Ocean by 50-Hour Cruise.

"The trip on the broad and deepened Hudson to Sandy Hook is 165 miles. Here steamers can run at full speed, let us say 10 miles an hour. The entire trip then from Lakes to ocean can be made in 50 hours. The American route runs through territory seldom troubled by fogs and ends at New York harbor where the ocean is free from the menace of icebergs.

"Finally, the success of any line of transportation depends upon the tonnage carried, and as the American canal will serve a region that per square mile produces more potential freight than any other territory in the

What the Candidates Have Said

HOOVER

HOOVER'S ACCEPTANCE SPEECH:

"NATURE has endowed us with a great system of inland waterways. Their modernization will comprise a most substantial contribution to Midwest farm relief and to the development of 20 of our interior States. This modernization includes not only the great Mississippi system, with its joining of the Great Lakes and the heart of Midwest agriculture to the Gulf, but also a shipway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic. These improvements would mean so large an increment in farmers' prices as to warrant their construction many times over. There is no more vital method of farm relief."

SMITH

HOOVER AT WEST BRANCH, IA., AUG. 21.

"WE HAVE another great opportunity of relief in the building of a shipway from the Great Lakes to the sea. Our engineers have recommended the St. Lawrence route as the preferable outlet. The administration has undertaken negotiations with Canada upon the subject. If these negotiations fail we must consider alternative routes. In any event, the completion of this great system of barge lines on the rivers and the connecting of the Lakes to the Gulf, of opening a shipway from the Lakes to the sea, will make an effective transportation system 12,000 miles in length, penetrating 20 Midwest States. It will connect these States with the seaboard at the Gulf on one hand and with the North Atlantic on the other."

SMITH'S ACCEPTANCE SPEECH:

"CERTAIN areas of our country are deeply interested in opening a direct route from the Middle West to the sea by way of the Great Lakes and adjacent waterways. Controversy has arisen over the relative merits of the St. Lawrence route or the all-American route. As Governor of New York, I have heretofore expressed a preference for the all-American route, basing my views on engineers' reports made to me. The correctness of these reports and also of those favoring the St. Lawrence route have been challenged.

"As President of the United States, therefore, it would be my clear duty to restudy this question impartially upon engineers' reports, the accuracy of which must be above question. When the results of such a study are given to Congress, I am entirely willing to abide by the decision of Congress."

SMITH IN A LETTER TO NEW YORK SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 15, 1926.

"I AM convinced that a ship canal from Lakes to sea has become a necessity to the commercial needs of our country; that it some day will be built is inevitable; that the promise of both of our major parties should be kept; that the time to fulfill that promise is now; that the route of the American canal following the long established line of traffic is the best one to build, and that an American canal is the only one for which American capital should be spent."

French Attitude in Rhineland Is 'Brigandage Among Nations' Of Europe, Says Lloyd George

Former British Premier Considers Germany Has Fulfilled Its Obligations Under Versailles Treaty.

By David Lloyd George.
War-Time Premier of England.
(Copyright, 1928.)

LONDON, Sept. 22.

IT IS some satisfaction to note that an agreement has been reached among six Powers at Geneva that the question of the early evacuation of the Rhineland which has at last been raised officially by the German Chancellor, Herr Mueller, should be studied further by financial experts; it is a question which has perhaps a greater bearing on the prospects of future war or peace than any other. There is no humiliation so bitter for a proud and martial nation as the occupation of its soil in time of peace by a foreign army.

The Manchester Guardian, in a annuity of 125 millions sterling powerful leading article, dwells on the character of the military occupation of German territory. "British, French and Belgian troops are on the soil of a friendly Power, a member of the League of Nations, a partner to the Locarno agreement, a signatory of the Kellogg Pact, a highly civilized, democratic republic — Germany. These troops hold joint maneuvers on German soil, maneuvers in which an imaginary campaign is fought against an imaginary German attack.

"They arrest, imprison, or banish German citizens, they interfere with the liberty of the press, and they hold up the building of bridges and railway stations. They occupy rooms, houses, hotels and barracks that are badly needed in a country with a severe housing shortage. And all this they do only in the hope that Germany may weaken under the pressure of the hardships inflicted upon her citizens and offer a price so that these hardships may come to an end."

Terms Have Been Met.

That humiliation becomes naturally intolerable when the nation in question has been led to expect —had in fact been definitely promised by the terms of a treaty —that it could obtain liberation of its territory by making a supreme effort to fulfill honorably its treaty obligations under a treaty dictated by its conqueror or conquerors, and when it can claim to have accomplished that effort, and liberation does not follow.

Now that is the legal and formal position as laid down by the Paris Conference of 1919 in the Versailles Treaty. These are the actual words of clause No. 431 of that treaty: "If before the expiration of a period of 15 years, Germany complies with all the undertakings resulting from the present treaty, the occupying forces will be withdrawn immediately."

Thus it will be seen that the Allies, when they limited the occupation to 15 years while they foresaw that payments of reparation would extend far beyond that period, manifested clearly by the terms of the treaty itself as well as by two annexes, a readiness to relinquish the pledge of an occupied Rhineland as soon as Germany had solidly established its good faith and good will. Chancellor Mueller maintains, and not without reason, that Germany has fulfilled the conditions. No one seriously challenges the Chancellor's statement that Germany has carried out the peace treaty imposed upon it, in letter and in spirit.

Allies Still Are Armed.

The Allies have not challenged it. They promised disarmament —our continental allies have not yet begun to disarm. They promised to evacuate the Rhineland as soon as Germany complied with all its undertakings. They decline even to discuss the fulfillment of that promise unless Germany pays blackmail. The Allied Commission of Control itself and the Ambassadors' Conference, as representing the Allied Governments, had to declare that Germany's disarmament as stipulated in the treaty had now been completed.

Regarding reparations, Germany now has scrupulously pursued for five years the policy laid down in the Dawes plan, and is now beginning to pay a standard

Boundaries of 1919 Set.

Under the Locarno arrangement, Germany definitely recognized of its own free will the 1919 frontiers with France and Belgium, and further undertook not to seek to change by violence its unfair and intolerable eastern frontier with Poland. M. Briand, in one of the letters addressed by him to Germany during the Locarno negotiations, wrote, "The conclusion of the Locarno agreement has borne witness to the desire which animates the governments which are parties to those agreements and who are inspired by peaceful intentions to introduce into their relations a spirit of good will and confidence."

Under the Kellogg pact, to which France and Poland are signatories along with Germany, the latter has made a more general if solemn declaration renouncing war as an instrument of National policy. But there is something even more compelling than those two pledges given by the Reich, and that is under the Locarno treaty, the pledge of Great Britain once more to defend France and Belgium against German aggression should such an aggression ever take place, as also to defend Germany against French aggression. Now in view of this British guarantee which carries with it Italy's indorsement, what need is there for France to maintain a large army in the Rhineland for the unnecessary coercion of Germany?

The Locarno pact was to be a pact of Franco-German reconciliation, facilitated, thanks to the British and Italian guarantee, by the removal of French fears of Germany, but Great Britain, by its guarantee given both to France and to Germany, assumed along with the tremendous obligations equally powerful rights since British blood and treasure were to pay for any breach of peace by either France or Germany in defense of the victimized Nation. Great Britain had every right to insist on the shaping of the Franco-German relations in such a way as to render those tremendous obligations as little dangerous as possible to the British people.

French Policy Provocative.

Great Britain has the right to tell France, "If you are to rely on me for protection against unjust aggression, you must pursue a policy which is least likely to provoke aggression through its intolerance and provocativeness." Such a policy undoubtedly is not of maintaining the French army on German soil not only after Germany had fulfilled in letter and spirit its treaty obligations, but

On the Hoover Band Wagon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THINK you was there ever a candidate for anything so burdened with "old men of the sea" as is poor, inexperienced, wishfully-ambitious Herbert? Just look a moment; from the day when Rush Holland went back to work for him among the patronage dispensers and sellers of the South, every kind of parasite and barnacle and incubus has attached itself to or climbed aboard this band wagon.

Vare of Philadelphia got on, bringing along his soaking wet gang of bootleggers, gangsters and racketeers.

Mellon of Pittsburg climbed aboard, bringing his distillery and aluminum trust crowd along, together with his own guilty knowledge of Willie Hays and his greasy bonds.

Curtis of Kansas was shoved aboard, pledged to find some way to make the careless voter forget what Senator Curtis had said of Herbert in the preconvention times, and laboring under the stigma of "nit-wit" applied to him by one of his present fellow barnacles.

Bold Bill White, prosecutor, judge and jury of a kangaroo court out in a little Kansas village, clawed his way on the wagon without, so far as the record shows, ever even attempting to apologize for or to "withdraw" the "fat capon" epithet; and, once aboard, windbag that he is, he started to do his best, such as it is, to alienate all the clear-thinking voters he could reach.

"Me" being aboard, of course "Henry," also from Kansas, had to find room for his corporosity; the same Henry who in his own State has a well-deserved reputation for peculiar aptness in doing the wrong thing at the wrong time.

Work, a doctor of sorts who had better be practicing his profession at whatever cost to his patients, became the chauffeur, and proceeded to shake things up by hitting all the holes, mud and otherwise, and by finding as many blind alleys and detours as possible only to an inept.

What a list it grows to be! Meddling Mabel Willebrandt, the Ku Klux Klan, the Anti-Saloon League, the politico-preachers, Roach Straton, Willie Rannie Hearst, Bobbie Owen, who begged in vain for Tammany votes in 1924; Terrible Tom from Alabam'; what a company of gay derring-doers have sought and found hot seats on the wagon of our sacro-sanct, see-no-evil, speak-no-evil, hear-no-evil Herbert!

And look again; way down in the bed of the wagon, out of sight, Big Bill from Chicago and his gang; Andy Fall from New Mexico, Brazen Bill Hays, morals regulator, and with them out of sight, way down in the dank, smelly straw, with the vermin, way down, a great load of backbiters, cooties, whisperers, libelers, scandal mongers and vapid social snobs! How to high heaven the whole load smells!

Yet Herbert's nostrils seem to stand it well. So far as known, he has not had to hold his nose at any one of his fellow passengers. Perhaps he has always had a weak set of olfactory nerves; or perhaps he has become so accustomed to evil smells in his last seven years in the Harding-Fall-Denby-Coolidge-Roy West-Daugherty Cabinet that his smeller does not smell; or perhaps it is not a question with him of how he may achieve his opportunist ambition, but merely a question of achievement, no matter how!

If such a motley crew can again, for the third successive time put it over on the great (sic) American people, then I for one shall hereafter confine my reading to the American Mercury and the novels of S. Lewis. NAVILLUS.

Most Vital Election Since 1860.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE writer has long been an admirer of yours and your great paper. In this age of pussyfooting, hypocrisy and political dodging, it is indeed an inspiration to have the pleasure of reading one of your editorials.

You know, I had the honor of serving 16 months and 10 days in the United States Marine Corps during the World War. Some of my closest comrades during that period were members of the Roman Catholic Church. I am a Southern Methodist, and I want to say this—I am greatly humiliated to think that today a distinguished citizen, and a Governor of one of the foremost states of the Union, is being vilified and denied the votes of many of our citizens upon the sole fact that he is a member of the Roman Catholic church. The eyes of the world are on our country, awaiting the outcome of this presidential election. If the Honorable Alfred E. Smith is defeated, then the Statue of Liberty is a mockery. This is the most vital presidential election since the days of Abraham Lincoln. HOWARD BRADBURY,
Jefferson City, Mo.

NO REGISTRATION, NO VOTE.

There will be a clean sweep of the St. Louis registration books in preparation for new registration, in which every citizen qualified to vote will be required to register in order to cast his ballot.

This week, beginning Monday, will offer the only opportunity for those who are not sick or absent from the city, to register. The registration days for the city will be Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. For the County they will be Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday. Places will be open in each ward and township for registration.

One of the greatest if not the greatest menace to good government and the welfare of the country is the apathy of citizens toward registering and voting. During the last 34 years there has been a decline in the percentage of citizens casting their ballots who are entitled to vote. This percentage of decrease has been manifest not only in municipal and state elections, but in presidential electons, where it is presumed that every citizen who is at all concerned about the welfare of the country should vote.

The percentage of the vote cast in the presidential election of 1880 was 84. In 1920 it was 49.3. After a vigorous campaign against apathy, the percentage in 1924 was increased only to 51.2. In short, in that year out of eligible citizens of voting age numbering 56,819,000, only 29,091,417 voted. In the Harding election a minority of citizens of voting age participated in the election. And in the Coolidge election, in 1924, there was only 1.3 per cent over one-half the eligible voters. The vote cast for the successful candidate was a small minority of the total vote.

Our presidential elections are therefore decided by minority votes. Elections in off years have been marked by more discouraging figures.

Recognizing the danger to the country in the indifference of citizens to government and their failure to vote in elections, nation-wide campaigns have been made by leading public men and organizations to arouse citizens to a sense of responsibility and duty in regard to the election of their officials, who are charged with the administration of government, in municipal, state and national elections.

The deep interest manifested by citizens in the presidential campaign this year holds out a hope of a further increase of the percentage of voters. But it is only a hope. The fulfillment of the hope depends entirely upon the individual citizen; whether he realizes his responsibility and exercises the privilege of voting, thus participating in the choice of the officials who will control the Government. It should be borne in mind by citizens that not only the conduct of the National Government but the conduct of State government and the choice of officers who will protect them by the enforcement of criminal laws will depend upon their votes. No citizen can complain of bad government or lax enforcement of law or of high taxes, or any of the evils of bad government if he or she does not cast a ballot and thus determine what sort of government we shall have, whether officials shall be honest and competent or dishonest and incompetent.

Every citizen should register. Every citizen should vote. But whether he intends to vote now or not, he should be prepared to vote. He may be aroused to a sense of responsibility and duty by election day and desire to vote. If he is not registered he is barred from the polls.

No registration, no vote.

OIL ENGINES IN AIRPLANES.

While designers and makers of airplane power plants strive, and successfully, too, for greater and greater reliability for gas engines, a new contender for the job of airplane propulsion is coming up in experimental machine shops.

It is the Diesel engine, lightened, changed in form and adapted in design to meet the needs of the airplane. Recently a Diesel, weighing only three pounds to the horsepower, passed a series of favorable flight tests. Three pounds to the horsepower is a practical distribution of weight for airplane practice and it will undoubtedly be cut down with further experimentation. If the Diesel designers can then succeed in keeping the reliability which belongs to the heavier engines of that type, the oil burning engine will unquestionably displace the showier, but more capricious, gas engine, particularly for commercial airplane work.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE.

That no serious scientific theory attributes man to the Western Hemisphere in the long period when he was evolving into his present estate, and that all science rejects any view that man came here except by way of the Alaskan bridge, is the interesting thing about the International Congress of Americanists now meeting at Washington.

Dr. Alex Hrdlicka, noted American anthropologist, thinks this point has been proved by science and closed to further discussion. Man did not live here in the time when the Java man was learning to walk upright, and in the days when the superb Cro-Magnon wandered the forests of Northern Europe there was not a specimen of homo sapiens from Greenland to the Terra del Fuego. The occupation of the Western Hemisphere was, in truth, an adventure. It was probably the greatest adventure man has had. First, the Asiatics came. Wandering out on the Kamchatkan Peninsula, they encountered the stepping stones to Alaska. That must have been a long time ago, because when the Europeans came man had penetrated to every part of the hemisphere. If the occupation begun by the Spaniards was a great adventure for the Europeans, how much greater must have been that of the Asiatics who tired of wandering the hemisphere before the Europeans came!

Dr. Hrdlicka regrets that, having settled this question, the American anthropologist, like Othello, finds his occupation gone. That is to a degree true. Nevertheless, with 20 archeological expeditions from American educational and scientific institutions working in Mexico and Yucatan alone in the last two years, the field of interest in the Americans before ourselves is far from exhausted.

WHERE DOES MR. CAULFIELD STAND?

Judge Caulfield stated an obvious fact in his speech to the Second Ward Republicans that "Al Smith cannot give you beer." He did not state a fact when he characterized Gov. Smith's position on the eighteenth amendment as "but a plea for votes of Republicans opposed to prohibition."

Gov. Smith has repeatedly said that he cannot himself liberalize the Volstead law or modify the constitutional amendment. He does say that, as President, he could recommend to Congress such changes as seem to him desirable from our experience with prohibition, and that such changes can only be made by order of the people.

That is Gov. Smith's position. He is opposed to constitutional prohibition because he believes it is not the best way to handle the liquor problem and to promote true temperance.

Judge Caulfield has not clarified his own position on this question. He has said that he did not believe prohibition was the best way to handle the liquor problem. He told an audience of women in Kansas City that there had never been a drop of liquor in his home in the 25 years of his married life. He has also said that he stands squarely on the Republican National platform adopted at Kansas City. We infer from his latest statement that he does not believe that anything can be done about prohibition.

It may be that the majority of the American people are committed irrevocably to prohibition. It may be that the eighteenth amendment can never be repealed, can never be modified, that it is there to stay forever and ever. Certainly a great many people feel that way about it—not only those who approve it, but many who think it the gravest mistake we have made in public policy. Gov. Smith certainly knows the status of public sentiment if he is the "master of political science" which Charles Evans Hughes says he is, he certainly knows it. Knowing it, he challenges it. And he is the first man of major political consequence to issue that challenge in plain, unmistakable language. He is the first candidate facing the national electorate to recommend fundamental changes in this sumptuary law without quibble or straddle. Perhaps this is poor politics. Be that as it may, the man's courage and candor are in admirable contrast to the evasiveness and cowardice and sophistry with which the politicians of both parties have dodged this issue.

Gov. Smith, of course, wants votes. But he is not deceptively angling for votes. He does not promise beer to the Republicans of St. Louis or anybody else anywhere. He does solemnly pledge himself, if elected, to employ the powers of his office to rid the country of the bootlegger, to close the speakeasies, to end the carnival of crime, corruption, organized terrorism and official lawlessness with which this "noble experiment" is drenching the country and sapping the very foundations of orderly government.

Does Judge Caulfield agree with Gov. Smith that this sumptuary law should be modified, "by fundamental changes," or does he agree with Mr. Hoover that prohibition is a "noble experiment" to be continued unchanged and unchangeable at whatever cost?

Is he for modification or opposed to modification?

He has raised the question and he ought, we think, in fairness to himself, his city and State, to answer it.

THE CASE FOR WIDE HIGHWAYS.

Inasmuch as widening some of the exits from Missouri cities is an objective of the prospective $75,000,000 bond issue, the testimony of Edward N. Hines, for 20 years master road builder of Wayne County, Mich., in which there is not a narrow highway left, will interest Missourians.

"The day of two lane highways is past in all motor traffic areas," says Mr. Hines. "Building 18 and 20 foot highways is the height of extravagance where traffic is heavy. A narrow road goes to pieces under double traffic, whereas under triple traffic the same pavement may not show a sign of wear. On the wider roads overloads do not fatigue the body and surface of the paving, but where there are only two lanes of vehicles they keep pounding at the same lines so continuously that the construction gives way.

"We have to recognize the overloads—the busses, trucks and vans. They are too heavy for narrow pavements, so in Wayne County we put them on wide pavements. It is folly to make load limitations, nor is it necessary. The heaviest vehicles can run over a 40-foot pavement without injuring it. Moreover, the wide road increases speed and makes traffic safer."

Detroit, which is in Wayne County, is building 19 204-foot radials from the center of the city into the surrounding country. They carry two 40-foot one-way pavements, with an 84-foot parkway between. The Grand River avenue road is being extended to Grand Rapids, 130 miles, in this uniform width.

It may be seen from this how far Missouri, with all her admirable progress, is behind the modern traffic problem.

If Charlie Hay were a right good sport he would go out and work as hard for Roscoe C. Patterson as Roscoe is working for him.

A DRY CRUSADER TALKS.

F. M. Guinn of Vandalia, Ill., "a crusader in the cause of prohibition for 30 years," who has announced his decision to support Gov. Smith, has been taken to task by F. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon League. He has replied in a striking statement.

When the Anti-Saloon League "indorsed the Small-Thompson-Smith aggregation (in the senatorial campaign of two years ago) in the face of its brazen corruption and its crimes against Illinois and society at large," Mr. Guinn washed his hands of it. He thinks, too, that the league would be hard put to it to justify its support of Mr. Hoover, if that position implies indorsement of the enforcement of prohibition laws under the Republican administration which he characterizes as "a sickening and dismal failure."

Mr. Guinn is convinced that a change is imperative—either a change in the methods of enforcement or a change in the prohibition laws. He accepts Gov. Smith's promise to enforce the laws to the best of his ability, and concludes with the prediction that "four more years of weak, hypocritical enforcement such as we have had * * * will cause such an uprising as to mean the end of all liquor regulation."

Such judgment, coming from a lifelong prohibitionist, commands respect. His reminder, too, of the Anti-Saloon League's alliance with the Small-Thompson-Smith combine is a pertinent rebuke. That is one "damned spot" of so-called practical politics which neither Dr. McBride nor the league can blot out.

"DOUBLE, DOUBLE TOIL AND TROUBLE; FIRE BURN, AND CAULDRON BUBBLE."

Liquor Laws in Scandinavia

Sweden employs the Bratt system, adopted in 1914, by which liquor is sold to companies whose profits are limited, and these dispense it in regulated quantities to the people; Norway, after prohibiting hard liquor in 1919, reversed itself in 1926 and now follows the British plan.

From the New York World.

NOWHERE in the world 100 years ago was the abuse of strong drink a greater evil than in the Scandinavian Peninsula. Hard drinking, always more prevalent in cold climates than in mild ones, was pushed to an extreme in the long winter nights. After the abolition of the Crown monopoly in distilling the industry was practically thrown open to unlimited competition, and the urge to increase profits by increasing sales led to dangerous debauchery. From this condition arose attempts to control the use of spirits which date back almost as far as the famous Maine law in this country.

What was widely known as the Gothenburg system was introduced in Sweden more than 70 years ago and has been the subject since of frequent alteration and experiment. But pretty constantly the variations of the law followed these lines: (1) It was sought to remove entirely the element of private profit from increased liquor sales. (2) The sales of beer and wines was not interfered with, beer being practically free of tax burden. (3) The principle of local option was observed, rural communities commonly voting dry.

Under the Gothenburg plan the small distilleries were put out of business and the big ones subjected to strict control. The actual sale of hard liquors was intrusted to limited-dividend monopoly companies licensed by the community. The profits, after a payment of 5 per cent to the monopoly, were to be devoted to public purposes. In 1894, in Norway, these excess profits went 65 per cent to the state, 20 per cent to the company and 15 per cent to the municipality. Sweden somewhat later was pursuing a similar policy.

Norway had always retained full control of its own liquor laws, but they followed the Swedish policies in the main. Since the divorce of the two countries in 1905 they have diverged considerably in policy, while not abandoning—except for a few years in Norway, later to be referred to—the principle of the abolition of private profit in a business the increase of which is against public policy, for it was recognized that so long as profit from hard drinking was permitted the profiteers would inevitably seek to increase sales.

At present Sweden is administering the Bratt system, adopted in 1914. All wine and spirits containing over 2.6 per cent alcohol are sold through the Wine and Spirits Control to local companies, whose profits are limited, which dispense the liquors to hotels and restaurants and to individuals. The buyer must provide himself with a "Notbok" of detachable slips which he must sign and detach at every purchase. This limits the quantity that may be bought monthly. To drunkards Notboks are not supposed to be issued at all. Under this system Sweden derives an annual revenue of about $70,000,000 from the business. The known consumption of hard liquors has greatly decreased. Arrests for drunkenness have been cut in half since prewar days.

Of late years the example of Norway in experimenting with liquor systems has been more widely noticed than that of Sweden because of her brief trial and recent abandonment of an attempt at prohibition. In 1919 the majority of the Norwegians voted in favor of a law prohibiting the sale of stronger drinks altogether while permitting the sale of light wine and beer under restrictions. But it was as impossible in Norway as it is in the United States to prevent bootlegging. The deeply indented coast made running in of foreign liquors easy; and in 1921 Spain compelled a revision of the law to favor strong Spanish wine by a threat to bar the sale in Spain of Norwegian salted fish for Friday dinners. The results were altogether so unsatisfactory that in October, 1926, another plebiscite was held. It went wet by 521,425 to 421,292. The 1919 vote had gone dry 483,918 to 311,526. In seven years a great change in public sentiment had taken place and Norway was ready again to try restriction.

The new law, passed May, 1927, follows British example in limiting the hours within which liquor may be sold to from 3 to 11 p. m. Liquor may not be sold on holidays, or the day before, or the day after. Importation of spirits is a government monopoly and sales are made through official stores, as in Quebec. Profits proportional to those realized in Sweden are expected; they go to the government. While it is too soon to estimate accurately the workings of the law, one year's experience in Norway seems to show, as in Sweden, a diminution of drunkenness, a substitution of wine and beer for hard liquors, an increased respect for law and law observance. Neither in Norway nor in Sweden is there complaint that the law is not enforced.

For a long lifetime Norway and Sweden have thus been a testing ground for modern theories and systems of liquor legislation. Apparently they have succeeded best when they have not attempted the impossible.

TRAVESTY.

From the Public Ledger.

IN the inner sanctuaries of the prohibition system in Washington there is high glee whenever "a person of social prominence" may be caught in an enforcement net and held up as a drinker of what now passes for champagne or harder liquor. In the last day or two men of standing in the world of banking and business have been summoned to the Federal Building because their names appeared on a bootlegger's list. Is the old devil of demagogy sitting at a desk somewhere in the prohibition section of the Treasury Department?

If Mrs. Willebrandt and her satellites wish to cover their futility by persecutions of reputable and law-abiding citizens, they should pay less attention to the Social Register. They should take the lists of such bootleggers as they sometimes catch and proceed in an orderly fashion from A to Z. Social distinctions of any sort in law enforcement and dry propaganda are ridiculous and detestable.

BALLADE FOR THE SEASON'S END.

All things of earth shall pass away,
The fated lips of Helen, red,
The Caesars boast their mighty day,
They, too, are gathered to the dead;
All, all, the dusty way must tread,
Nor from that fate exemption claim;
Though life to death has ever led,
Vacation post cards stay the same.

We know not when life's jesting play
Shall reach the final act we dread;
We do not choose what lines we say,
Nor yet what must remain unsaid;
Too soon is snapped that fitful thread
Which ends our days for praise or blame,
Yet if the scene the actors fled
Vacation post cards stay the same.

The lovely rose will know decay,
The lovely rose where Caesar bled,
The fairest forms in dust we lay,
To thirsty death all blood is shed;
We all must seek that narrow bed,
Death stills the ear to voice of fame,
And of our glory leaves a shred—
Vacation post cards stay the same.

L'ENVOI.

Sweet Prince, if you your fame would spread
Long after death has stilled your name,
No monuments, but cards instead—

Smith and Hoover on Lakes-to-Sea Waterway

country, this canal should, and in all probability will, carry more freight than any other inland waterway.

"To say that a ship canal to the coast should be an aid to our national defense in time of war is to state a fact as obvious as that rations are needed for troops. In recent letters to the chairmen of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of Congress both the Secretaries of War and the Navy so declared themselves.

"It is of small moment that, following the visit of certain politicians to the White House, the wording of their first letters was somewhat modified; the fact remains that the Secretary of War stated:

"'In the event of a great war the transportation of agricultural products and raw material of the Middle West to the Atlantic Seaboard and the thickly populated industrial areas of the Eastern and New England states would impose a great burden on the railroads. The probable resulting congestion could be relieved by the further developing of the waterways connecting the Great Lakes with the Hudson River.'

Quotes Secretary of Navy as Approving Canal in U. S.

"And the Secretary of the Navy said: 'I am of the opinion that the proposed all-American deeper waterway, connecting the Hudson River with the Great Lakes, would be a very important addition to the transportation system of the country and would be therefore an important asset to the National defense.'

"In my consideration of this subject, that phrase so convenient to the vacillating, an open mind, has no place.

"I am convinced that a ship canal from Lakes to sea has become a necessity to the commercial needs of our country; that it will some day be built is inevitable; that the promise of both our major parties should be kept, that the time to fulfill that promise is now, that the route of the American canal following the long established line of traffic, is the best one to build and that an American canal is the only one for which American capital should be spent."

Herbert Hoover's advocacy of the St. Lawrence project is too well known to require description in detail here. In addition to his report as chairman of the President's Commission, his views can be found in a speech he made before the New Haven Chamber of Commerce in March, 1927. In this speech he summed up his opposition to the New York route in these words.

"Our army engineers have made exhaustive examination of the New York route. If it were constructed wholly upon American soil, it would cost over $630,000,000. If it were constructed on the shorter route from Oswego to Albany, it would not be an all-American route, for ships would then need to pass through the Canadian Welland Canal around Niagara. In this case it would cost $500,000,000. In neither case would there be any electrical power development.

Cost of St. Lawrence Plan Below That of New York.

"The construction of the St. Lawrence route after realization of the power may recover its entire cost, but in any event intermediate plans imply a cost of less than one-third the shortest New York route. There are also navigation questions which render the St. Lawrence a more economical transport route than the New York line. It brings all mid-America 600 miles nearer to Europe than by the New York route. The New York route would require slow navigation through 128 miles of canals against 21 miles of canals along the St. Lawrence. There would be stops for 20 locks and 54 bridges on the New York, whereas the St. Lawrence route would have stops for nine locks and eight bridges.

"I would not say that the New York route is never to be contemplated. If for any reason our Canadian friends do not wish to join in such an enterprise, I am certain that the needs of our own population will sooner or later compel us undertaking the freeing of lake shipping to the sea, even if it does cost $500,000,000."

Hoover's advocacy of the St. Lawrence route has won him votes in the Northwest. At the Kansas City convention, Senator Nye of North Dakota told the writer that Hoover's position on the St. Lawrence outlet might be the deciding factor in determining how the Northwest would vote. This, of course, was before Smith had been nominated and Nye assumed he would be for the New York route.

Nye Tells Why Northwest Favors St. Lawrence Plan.

"Why does the Northwest prefer the St. Lawrence route?" Nye was asked.

"We feel that the St. Lawrence Canal will be built," Nye replied. "We also have a feeling that some of the advocates of the New York route are not acting in good faith and have no intention of building a New York ship canal that will take traffic from the railroads. We think that some of those advocates are talking for the New York project because they believe that if they can create opposition to the St. Lawrence plan they will be able to stall off action on the New York development.

"My people have no great love for the New York railroads and the port of New York. We feel that we have been held up by the railroads and discriminated against by the port of New York in the matter of transshipments. We have no fear of Canada and are willing to see our products go through the St. Lawrence."

The question of the railroads brings up an interesting incident. Gov. Smith complained that American shippers were using the present 14-foot St. Lawrence Canal rather than the 14-foot New York Canal. He also questioned the design of the war-time barges of the New York Canal. What he did not mention was the fact that the bridges over the St. Lawrence Canal were of the draw or broken type, which allowed tall ships to pass, while the fixed New York bridges had a clearance of only 15 feet, which did not take into account the smoke stacks and the deck appurtenances. It has been charged by some friends of waterway transportation that the New York railroads deliberately erected such fixed bridges with the idea of obstructing waterway development.

Hoover says that the railroads and lake shore cities of New York have nothing to fear from the St. Lawrence development. He has pointed out that the total tonnage available for water transports through the ship way is only 5 per cent of the total present traffic of the railroads operating between lakes and seaboard.

"It will require at best 10 or 12 years to complete the shipway," he says, "and if we study the annual increase in business over these railroads we find that with our natural growth their business will increase 20 per cent while we build the shipway."

French Attitude on Rhineland Denounced By Lloyd George

after the signing of a treaty of reconciliation consolidated by the British guarantee in question.

Continuance of the occupation can only delay real reconciliation, and by sowing seeds of hate, also sow seeds of another Franco-German conflict which inevitably will implicate the whole of Europe. American opinion sees this clearly, and so does British opinion, which, because of the sacrifices involved for this country, is more vitally interested than even America. Unfortunately this verity is ignored by the British Foreign Office under its present regime.

It is difficult to speak with candor of the policy of the British Foreign Office whilst its chief is struggling back to health after a severe illness. But that policy as continued and accentuated by Lord Cushendun is one of barely veiled subservience to France, which is beginning to arouse the alarm and condemnation even among the followers of the present Conservative Government.

Great Britain under this regime, instead of pressing its views as guarantor of French security, is allowing this policy to be dictated by the guaranteed. Sir Austen Chamberlain, it is true, has declared again and again in the House of Commons that the British Government would view with favor the early evacuation of the Rhineland, but he had declared at the same time that Great Britain will take no active steps to promote that evacuation. It is a matter for all the allies, which in practice means that it is a matter for France itself to settle with Germany, Great Britain merely playing the part of spectator who will underwrite or countersign.

France Wants Money.

And what does France, and what do Poincare and Briand want? France wants first of all a big sum in cash mobilization of the Dawes railway and industrial bonds. These total 800,000,000 sterling. Even if France were content with 200,000,000 for itself, this would imply, unless its allies were to be forgotten in the bargain, a total issue of very nearly 400,000,000 sterling. Now such an issue is impossible in Europe, the German contribution would be small, the British contribution could only be small, so France coolly says to Germany, "If you cannot find the money, why don't you get your American friends to find it for you or find a little less in the money market, whilst reducing or condoning France's war debt to the United States?" Failing such a cash mobilization of reparations, France flatly declares it will remain in the Rhineland at least until the time fixed by the treaty, 1935.

If the vexed question of reparations can be wiped out once and for all, then the continuing menace to peace will be removed. But fulfillment of the sacred pledge by the allies ought not to depend on the payment of a sum of money. France practically says to its vanquished neighbor, "In spite of solemn treaties which I not only signed but actually drafted myself, I propose to hold you as prisoner unless and until your friends ransom you at a colossal price."

Calls It Brigandage.

This is worse than the ethics of the Atlas Mountains. Does the Kellogg pact excuse this form of brigandage amongst nations? After it was signed came this threat of continued occupation of Germany by troops of one of the signatories in defiance of treaties whose terms were dictated by them. But France not only requires cash reparation before it evacuates the Rhineland, it wants additional and permanent guarantees of security over and over above those contained in the Versailles treaty, the Locarno pact, and the Kellogg pact. France now has put forward through Briand a suggestion for foreign supervision of the demilitarized Rhineland which would extend beyond 1935, and imply perpetual international servitude on Germany's part.

There would be a roaming commission consisting of representatives of Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy on the one hand, and Germany with, needless to say, the French Germans, ready at the slightest suspicion or request of France, to spread her activities all over the Rhineland to ferret out some alleged stolen or hidden partridge. Germany would be in a minority of one. If France would consent to a commission on which the neutral element was predominant, and if it would also consent to the institution on its own side of the frontier, of a demilitarized zone on the lines and scale of the Rhineland, Germany and other nations as well might take seriously the proposal for a so-called commission of inspection and conciliation.

Patriotism covers a multitude of meannesses, but for two great nations to say to a beaten foe, "It is true that we promised to set you free as soon as you carried out your bargain to break your sword, but now that you have done so and are thus rendered defenseless, we don't mean to release you unless you pay us a huge sum of money." That would be an infamy so gross that I cannot believe that public opinion of the world would tolerate it. The reception accorded outside France to M. Briand's unusually truculent outburst may serve as a useful warning. If it does then these negotiations may end in an act of real appeasement.

Asquith's Account of Quarrels Over Gallipoli

or embarrass you by any explanations with anyone.

"Your admiring Master of Balliol said 'Never explain'—but I am sure you will understand my position.

"Yours truly, FISHER.

"I inclose a copy of my letter of resignation to the First Lord."

In the inclosed letter of resignation to the First Lord, Lord Fisher states that he "finds it increasingly difficult to adjust himself to the increasingly daily requirements of the Dardanelles to meet your views. As you truly said yesterday, I am in the position of continually vetoing your proposals. This is not fair to you besides being extremely distasteful to me. I am off to Scotland at once to avoid all questioning."

When I received this letter I at once sent to the Admiralty to ascertain Lord Fisher's whereabouts. I was told that he had disappeared without leaving any address.

I accordingly wrote him a peremptory letter ordering him in the King's name to return at once to his post, which I entrusted to Mr. Masterton Smith, the First Lord's private secretary, with instructions that it should reach Lord Fisher, if he could be found, without delay.

The German fleet, it was believed, had actually put to sea, and a decisive battle might well have been fought with no First Sea Lord functioning: an intolerable position. Mr. Masterton Smith succeeded in getting my message into Lord Fisher's hands and he returned to the Admiralty.

The three junior Sea Lords thereupon addressed to the First Lord and the First Sea Lord the following minute, which is initialed by them all with the date (May 16).

"First Lord.

"First Sea Lord.

"The First Sea Lord has caused us to be informed of his resignation and to be shown a copy of certain minutes which have passed from the First Lord to him and vice versa.

"It appears from these documents that Lord Fisher's resignation is due to two causes:

"1. Disagreement with First Lord as to the conduct of the naval operations in the Dardanelles.

"2. Dissatisfaction with the procedure adopted for the executive control of the movements of the fleet.

"With regard to (1) we stated in a minute to the First Sea Lord dated April 8 that we had not sufficient acquaintance with the political situation to enable us to form an opinion as to the correctness of the policy, and this holds good as to the conduct of the operations; but as we said then and now repeat, we hold that these operations most certainly jeopardize the crushing superiority of the Grand Fleet, which is essential to the successful prosecution of the war.

"With regard to (2) we associate ourselves with Lord Fisher, and are of opinion that the present method of directing the distribution of the fleet, and the conduct of the war by which the orders for controlling movements and supplies appear to be largely taken out of the hands of the First Sea Lord is open to very grave objections.

Would Avert Disaster.

"However dissatisfied we may feel with the present procedure, we recognize that we are faced with a national crisis of the first magnitude, and that the disastrous consequences which must inevitably follow on Lord Fisher's resignation must be averted.

"Whatever difference of opinion or defects in procedure of adjustment by mutual discussion and concession, and we therefore venture to urge you both to consider whether the national interests do not demand that you should follow the advice we have tendered."

Mr. Churchill informs me that he replied to the three Admirals that no order had ever been sent to the fleet except upon the written authority of the First Sea Lord.

All attempts to induce Lord Fisher to reconsider his determination to resign having proved ineffectual I wrote to him (on May 22):

"I am commanded by the King to accept your tendered resignation of the office of First Sea Lord of the Admiralty."

In going through the papers quite recently I found the following singular document, of which I at once sent a copy (September, 1927) to Mr. Churchill. He replied:

"The document is new to me, and certainly has never been made public. I knew, of course, that Fisher had demanded powers similar to Kitchener's, but am surprised—and now I think I may say amused—at the categorical manner in which his requirements were explained.

"The submarine campaign to which he referred was, of course, the first submarine campaign. It was already thoroughly defeated, and did not appear again as a danger for more than 18 months, and then in entirely different circumstances.

"The document seems to show that Fisher used the uncertain course of events at the Dardanelles as a means of making a bid for supreme naval power."

The document from Lord Fisher dated May 10 is in these terms:

Preamble.

"If the following six conditions are agreed to, I can guarantee the successful termination of the war and the total abolition of the submarine menace. I also desire to add that since Lord Ripon wished in 1885 to make me a Lord of the Admiralty, but at my request made me Diector of Naval Ordnance and Torpedoes instead, I have served under nine First Lords and 17 years at the Admiralty, so I ought to know something about it:

"1. That Mr. Winston Churchill is not in the Cabinet to be always circumventing me, nor will I serve under Mr. Balfour.

"2. That Sir A. K. Wilson leaves the Admiralty and the Committee of Imperial Defense and the War Council, as my time otherwise will be occupied in resisting the bombardment of Heligoland and other such wild projects, also his policy is totally opposed to mine and he has accepted position of First Sea Lord in succession to me, and thereby adopting a policy diametrically opposed to my views.

"3. That there shall be an entire new Board of Admiralty, as regards the Sea Lords and the Financial Secretary (who is utterly useless). New measures demand new men.

"4. That I shall have complete professional charge of the war at sea, together with the absolute sole disposition of the fleet, and the appointments of all officers of all rank whatsoever, and absolutely untrammeled sole command of all the sea forces whatsoever.

Designates Positions.

"5. That the First Lord of the Admiralty should be absolutley restricted to policy and parliamentary procedure and should occupy the same position toward me as Mr. Tennant, M. P., does to Lord Kitchener (and very well he does it).

"6. That I should have the sole absolute authority for all new construction and all dockyard work of whatever sort whatsoever and complete control of the whole of the civil establishments of the navy.

"The 60 per cent of my time and energy which I have exhausted on nine First Lords in the past I wish in the future to devote to the successful prosecution of the war. That is my sole reason for the six conditions. These six conditions must be published verbatim, so that the fleet may know my position."

Lord Fisher was undoubtedly a man with streaks of genius, but he was afflicted with fits of megalomania, in one of which this extraordinary ultimatum must have been composed.

I always remained on the best of personal terms with him, but the whole of his conduct at this critical time convinced me that it had become impossible that he should remain responsible for the Admiralty.

During the week ending Friday, the loaded freight-car movement was 76,530 cars, as compared with 65,286 cars for the corresponding period of 1927. The movement for the three weeks of September is the second largest of any three weeks' period in the railroad's history.

PHEASANT WITH FIVE-FOOT TAIL IS PROUD BIRD BUT SHY

Ocellated Argus of Annam Never Seen Alive in U. S.; Museum Specimens Rare.

WASHINGTON.—Shy, proud of its five-foot tail feathers, a dancing, strutting creature, the Ocellated Argus pheasant of Annam remains, despite its size, one of the few birds which probably never have been seen in their native haunts by a white man.

Some have been snared by natives and tamed in Indo-China and nearby countries, but none has ever been seen alive in the United States, and of 11 which reached Paris out of a shipment of 40 several weeks ago, all died within a few weeks. Even museum specimens are rare, and it was not until this month that the Smithsonian Institution was able to obtain one for the National Museum ornithological collection.

Dr. C. W. Richmond, Smithsonian ornithologist, describes this pheasant as one of the longest flying birds known. The males are the more gorgeously plumed, and the more easily caught. With bodies about the size of a full-grown hen and haughty crested heads, gracefully tapering tail feathers extend their length to about six feet.

Each male has about 12 of these long feathers, varying in length, the longest being about five and a half inches wide at the broadest point. They are richly patterned in shades of dark brown, chestnut and gray, mottled with white spots, and have long been prized by the Annamites as theatrical ornaments. The birds also have been used as a ritual present by emperors of Annam from different provinces on special occasions.

MACEDONIAN MEN NOW BUY WIVES ON INSTALLMENT PLAN

Bridegroom Pays Woman's Family At Engagement, Marriage and Yearly Intervals.

By the Associated Press.

USKUB, Serbian Macedonia—Wives are now bought on the installment plan, or hire-purchase system, in Macedonia.

The preponderance of males has attached a high value to the girls of this former Turkish province.

Payment is made on the basis of 25 per cent on the day of the engagement, 25 per cent on the day of the wedding, and the remainder in equal annual installments, spread over a number of years.

Some peasants of Macedonia toil all their lives in order to buy wives. To be single in Macedonia is a confession of one's inability to win a woman's heart. The bridegroom pays the family of the girl a certain sum in gold. The amount varies from 10 to 100 Turkish pounds, according to the physical attractions and the weight of the would-be-bride.

WRECK VICTIM WANTS $75,000

Clarence Harbricht, 19, Sues the B. & O. for Loss of Leg.

Suit for $75,000 on account of injuries suffered in the train wreck of the "Cardinal Rooters' Special" near Sumner, Ill., at 2 a. m., Sept. 2, on the way to Cincinnati, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Clarence Harbicht, 19 years old, 3046 Rolla place, against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.

The petition sets forth that Harbicht's left leg was so badly injured that it was necessary to amputate it and that he also suffered a fracture of the skull and other injuries. After the accident, which was caused by derailment of one of the coaches, Harbicht was taken to a hospital at Olney, Ill. Four of the coaches were upset. Harbicht was the most seriously injured of seven victims of the wreck who were going to Cincinnati to see a baseball game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds.

JUDGE BARS 'SMELLING' WARRANTS FOR LIQUOR

Statutes Do Not Provide for Search on Basis of Odor, Butler Asserts.

Judge Butler in Court of Criminal Correction announced yesterday that he no longer would authorize liquor search warrants where smell was the only probable cause for search.

The Judge said he had looked into the law and found no sanction for "smelling" warrants in the Missouri or Federal statutes.

In the past policemen who claimed to be expert "sniffers" obtained search warrants on their statements that they smelled intoxicants at certain places. Judge Butler looked up the law on the subject after being disillusioned last week about one expert, Patrolman Thomas Hale. A defense attorney passed three glasses containing liquids before Hale. The officer said he thought one glass contained home brew and the others held a soft beverage. The attorney triumphantly announced all three contained home brew.

A case against August Gori, 3500 Market street, whose saloon was raided Aug. 23, on a "smelling" warrant obtained by Patrolman Hale, was dismissed by Judge Butler under his new ruling, although police reported seizing a pint and a half of moonshine in the raid.

PETERSON CONTENDS FOR PLACE ON BALLOT

Mandamus Suit for Nomination as Sheriff Threatened if Board Rejects Protest.

Marshall B. Peterson, former Mayor of Webster Groves, who ran a close second to Arthur W. Schmid, County Recorder of Deeds, for the Republican nomination for Sheriff, filed a written protest with the County Election Board yesterday against the action of the Republican Central Committee Tuesday in accepting the resignation of Schmid and nominating instead former Deputy Sheriff Alfred G. Lill.

If the protest is rejected, a mandamus suit probably will be filed to put Peterson's name on the ballots as Republican nominee in place of Lill, it was declared by Peterson's attorney, Campbell Allison.

In his protest Peterson contends that Schmid should not have been permitted to resign while Peterson has a contest of the nomination pending in Circuit Court; that Schmid's resignation was an admission of the truth of allegations in Peterson's contest; that, on the face of returns, Peterson was the second choice of Republican voters and should have received the nomination; that the Republican committee's nomination of Lill was "arbitrary, illegal, unjust and calculated to disrupt the Republican party;" and that the nomination of Lill violated a statute which requires that a person named by the committee to fill a vacancy must be of the same political faith as the original nominee.

Peterson asserts the political faith of Lill is not known and that when Lill was defeated for the Republican nomination for Sheriff in 1924 he campaigned for the Democratic nominee, Wilfrid Jones, against the Republican, Albert A. Wilmas, who was elected.

JULIUS R. NOLTE APPOINTED SPECIAL CIRCUIT JUDGE

Republican Nominee Will Serve for Kiskaddon on County Bench.

Julius R. Nolte of Clayton, one of the two Republican nominees for the two Circuit Judgeships of St. Louis County, was appointed special Judge of Division No. 1 of the court by Gov. Baker yesterday, to serve during the incapacitation of Judge Kiskaddon.

On Friday, Judge Kiskaddon underwent a serious operation at St. Luke's Hospital, which will keep him from the bench for some time. He was appointed by the Governor several months ago to fill the unexperied term of the late Judge McElhinney, ending Dec. 31. The other member of the bench, Judge Mulloy, who was appointed to succeed G. A. Wurdeman, resigned, is a Republican nominee for the office also.

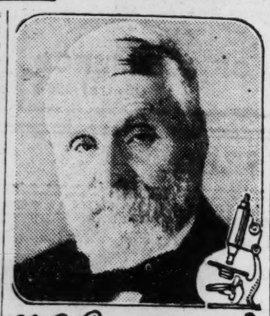
Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.



W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

Many is the family today that makes it a rule always to have a bottle of this perfect preparation in the house. Keep it handy and observe these three simple rules of health; keep the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you—see special offer in coupon:

LIFE INSURANCE MEN TO HOLD CONVENTION

Executives of Large Firms Will Attend Meeting in City Oct. 8 to 12.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the American Life Convention, said to be the largest and most influential association of life insurance companies in the world, and which was started in St. Louis on a small scale in 1909, will be held here Oct. 8 to 12, with headquarters at Hotel Statler.

More than 140 companies of the United States and Canada, having combined assets exceeding $2,700,000,000 and insurance of more than $21,500,000,000 in force, will be represented at the convention by about 700 executives and department heads. The smallest member has $7,500,000 insurance in force and several of the largest have several billion dollars worth each.

Headquarters of the American Life Convention are in St. Louis, in the Shell Building, and the American Service Bureau operates from here also, checking on applicants for life insurance.

Aviation to Be Discussed.

A prominent place on the program will be accorded aviation, a new field for life insurance, and various phases will be discussed. Among those expected to speak on this topic are William P. McCracken Jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, and Gordon Thomson, vice president of the West Coast Life Insurance Co., whose theme will be "How Life Insurance Can Help Aviation."

Stricter regulation of life insurance companies also will be considered by the gathering at length, it is announced, with the forecast that a "very definite stand" will be taken against improper practices. The inference is that the recent International Life scandal here accentuated this topic.

"The convention deals, directly or indirectly," said an announcement, "with almost every problem common to life insurance companies. Not only the organization proper but the legal, medical, financial, agency and office management sections constitute an open forum for experts to discuss matters of interest. Special and standing committees investigate important subjects, such as life insurance investments, state regulation of life insurance, total and permanent disability, substandard insurance, nonmedical underwriting, lapsation, aviation, etc.

Object of Organization.

"The American Life Convention does not sell life insurance, but was organized for the purpose of encouraging, upholding and maintaining the business of life insurance, the dissemination of information regarding the science of life insurance, the upholding of correct principles in the conduct of the business, the establishment and maintenance of confidence between the management of companies comprising the organization and their policy holders, the correction of any abuses which may arise in the methods of transacting the business of life insurance, the promotion of co-operation, acquaintance and exchange of ideas among the executive officers of its membership, and any and all other things incident to the welfare of insurers, insured and the public in relation to the business.

"Among the oustanding questions that will be touched upon at this year's meeting are life insurance investments of the future, especially the advisability of life companies continuing to place a large part of their funds in farm mortgages, investment laws affecting life insurance and the advisability of liberalization and how. In some States in recent years investment laws have been amended to permit insurance companies to purchase bonds and other securities of substantial public utilities and similar privately operated business organizations."

SMITH-FOR-PRESIDENT CLUB NOW HAS 4700 MEMBERS HERE

All Officers Are Protestants, Says Fred H. Fricke, Head of Organization.

The Smith-for-President Club of St. Louis which was formed the day after Gov. Smith was nominated by the Democratic convention at Houston, has slightly more than 4700 members now, it was announced yesterday by Fred H. Fricke, president.

Fricke, a druggist, at 1901 Madison street, declared that indications were the membership would be 10,000 to 15000 by the time of the election Nov. 6. At a meeting of the Advsory Committee at the Marquette Hotel Friday night, he related, 513 members were received.

The Advisory Committee consists of 100 men and women, with Joseph T. Davis, president of the Safety Council, as chairman. It appointed on Friday a contact committee to aid in getting voters to register this week, and a foreign-born voters' committee, headed by Vincent Budrovich, and elected Mrs. Gertrude Wallis chairman of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the club.

Forty-six women attended the meeting Friday. More than 120 Masons belong to the club, Fricke announced. He said all the officers were Protestants, three of them Masons, and all Democrats. The other officers are: Richard Reichardt, optometrist with the Gerne Jewelry Co. vice president; Davis, treasurer, and Frank Kowalski, a gasoline salesman, secretary.

ASLEEP AT WHEEL THEORY IN DEATH OF T. G. WATTS JR.

Companion Thinks Real Estate Man Lost Control of Automobile in Doze While Driving.

HEAD-ON CRASH WITH STREET CAR

Motorman Mastmuntian and Conductor Zerbech Under Bond Pending Inquest Tomorrow.

Thomas G. Watts Jr., 47 years old, secretary-treasurer to the Thomas G. Watts Real Estate Investment Co., was killed when he drove head-on into a street car on Broadway near Meramec street at 12:25 a. m. yesterday. It is thought he dozed at the wheel and lost control.

Although the automobile, a cabriolet model, was hurled 75 feet and demolished, Watts' companion, Eugene J. Benz, 29, a real estate salesman, 5209 Ashland avenue, was only cut and bruised.

Watts was driving north in Broadway between Gasconade and Meramec streets, when the machine suddenly swerved to the west and crashed into a southbound Broadway street car operated by Motorman Harry Mastmuntian. Watts was crushed in the wreckage of his automobile, suffering fractures of the skull, left arm and leg. The front vestibule of the street car was smashed in and the control box caught fire.

Benz told police he was asleep in the seat beside Watts when the crash occurred. He was of the opinion that Watts dozed at the wheel and momentarily lost control. They had taken a long ride in the southern part of St. Louis County, he said, and Watts had complained of feeling sleepy.

The motorman, who was cut and bruised and suffered burns on the hands in fighting the fire in the control box of his car, said he saw Watts' machine approaching at high speed and apparently under control until less than 25 feet from the street car, when the automobile swerved sharply and crashed into the car, which was moving about 20 miles an hour.

Watts and Mastmuntian were taken to Alexian Brothers' Hospital, several blocks away, where Watts died an hour later without regaining consciousness. A wrecking crew of the Public Service Co. extinguished the control-box fire.

Mastmuntian and Henry Zerbeck, the conductor, were placed under $5000 bond each, pending an inquest.

Watts was unmarried and lived at the Windsor Hotel, 4209 Lindell boulevard. His brother, Alexander Watts, 7266 Lindell drive, took charge of the body.

37 COAL MINES OPERATING IN BELLEVILLE SUBDISTRICT

1800 Men Returned to 10 Last Week Under Lower-Wage Agreement.

Thirty-seven coal mines employing between 4000 and 5000 men are now operating in the Belleville subdistrict as the result of the reopening last week of 10 mines and the return of 1800 men under the wage agreement of Sept. 12, according to James Mason, district secretary-treasurer of the Illinois United Mine Workers.

Under the agreement, day workers received a reduction from the Jacksonville scale of $7.50 a day to $6.10 and tonnage workers from $1.08 to 91 cents. The 10 mines resuming operations had been idle since April 1.

Only five major mines remain idle due to the refusal of miners to accept the new wage scale. Of these, the Nigger Hollow No. 2 mine of the St. Louis & O'Fallon Coal Co., employing 550 men, probably will reopen tomorrow as the result of the decision of the local union yesterday.

Of the 23 mines still closed, many, it was pointed out, have not been operated for three or four years, virtually having been worked out. There are about 7000 miners in the Belleville area.

Most Radio Stations to Cooperate With Board

Commission Is Said to Feel That Injustice Has Been Done in Certain Cases—Remedy Seen in Hearings — South and Midwest Most Hurt.

By THOMAS STEVENSON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Although many stations are dissatisfied with their new assignments, most of them agree that the new reallocation plan of the Federal Radio Commission is in the public interest.

During the past week, representatives of many stations have come to Washington to talk to the commissioners. Some of them have said they did not believe they were getting a fair deal. But almost all of them declared their intention to co-operate with the commission in giving the new plan a trial.

The commission did not expect that all stations would be satisfied. In fact, that was impossible. One of the chief causes of interference has been the operation of too many stations simultaneously. To reduce the interference, which is sought by the new plan, it was necessary to reduce the number of stations.

This was done without actually depriving stations of their licenses. Instead, the operating time of many stations was cut in half.

It is also believed by the commission that in many cases there have been injustices, that stations may not have received the consideration justified by the service they render. In time it is believed that such injustices will be corrected through hearings.

Under the plan, an equal number of channels, time-on-the-air and power are assigned to each zone, to be divided between the states thereof, on the basis of population. It is also the intention of the commission later to bring about equality of stations' licenses. That was not accomplished by the plan.

But if any station is dissatisfied, it must apply for the assignment of some other station in the same State. If it can prove that it will render the best service, according to the commission, it will receive the assignment.

Meantime, an effort is being made to inject the reallocation plan into the political campaign. The Democratic national headquarters has issued a statement declaring the plan was so bad that the chairman of the commission, Ira E. Robinson, would not vote for it.

At the same time, Chairman Robinson declared the rights of the smaller stations were trampled on by the plan.

Robinson is supposed to be a Republican. The plan was adopted by the votes of two Democrats—Sykes and Pickard—in addition to those of two Republicans—Caldwell and LaFount. Robinson was the only dissenting commissioner.

It is the belief in well informed circles that when Congress convenes in December an attack will be launched on the commission because of adoption of the plan. Whether there will be enough support to uphold the plan, it is said, depends almost entirely on public reaction after the plan is put into effect.

In a speech before a conference of business executives in Boston on Friday, Radio Commissioner Caldwell urged that the law requiring an equal number of stations in each zone be changed. He declared the provision, known as the Davis-Dill amendment, worked to the detriment of at least two zones without benefiting the others.

"Personally," said Caldwell, "I believe thoroughly in the purpose of this equalizing clause and have so stated my belief repeatedly to members of Congress and others. Certainly any man who accepts the American principle of equality of citizenship must subscribe also to a proper sharing of the great common conductor of the ether on some basis of proportionality of population as between states.

"It was personal belief in the justice and fairness of this principle that underlay the action of the members of the commission in faithfully and exactly carrying out the instructions of the act, and making the recent reallocation of the radio facilities of the nation—dividing these equally as to zones and proportionally as to states.

"Had the Davis-Dill clause been limited to equalizing the assignment of wavelengths only—for the wavelengths are the only communal possession of the people of the United States—no objection could be raised to its operation on economic grounds.

"But the clause goes further. After equally and proportionally assigning the wavelengths or frequencies, it proceeds to restrict the use of those wavelengths by zones

SOUND MADE VISIBLE, LIGHT AUDIBLE, BY NEW PROCESS

Beam Breaks Into Music When It Impinges on a Mirror—Thrusting of Hand Into Path of Rays Silences Tone.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Sound becomes visible and light is made audible by equipment developed by John Bellamy Taylor, consulting engineer of the General Electric Co.

A beam of light travels silently about the room, only to break into music when it hits a mirror target. When the light leaves the target, or is intercepted, the music stops.

Taylor has chosen to call this "narrow-casting," to distinguish it from radio broadcasting.

The equipment is a photophone built on old principles, but utilizing the perfected photo-electric tube, electric pick-up and newly developed amplifiers and sound reproducers. The idea of sending music over a beam of light was demonstrated by Alexander Graham Bell 50 years ago.

In demonstrating the photophone Taylor uses phonograph records with the sending apparatus. The energy is sent over the light beam to transforming and reproducing elements mounted on a tripod some distance away. When he holds his hand in the path of the light beam, the music stops. But as he allows the light to filter between his fingers the sound begins and increases in volume.

A cardboard disc with holes of various sizes from a pin hole to one of an eighth of an inch in diameter gives varying degrees of sound volume when it intercepts the light beam.

The light of a burning match can be changed into sound by the reproducer. When the match is struck, there is a rattling, cracking sound, lasting during the combustion of the chemicals. The burning wood gives off little sounds.

Similarly, the varying light from a small dynamo-driven flashlight sounds like a siren.

A phonograph record or a speaker at a microphone can serve as the sound source. Taylor usually employing a phonograph with electric pickup, by means of which the recorded music is transformed into electric current. This energy is led to a mirror, one-thousandth of a square inch in area, delicately suspended in a magnetic field by wires. At one side is an ordinary automobile headlight incandescent lamp, the light from which is focused on the tiny mirror.

The mirror, quivering in tune with the electric current, focuses the light by a lens into a narrow beam, which, pulsating at the frequency determined by the music on the record, is projected through space to the light collecting mirror or lens of th rciving apparatus. At this point another transformation must take place; the light must be converted to sound.

The mirror or lens condenses the light on the photoelectric tube, which responds instantaneously to every variation in light intensity. The photoelectric tube translates the light into electric energy and this, after amplification, passes to a loud speaker where the final transformation of the energy into sound occurs.

The difference between sending sound over a beam of light and by radio is simply one of degree. The physical transmission in both cases is the same, except that different transmitting and receiving devices are used.

In the case of light, frequencies of several hundred trillion per second give wave lengths of the order of a fifty-thousands of an inch. Broadcast waves are 600 to 1500 feet in length. The long waves, of comparatively low frequency, spreads out in all directions. But the beam of light is essentially a straight-line affair and, with a suitable beam-forming lens or reflector, can be conserved and sent over distances without a substantial spread. Broadcast waves will bend around obstructions and pass through walls, but the light wave will not bend, since it is so short in comparison with the size of the obstruction. It will pass through

ST. LOUIS WINNERS IN NATIONAL SINGING CONTEST

Pauline Bug, contralto, and Emerson W. Brown, baritone, winners in the St. Louis district contest, held at the radio show, in the nation-wide Atwater Kent Foundation singing contest. They will meet other district winners in the Missouri State contest next month.

PAULINE BUG GIRL WINNER IN SONG CONTEST

Miss Pauline Bug, 4265 Olive street, contralto, and Emerson W. Brown, 4023 West Pine boulevard, were adjudged winners in the St. Louis district preliminary, held at the radio show, in the country-wide singing contest sponsored by the Atwater Kent Foundation.

Miss Bug sang as No. 5 in the contest for young women at the show Monday night. Her number was "Danny Boy."

Miss Helen McFarland, who sang as No. 2, was second choice among the girls. She sang the aria "Una Voce Poco." Third among the young women singers was Miss Annette Schudmak, who sang the "Ave Maria" of Gounod, as No. 4.

Brown sang as No. 1 among the men, his number being the "Toreador Song," from "Carmen." Second choice among the men was F. Marion Weir and third was Ben E. Biesemeyer. Weir sang "The Trumpeter," as No. 2, and Biesemeyer sang "The Evening Star" aria, as No. 9.

Only National Stations Suffer By Chain Order

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Many protests against the restrictions placed on chain broadcasting are included in the flood of complaints and commendations pouring into the offices of the Federal Radio Commission since announcement of the new allocation of stations.

Listeners, as well as affected broadcasters, have expressed opposition to the order limiting the broadcasting of network programs.

Some listeners, members of the commission say, apparently have the erroneous impression that the regulation applies to all classes of stations.

The commission points out that the small powered, local and regional stations may transmit chain programs at all hours they are on the air.

The order which prohibits simultaneous broadcasting of identical programs for more than one hour between 7 p. m. and midnight applies only to stations operating on the 40 cleared channels. This will affect many stations now on the network, including KMOX, St. Louis.

An exception to the ruling is made where the transmitters of these high powered stations are separated more than 300 miles and where such stations are operating on the same frequency.

Further concessions will be made

Uses for the photophone have not been indicated. Taylor has been able to pass a light beam during daylight across a street from one office to another. At night the beam may be projected three or four miles, provided a sufficiently strong light source is used and a suitable lens or long focus mirror employed.

War-time use of the light beam as a system of communication between fixed points, where radio or fire communication is impractical or impossible, also suggests itself.

and states, so that all are reduced to a common level, regardless of natural facilities.

"In this way the lowest requirement of dimension of radio use in one zone or state becomes the maximum assignable to another section, depriving local populations of much-needed facilities which could be used locally without interference in any respect. It is in this respect that I believe the Davis-Dill amendment is unsound, unscientific and wasteful, and should be amended at the coming session of Congress.

"In the case of the South, Zone 3, the Davis-Bill clause drastically limits and reduces the number of small stations—those of 50, 100 and 500 watts, rendering a local or community service—as compared with the great number of such local and regional stations which might operate in the South and West with entire satisfaction, so far as any interference could be concerned.

"This limitation of the number of small stations to an artificial total barely one-ninth of the number the South otherwise could have, follows from the fact that that under the Davis-Dill equalizing clause the Southern zone, though stretching 2000 miles from North Carolina to Texas, can have no more stations that can operate satisfactorily in the geographically small First zone, which is about one-ninth the area of the Southern zone.

"Thus, the number of local station switch can operate in zone 1, without interference, becomes the maximum allowable to all the other zones. As the result of this feature alone, it is estimated that some 315 Southern towns which might have now or later broadcasting stations up to 100 watts, without interfering with any other locality, are artificially prevented from obtaining licenses under the Davis-Dill amendment.

"In the fifth zone, which includes the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain territory, about two-fifths of the United States, both the larger and smaller stations must divide time and double up on wave-lengths to comply with the literal requirement that the total number of wave-lengths in use in zone 5 be equal to the number in use in the other zones.

"Owing to the isolation of zone 5, which is nearly 2000 miles west of the rest of the country, its stations have been advantageously occupying 66 different wave-lengths and might continue to do so, full time, without disturbing the rest of the world. But, under the Davis-Dill act, these coast stations will have to divide time on 37 wave-lengths, while the adjoining wave-lengths stand idle.

"The number of local stations in the vast expanse of zone 5 also will be limited to the number that is operable satisfactorily in zone 1, with only one-fifteenth the area. In this way, at least 450 towns and villages in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain country, which might now or later have ambitions for local 100-watt broadcasting stations, and could have them without interfering with any one, are automatically ruled off the radio map by the Davis-Dill act."

INTEREST IN RADIO IS KEEN SHOW PROVES

St. Louis Exposition Called Best Yet Held— Many Sales Reported.

As has been the case each year the annual Southwest radio show, which was held in the Coliseum the past week, proved the most successful yet sponsored by the St. Louis Radio Trades Association.

The show was very much one of factory-built receivers and speakers, few of the parts manufacturers being represented. Interest in the television and photo-radio exhibits was keen, but the general impression was that practical television for home use was a long way off. However, it was equally the impression that there will be great activity among experimenters with television and an increasing demand for television sets.

That the demand is for AC receivers wherever the prospective buyer can plug into a light socket was obvious. Equally obvious was the development of a heavy demand for sets to replace old battery-operated receivers. So, of course, while virtually every established factory makes battery sets for use where current is not available, the exhibits of receivers were mostly of the AC tube or all-electric types.

There is, and will be, a considerable market for B eliminators and A eliminators, and a number of them were shown.

Dynamic speakers held the ground among reproducing devices, though airplane cloth, magnetic cone and air column speakers were shown and all had their admirers.

There was evident added impetus to the movement—first apparent at the Chicago radio trade show in June—toward power tubes and the new superpower 250 type. Push-pull amplification, using two 171A power tubes, was seen often. Some sets had one 210 audio tube, a few had two 210 tubes in push-pull, while now and then a set was shown with a 250 tube in the final audio stage, and a very few had two 250s in parallel or in push-pull.

The effect of using the big tubes is greater depth of tone and consequent realism. Efficient volume controls make it possible to use these tubes in much the same way as one does a high powered automobile, which is capable of extreme speed yet runs at 20 miles per hour with the smoothness that only ample reserve power can give.

The new shield grid tube, with which experimenters and custom set builders have been getting exceptional results in distance reception, is used in a new receiver manufactured by a well known company, that was exhibited at the show. Use of this tube permits building a four-tube set for what six-tube results are claimed.

Furniture, both table cabinets and consoles, for housing receivers was more attractively styled and constructed than at any previous show. Period designs were particularly noticeable. Some of the costly cabinets, including those housing combinations of receiver and phonograph, were sumptuous. Metal cabinets, a number of them in brilliant color effects to fit in with modern styling, were also seen in attractive variety.

Single control tuning, often with dial or dials operating before small windows, was seen in virtually every receiver exhibited. In some sets an auxiliary control was added for distance tuning.

The public address system at the show, through which announcements and broadcasts from the crystal studio were made, was by far the best ever heard at a St. Louis show, in fact, was far superior to that at the June radio trade show in Chicago. The center of interest in this respect was the giant wooden air column speaker fitted with four 25-watt speaker units. This speaker was similar to one used some months ago to throw the sound of a voice from New York City across the Hudson River.

A novelty in speakers was one made in the form of an airplane from several speakers.

Buying interest was manifest everywhere at the show, all the dealers reporting gratifying sales and long lists of prospects.

Satisfaction with the show was expressed by Julian E. Sampson, president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association; William P. Mackle, show manager and executive secretary of the association, and other officers.

When McQuhae Sings as Only An Irishman Can

The Allen McQuhae who sings over the air is one person—a very fine radio tenor who has mastered microphone technique so that his every tone comes clearly from the speaker. But the McQuhae who sings for his friends where he can forget the requirements of the broadcasting studio is another, and a more interesting singer.

Witness a group of people who were guests of Norman S. Brown and Fred Wiebe, of the Brown & Hall Supply Co., at an informal luncheon at the Mayfair Hotel after the radio show. McQuhae rambled in and out of the party accordingly as he was before the KMOX microphone or not. Finally, about midnight, he finished broadcasting and, with Alice Mastin, of the KMOX staff as accompanist, proceeded to give an informal recital in which his hearers got a wholly new impression of the tenor who has come to be so closely associated with memories of Atwater Kent radio hours.

He sang of a garden and love in its close shut bounds. He sang "Because," sang it with intensity and fire, carrying it to a thrilling climax. He sang "Mighty Lak a Rose" with exquisite shading of tone and feeling. He sang half a dozen other things, all splendidly.

Then a guest challenged him to prove that any one, Irish by birth or otherwise, really could sing "Kathleen Mavourneen" as it should be sung.

"Kathleen, Mavourneen
The gray dawn is breaking—"

With appealing simplicity the call of the lovelorn lad to his heartlessly sleepy lady sounded.

"The horn of the hunter
Is heard on the hill—"

McQuhae's hearers could hear the distant horn notes on the quiet air of morn.

"The lark from her light wing
The bright dew is shaking—"

One of the great phases written for a man's voice. Sung so that one could almost see the flashing-winged bird soaring skyward, the dew glinting and sparkling on its plumage.

"Kathleen, Mavourneen,
What, slumbering still?"

And, so, on and on through the song that, in more than one way, is a supreme test of voice, of breath control and phrasing, of power of expression and poignancy of feeling. Beautifully done, and a challenger utterly confounded.

Then, as a finale, the rarely lovely aria, "Una Furtiva Lagrima." The little audience sat well nigh spellbound. It mattered not that he sang it in Italian. Sung as McQuhae gave it forth that night, the words were translated into the universal language of beauty and emotion. A Hotentot would have felt its every meaning, would have thrilled to the sensuous loveliness of tone.

More stirring band music will be heard over KSD at 4 o'clock this afternoon when George W. Ventre and his Weymouth Post Band will be featured in the Stetson Parade broadcast. The hour will be devoted to recalling a parade during the celebration, in 1923, of the 300th anniversary of the town of Weymouth, next to Plymouth the oldest permanent settlement in New England and the first to adopt local self-government.

The anniversary observance was marked by the presence of Chief Justice William H. Taft of the United States Supreme Court, whose earliest American ancestors, on both sides, were Weymouth settlers. Chief Justice Taft reviewed the military and civil parade which is to be reproduced for listeners.

Major Edward Bowes says that the team of Fain and Dunn, harmonizers, will be back with the Capitol Theater Family for the broadcast over KSD from 5:30 to 7 o'clock this evening. Fain is responsible for such popular songs as, "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," "There's Something About a Rose," "Then You Came Along," "What a Wonderful Wedding That Would Be," and others.

A Biblical drama broadcast is announced for 7:45 o'clock tonight over KSD.

"Die Fledermaus" ("The Bat") is to be sung in the light opera period over KSD at 8:15 tonight. Composed by Johann Strauss, this work is generally recognized as the best of the Viennese operettas, if not, on the whole, the most pleasing of all light operas.

Among the music of "Die Fledermaus" are Rosalinda's "Farewell Air" in Act I; the ballet, a brilliant chain of dances, and the choral waltz, "Ah, What a Feast" in Act II; the entr'acte, composed of waltzes and banquet music, and the final chorus of Act III.

The radio production of the Straus operetta will be directed by Robert Goetzel, a former conductor of radio productions in Berlin and Vienna.

PRAIRIE Schooners served their purpose. They opened the gates of the golden West. They took advantage of the newer and better way of travel and profited by it.

A similar situation exists in Radio today. Thousands of radio owners are not entirely satisfied with the sets they own. They realize there is room for improvement. There was—true enough. Oldtime Finer Dance Music in New NBC Series

Music that was played for balls in the days before the Civil War is to be played by the Interwoven Entertainers in a new series of NBC programs that are to be broadcast over KWK Friday nights, beginning Oct. 5.

Mazurkas, gavottes, minuets, reels and polkas will be played by an orchestra. Only music of the highest type will be presented, and the selections will be taken from the works of such composers as Mendelssohn, Canne, Massenet, Nevin and Paderewski. From time to time the DeWitt collection of early examples of the Virginia Reel will be drawn upon for material. Andy Sanella will be director of the orchestra.

With some of the these old dances the "calls" will be featured. No modern dance music will be played. Each program will open and close with Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song."

The Pickard Family, specialists in songs of the Southern Mountains who sing them in the traditional manner, will take part in each program. One of their numbers for the opening program will be "Rabbit in the Pea-Patch."

Besides the Pickard Family and the full orchestra, there will be a group made up of guitar, accordion, violin, banjo, and harmonica, which will play such numbers as "Arkansas Mule" and "The Hayseed Club," the latter a "hoe-down" typical of the period around 1820.

Graham McNamee, who has a ranking as a baritone as well as a radio announcer, is to give 100 recitals during the musical season. His tour is to start at Los Angeles.

'Mike' Frightens Speakers More Than the Singers

Radio speakers are more susceptible to microphone fright than musicians, is the opinion of Byron Mills, who handles farm program talks over KGO, Oakland, Cal.

"It takes but a few minutes for the 'mike,' with its blank stare, to squelch the most experienced speaker making his radio debut," says Mills. Unlike the singer, the radio speaker is unable to become wrapped up in what he is doing to the point of forgetting himself."

"Approximately 100 words a minute is about the speed for a radio speech," Mills says.

"Raising the voice cannot be used to stress a point. This must be done by pausing, repetition and phrasing.

"The pompous, grandiloquent speaker of yesterday is ridiculous over the air.

"Quality and tone of voice should be natural and should carry the speaker's personality.

"A light voice is generally broadcast about a foot and one-half from the microphone, while a heavy voice—just about half again that distance.

INVENTOR AND SHORT WAVE ADAPTER

E. T. Flewelling and the adapter, to make any radio receiver a short wave set, with which the chimes of Big Ben, in London, were picked up in St. Louis the past week and rebroadcast by KMOX. Flewelling was here for the radio show.

London Chimes Rebroadcast by Using Adapter

Device Used in St. Louis Makes Any Receiver Into Short Wave Set.

The chimes of "Big Ben" in London were picked up in St. Louis through use of a short wave adapter in connection with a radio receiver and rebroadcast over KMOX the past week, during the radio show. The experiment was carried out by KMOX engineers with E. T. Flewelling of Dayton, O., inventor of the device, and R. W. Bennett, former St. Louisan, who is general sales manager of the A-C Dayton Co., manufacturer of the adapter. The waves picked up were from 5-SW, Chilmsford, England.

The adapter in question consists of a small box with sockets for a tube and for a short wave coil, a selector dial and a supplementary dial for sharp tuning.

One removes the first tube of a broadcast receiver, puts the tube into the tube socket of the adapter, plugs the adapter into the empty receiver socket, inserts the proper short wave coil in the adapter, and goes cruising for short wave stations. The adapter can be used with any kind of a broadcast receiver, including superheterodyne.

A number of United States broadcasting stations are sending out programs on short waves including KDKA, WGY, WABC, WLW, WOWO, KOIL and others.

Interest in receiving short wave broadcasts, naturally, is increasing, to say nothing of the growing army of short wave amateurs who are interested primarily in point to point communication and in broadcasting and receiving messages in code in this country and all over the world.

Bennett said that 50,000 of the Flewelling short wave adapters had been sold already and that the A-C Dayton factory was behind on orders for it. This company also manufacturers a line of broadcast receivers.

Another Station In Columbia Chain

WLBW, at Oil City, Penn., is to join the Columbia chain as a permanent link at 1 o'clock this afternoon. It is to broadcast all Columbia programs.

WLBW, a 500-watt station, operates on 1020 kilocycles. Under the new allocation effective Nov. 11, it is to use the same power on 1260 kilocycles, the wave on which KOIL, Council Bluffs, Ia., is to use 1000 watts.

Ventriloquism has been added to the radio entertainment list. WSAI, Cincinnati, presents Boss Herbert and his dummy each Monday evening.

All of the home games on the University of Chicago football schedule will be described on the air by WLS. The series is to start Sept. 29 with a double header.

Trade Notes

The newly organized Atlas Stores Co., which has just opened headquarters at 812 Pine street, has been appointed dealer in Crosley, Fada and Stromberg-Carlson receivers. Joseph A. Riffelman is president of the firm.

The W. E. Fuetterer Supplies Co., is to distribute the new line of Raytheon radio tubes, shipments of which are expected within a couple of weeks. Raytheon is to manufacture a complete line of tubes, including AC types, power and super power tubes, in addition to its gas tubes for power tubes such as the B, the BH and the BA tubes. The new tubes are to have a four-pillar construction feature that adds materially to their sturdiness.

The M. & C. Sales Co., of which Alvin Mayer is head, is distributing Operadio speakers, including a new concealed air column type and a dynamic speaker, as well as an Operadio audio power amplifier.

New Tyrman receivers using the shield grid tubes are expected in St. Louis this week by Julius Beneke, factory representative. These Tyrman receivers, which last year were built by many fans in this territory, are even more powerful and selective than the Tyrman sets which pioneered the shield grid tube.

The new models are the "50," a portable; the "60," the "70," and the "80," the latter designed for super selectivity and distance getting ability. Special radio systems have been devised for the new Tyrman as well as power units calculated to get the most out of the amplifying possibilities of the shield grid tube.

Production of new Sterling speakers is under way. There are four models, two each of the improved dynamic and patented Sterling vari-tone. A leading furniture designer has taken the simplicity of the Adam style for the console and table models and the vari-tone model was designed from a prize-winning sketch submitted by a student in a Cleveland School of Art contest.

With the coming of radio power units, Sterling purchased the Tungsylvania company of Cleveland, one of the original manufacturers of "B" power units. Stoon Sterling was known as one of the leaders in the power unit field. It claims to be the largest manufacturer of power units today.

Another Sterling product is the new line voltage stabilizer, which maintains a steady voltage to the A. C. tube receiver regardless of whether the line voltage is as low as 90 or as high as 140 volts.

Reception of Television Play Poor at Distance

Only Heads of Actors Could Be 'Sent' on One Wave, Voices on Another, Action by Hand Motions on a Third.

WGY's broadcast of the first television play on Sept. 11 was received at Los Angeles, Cal., by Gilbert Lee and Kenneth Ormiston, who reported: "Results only fair, due to fading of 21-meter wave. Voices very strong, with occasional glimpses of faces."

A listener at Pittsfield, Mass., reported reception of the television signals, saying that the signals were much better after midnight.

WGY established itself as the first station presenting a drama by television, transmitting picture and voice simultaneously on separate radio channels. Persons who had receivers suitable for vision and sound were able to see and hear the actors n the play, though miles separated them from the performers.

Drama by radio was made possible by recent development of a simplified and portable television transmitter or camera by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Co. and chief consulting engineer of the Radio Corporation of America.

Working for Future.

Martin P. Rice, manager of broadcasting for the General Electric Co., explained that in presenting the drama through television, WGY is co-operating with the engineers to develop studio technique well in advance of the time when it will be practical to offer television to the public as a finished production.

"When television has reached that stage of development where 'sight' signals may be received as reliably as 'sound' signals are now received, we at WGY hope to be prepared to carry the image as well as the voice of the actor to thousands not hertofore privileged to enjoy the drama," Rice said.

The play was "The Queen's Messenger," a one-act drama written 30 years ago by J. Hartley Manners. The television version was the same in every respect as the stage offering, but many new problems in dramatic technique were presented in putting on the air a performance intended for reproduction instantaneonsly in homes distant from the scene of the action.

Nine months ago, Dr. Alexanderson exhibited a simplified television receiver. Voice and picture were simultaneously broadcast by WGY on different wavelengths and observers three to five miles from the transmitters saw and heard the performers.

Three Cameras Used.

The drama by television was made possible by further developments by Dr. Alexanderson, the simplification of the transmitting apparatus in a portable form. The transmitter may be carried from place to place as easily as modern broadcast equipment is transported.

It is indicated that the time will come when the television transmitter or camera will be set up in the radio studio, on the lecture platform, the stage or at the banquet table.

To illustrate the portability of the outfit, WGY recently set up the camera on the platform in the Assembly chamber at Albany where Gov. Alfred E. Smith delivered his address accepting the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

The camera consists of three units, a cabinet containing a 24-hole disc and a 100-watt lamp as a light source, and two smaller cabinets each housing a photo-electric tube with amplifier. All three cabinets are mounted on tripods, enabling the operator to raise, lower or tilt the light source to suit the height or position of the performer.

In the presentation of "The Queen's Messenger" three cameras were used—a camera for each character in the drama and a third for introduction of "props" and other visual effects.

Adaptation of the television apparatus to the play was made by Mortimer Stewart, producer and director of a series of radio plays from WGY last spring and numerous dramatic offerings from the New York stations of the National Broadcasting Co.

Stewart's problem was not only the development of a technique for a new dramatic form but he must also work with apparatus which is as yet crude and admittedly inadequate. For example, at present only the heads of actors can be shown, and the image in the television receiver is the red of the neon lamp, this being the only device at present which has the necessary simplicity.

Only Heads of Actors Sent.

The drama was presented in one of the studios of WGY. The director, standing between the two "character" cameras, governed the radio output by means of a small control box with two knobs. With one of these knobs he brought any one of the cameras into the circuit, depending upon which character was speaking. The second knob enabled him to fade the images in and out, very much as the fade-out is used in motion pictures. In front of the director was a television receiver in which he could at all times see the image going on the air, and check the performance.

In addition to the cameras, there was a microphone for each actor to pick up the lines of the play.

The performance went out on three wave lengths, the picture on 379.5 meters and 21.4 meters, the voices on 31.36 meters only.

As only the heads of the actors could be transmitted, it became necessary for the director to find some means other than head movements or the change of facial expression to convey action. This was accomplished by utilizing the third transmitter for hands and "props." For example, when a woman in the play offered to pour some wine for a messenger, the third camera picked up the image of her hands with bottle and glass, as she poured the wine. Keys, a ring, a revolver and many other "props" were thus introduced to add realism and to break the monotony of head images only.

Make-up Difficult.

Because of the limited range of the camera, great pains were taken to keep the actor "framed," that is within the small area in which the eye of the pick-up camera may find him. Each actor worked in front of a white screen, a background which gave definiteness to his features. Borders were established within which the actor had to stand or be lost to the camera.

Special problems in make-up were presented that the red image might have definition and clarity. Make-up technique of both the stage and screen were drawn upon and an effect different from either reached. The eyes of the actors were accentuated to a point of exaggeration and the mouth and nostrils were sharply defined with strong color. The skin was softly shaded and blended in an effort to remove the shiny effect. It was found that diamonds or other bright stones could not be used on the hands for they caught the light

SINGLE AUDIO STAGE IS SAID TO WORK BEST

Detector Must Give Output Sufficient to Insure Adequate Volume.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Reproduction of radio music is more realistic when passed through but a single stage of audio amplification.

By careful design a one-tube amplifier with a power tube will provide sufficient volume for home use without the chances of distortion that a second audio stage tends to introduce. The principal requirement is that the detector have sufficient output to give the audio tube a chance.

For some time experimenters have been building sets with the second audio stage omitted, endeavoring to build up the signal with more stages of radio frequency. The better results obtained also have led some receiver manufacturers to adopt the same method.

To get the best output, good material is required. The audio transformer must be one that will pass practically all of the voice frequencies. An output transformer should not be omitted.

The parts required besides the audio and output transformers consist of a socket, a 2 mfd. bypass condenser, a quarter ampere fixed resistance, a 200-ohm light duty rheostat and a 171 A tube.

A rheostat is placed in the C battery lead and is used to determine the correct bias for the tube so that it will work at its peak. A 2-mfd. bypass is connected across the B battery leads. Filament control is through the quarter ampere resistance.

The unit may be mounted in a small cabinet, with connections provided on a small panel for plugging into a tuning system.

Toronto Station To Resume British Re-Broadcast

Method Used by CFCA Is Explained—Two Periods Planned.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Sept. 22. — Music from overseas, picked up on a short fave superheterodyne receiver and fed into a transmitter working 356 meters, again is to entertain listeners of CFCA, this city.

For more than three months last spring, CFCA made the rebroadcasting of 2LO, London, and other foreign stations a regular part of its programs, continuing until summer static interfered with good reception. Now it is planned to resume the schedule in September and come on the air at approximately 3 and 8 p. m., Central Standard time, each day.

Besides 2LO, which also sends its programs on 24 meters over 8SW, Chelmsford, signals strong enough to pass along to American listeners were logged from 2FC, Sydney, Australia, which was heard through the short wave station 2ME on 28.5 meters, and from PCJJ, Hilversum, Holland, operating on 31.5 meters.

The receiver which performed so faithfully during the spring broadcasts contained 10 "peanut" or R215a tubes, built into superheterodyne circuit with a four stage intermediate amplifier tuned at 247 kilocycles. The last audio stage was pushpull.

It was described as a standard set, having a panel 18 inches long and 6½ inches wide. The filaments were lighted by battery, with 135 volts on the plate. Plugin tuning coils weer used, with a tuning condenser having two stators — one large and one small. Either stator could be cut in automatically. The wavelength range was from 9 to 190 meters.

When CFCA first went on the air with the rebroadcasts, the receiver was in a poor location. Ultimately, C. A. Lowry, its designer, offered his personal set at his home in the west side of the city. Reception conditions there were considerably better.

Lowry's receiver was built into a writing desk. A pair of wires led from the speaker terminals to a small control panel on the wall nearby. The signal then was passed through a line "equalizer" and 11 miles of telephone wire to the modulator tubes on the CFCA transmitter.

Some interference was encountered from automobile motors and vacuum cleaners and the apparatus controlling oil burning furnaces, but as a whole reception was clear.

It is hoped to relocate the receiver in the country before the fall schedule begins if telephone lines to an inference free section can be obtained.

The photographs of officers of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association that were published in the radio show section last Sunday were taken by Flannery Bros. Studio. Credit was inadvertently omitted.

Noises From Detector Tube.
A microphonic detector tube will cause a ringing noise, which at its maximum drowns out all reception. Shielding it from vibrations will prevent the annoying sounds, or swapping this tube with one of the audio amplifier tubes to get one that is less sensitive to sound will help the condition.

Fifty-five Stations of 5000 Watts Power Are Authorized

Country Might Have 22 of 10,000 to 50,000 Watts if Radio Board Would Grant Necessary Licenses.

With radio engineers almost unanimous in their opinion that good, all-season, all-weather broadcasting requires super power, in fact, power far higher than has been used thus far, not a station has been authorized to use more than 25,000 watts after Nov. 11, when the new allocation is to become effective.

The United States stations capable of using 50,000 watts are: WEAF and WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, N. Y.; KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa., and the experimental station of the Bell Telephone Laboratories at Whippany, N. J.

WENR is testing a new 50,000 watt transmitter in a Chicago suburb. WLW, Cincinnati, will soon have its 50,000 watt station completed.

KFI, Los Angeels, Cal.; WSM Nashville, Tenn.; WBAP, Ft. Worth WFAA, Dallas, Tex. and WTIC, Hartford, Conn., have been granted construction permits to build 50,000-watt transmitters. KNX, Hollywood, Cal., has finished a 5000-watt transmitter that can be turned into a 50,000-watter on 24 hours notice.

WGN, Chicago, and WBZ, Springfield, Mass., have 15,000-watt transmitters and are authorized to use them at full power.

KOA, Denver, has a transmitter rated at 12,500 watts.

WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul; WBBM, Chicago; KGO, Oakland, Cal. (Across the bay from San Francisco); KRLD, Dallas, Tex.; WBT, Charlotte, N. C.; WTPF, Raleigh, N. C. and KSTP, at Westcott, Minn., either have 10,000-watt transmitters or have been authorized to build them to use that much power.

The following stations have been authorized to use 5000 watts after Nov. 11: KFI, Los Angeles, Cal.; WSM, Nashville, Tenn.; WMAQ, Chicago; KPO, San Francisco, Cal.; WLW, Cincinnati, O.; WOR, New York; WSB, Atlanta, Ga.; WJR, Pontiac, Mich.; KFAB, Milford, Kan.; WBAP, Ft. Worth, Tex.; KTHS, Hot Springs, Ark.; KWKH, Shreveport, La.; WABC, New York; WLS, Chicago; WENR, Chicago; WOC, Davenport, Ia.; KJR, Seattle, Wash.; KYW, Chicago; WHAS, Louisville, Ky.; WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va.

WFAA, Dallas, Tex.; KRLD, Dallas, Tex.; WHO, Des Moines, Ia.; KNX, Hollywood, Cal.; WBAL, Baltimore, Md.; WTIC, Hartford, Conn.; WTAM, Cleveland, O.; WBT, Charlotte, N. C.; WPTF, Raleigh, N. C.; KMOX, St. Louis; WPG, Atlantic City, N. J.; WRVA, Richmond, Va.; KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah; WAPI, Auburn, Ala.; WHAM, Rochester, N. Y.; WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind.; KTNT, Muscatine, Ia.; WMBI Chicago; WCBD, Chicago; WCAU, Pittsburg, Pa.; KEX, Portland, Ore.; KOB, State College, N. M.; WRR, Dallas, Tex.; WOAI, San Antonio, Tex.; WKBW, Buffalo, N. Y.

KFJF, Oklahoma City, Ok.; WRUF, Gamesville, Fla.; KGA, Spokane, Wash.; WJAZ, Chicago; WORD, Chicago; WHT, Chicago; WIBO, Chicago; WLAC, Nashville, Tenn.; WEAW, Nashville, Tenn.

Thus this country could have at least a dozen 50,000-watt stations operating within a couple of months; two 15,000-watt transmitters; one of 12,500-watt power, and seven of 10,000-watt power. In addition, it could have 42 stations using 5000 watts.

Instead, the Radio Commission's Nov. 11 allocation provides for: Four stations using 25,000 watts, and one of these, WGY, probably held to daytime broadcasting; two 15,000 watters; one 12,500 watter; seven 10,000 watters, and 55 stations of 5000 watts.

Incidentally, the whole State of Missouri must be contented with one 5000 watt station, whereas one Southern city, Nashville, has the right to one 5000 and two 10,000 watters.

Dallas, Tex., will be authorized to have two 5000-watt stations and one 10,000 watter, and has a construction permit to make one of the three a 50,000 watter.

Requirements to share time or operate simultaneously on the same wave, of course, will reduce the number of effective 5000-watt stations.

Lackaye in 'Trilby' On KYW Saturday

Wilton Lackaye, creator of the role of Svengali in "Trilby," will make his radio debut in this same part during an NBC production scheduled to be presented through KYW and WJZ next Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

Trilby will be played by Carol Fair, who was leading woman for Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader." Harvey Hayes, character actor, will be heard as Gecko.

Lackaye is returning to the theater after a severe illness of more than a year.

Eveready Hour Will Dramatize Books Over Air

"Tristram," Which Won Pulitzer Prize, to Be First Broadcast Under New Plan.

Arrangements have been concluded between the Literary Guild of America and the Eveready Hour to broadcast a number of the books chosen each month by the Guild for distribution to its members.

The plan is said by the Eveready Hour directors to be a further step in the progress of radio broadcasting to a place of distinction among the cultural arts. It is the first definite step by a national broadcaster to take advantage of the wealth of material for broadcasting contained in modern literature. In the main, books to be produced in the Eveready Hour will be current works.

The Eveready Hour management is to receive in advance of publishing dates manuscript copies of books selected, for determination as to their broadcasting merits.

"Obviously," the statement says, "some books may be beyond broadcasting, but it is the expectation of both parties to the agreement that certain of the Guild books will be suitable for broadcasting.

"Decision to undertake the project was arrived at as the result of the admirable results obtained last Spring by the Eveready Hour when it produced a scenario written around and featuring Trader Horn and parts of the book by that picturesque character.

"The first Guild book to be produced by the Eveready Hour under the plan will be "Tristram," the Pulitzer Prize book by Edwin Arlington Robinson, which will be broadcast Oct. 2. This poem of heroic length is expected to afford unusual opportunity for demonstrating the possibilities of the new tie-up between radio and the book world.

The Literary Guild's Board of Editors, which decides what books should be selected includes Carl Van Doren, Editor-in-chief; Elinor Wylie, the poet; Joseph Wood Krutch, critic; Burton Rascoe, formerly Editor of the Bookman, and Hendrik Willem Van Loon, author of "The Story of Mankind."

KNX, Los Angeles, has lost several of its radio stars to the "talking movies."

"Show Girl" Will Be KSD Feature Tuesday Night

Eveready Hour Winter Season to Open With Condensed Version of Book.

"Show Girl," that exuberant Broadway comedy in book form by J. P. McEvoy, will make "whoopie" Tuesday evening over KSD in the Eveready hour, with the author in the role of master of ceremonies as the condensed dramatic and musical version unfolds.

With "Show Girl" as its opening offering of the fall and winter season, the Eveready hour will begin on Tuesday what its directors say will be the most notable series of programs in its history.

Selection of "Show Girl" as the first program of its new season was prompted by the vogue which the new book is enjoying in New York and other large cities and by its peculiar adaptability to radio broadcasting.

Characterized as a "novel-revue —the quintessence of Broadway— the Rhapsody in Blue in book form," "Show Girl" has just been signed by Florenz Ziegfeld for a spectacular revue and is about to be filmed. Its timely presentation in the Eveready hour will introduce to the radio audience Miss Dixie Dugan. In her, say critics, McEvoy has produced the perfect portrait of the real American show girl as Broadway knows her.

Dixie, her greeting card salesman beau, Denny Kerrigan; "Sunshine," a blonde hip-twister in the "Scandals"; Nita Dugan, Dixie's sister; Jack Milton, "a rich sugar," and the other characters of the book will come to life in an adaptation prepared especially for the Eveready hour by McEvoy.

Marcella Shields, Broadway actress, will act the part of Dixie Dugan in the Eveready hour. Miss Shields was chosen as the result of an intensive search for the one best suited to interpret the role of the mirthful show girl, through background and training. She has appeared in a number of plays and has been on the stage since the age of three.

The Eveready orchestra, with Nathaniel Shilkret conducting, will supply the incidental music.

Shielding the Set.

In constructing a set where shielding is used, care must be taken in preventing shorts. In most cases the shield is connected to the "A" negative through the condensers. All leads passing through the the metal should have sufficient insulation so that rubbing against the "can" will not cause a short.

A Tip to Tinkerers.

Do not try to rebuild a battery receiver for operation with AC tubes. This advice is given out because AC sets, as a rule, differ so considerably in construction that rebuilding would entail a material and perhaps prohibitive expense. The use of an ABC unit or other suitable power supply equipment is suggested.

Microphone 'It' Possessed by Few Would-be Broadcasters

Only About Five Per Cent of Applicants at One Radio Program Agency Pass Their Auditions.

Microphone "it" appears to be more than merely rare. For example, of 3000 would-be broadcast artists heard by the auditions department of the Judson Radio Program Corporation in the past year less than 150, or only 5 per cent, have been passed as qualified.

An applicant for a broadcasting engagement first submits to the auditions department, which is headed by George E. Collins, a complete history of his or her musical training and experience, together with previous experience in operatic, concert, theatrical or broadcasting works. The applicant is then booked to be heard by an auditions committee.

This committee, except Collins, do not know the name of the applicant, nor do they see him or her before or during the audition. They listen in an audition room or at their desks, which have speakers. They are, however, supplied with a record of each applicant's musical history, which is identified by a number assigned to each individual by which he or she is announced.

In the audition studio the artist performs before the microphone after the announcer has called the number corresponding to his record. The audition committee decides only on transmission of voice or instrument, being unbiased by the personal equation. In short, they are able to judge just as the radio audience will judge, having no personal contact with the performer.

No one fault is the greatest barrier between the applicant and microphone success, according to Collins. It is generally a combination of two or more faults. An applicant, generally, either qualifies or it is found that he is handicapped in several departments of the musical art. Among the usual reasons for failure are: Microphone fright, temperamental unfitness for broadcasting, ignorance of microphone technique, voice or instrumental technique unadaptable for microphone transmission, faulty diction, a limited repertoire, and lack of musicianship.

The foregoing applies only to soloists. When groups of vocalists or instrumentalists are heard, the process and reasons for failure, while more complicated, run about the same general course.

In many cases, the voices of aspirants for soloist positions are of such quality as to bar possessors from their goal, but the voices may blend with other voices in certain combinations. To sort or classify such cases, a complicated marking system is used, and, at intervals, groups of singers are asked to reappear at auditions for blending purposes. In this way vocal ensembles are organized.

TELEVISION PLAY RECEPTION POOR AT LONG DISTANCE

and produced a disturbing glare in the image. Bright, shiny surfaces such as polished glass caused a diffusion of light that destroyed sharpness of image.

"The Queen's Messenger" has but two characters. The lady was played by Izetta Jewel, a former stage star, now the wife of Prof. Hugh Miller of Union College. Maurice Randall, veteran member of the WGY Players, was cast for the messenger. Joyce Evans Rector and William J. Toniski doubled for Miss Jewell and Randall; that is, they doubled for their hands and at the third transmitter or camera handled the various "props," cigarettes, glasses, keys, dispatch case, etc.

One receiver picked up the signals from the air, getting an excellent image from the transmitter of WGY, about four miles from the studio. The image was seen in a small aperture in the receiver three by three inches square.

Dr. Alexanderson's recent television developments of his laboratory apparatus include mechanism for projecting a 12-inch image on a screen 10 feet from the projector. This apparatus was at the Radio World's Fair, New York, this week. It permits transmission of the full figures of two performers. The head image reproduced is life sized. A silver screen not unlike a motion picture screen receives the projected image in clear focus several feet from the disc.

Direct Selling By Radio Still Moot Question

Radio Board Inclined to Make Exception for Iowa Stations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. — Whether the radio station owner, who uses his microphone to sing the praises of merchandise he is selling, serves the public interest still is a moot question with the Federal Radio Commission.

The commission from time to time has received numerous complaints from listeners who disapprove of long talks extolling the virtues of a particular brand of overalls, seeds, household utensils and other wares for sale by the broadcaster.

The view of the commission on this question is given in a report outlining its attitude on the principles of public service.

"Where the station is used for the broadcasting of a considerable amount of what is called direct advertising, including the quoting of merchandise prices, the advertising is usually offensive to the public," the commission says. "Advertising should be only incidental to some real service rendered to the public and not the main object of a program.

"The commission realizes that in some communities, particularly in Iowa, there seems to be a strong sentiment in favor of such advertising on the part of the listening public. At least the broadcasters in that state have succeeded in making an impressive showing before the commission when the matter has come up. The commission is willing to concede that in some localities the quoting of direct merchandise prices may serve as a sort of local market and a service may thus be rendered. That such is not the case generally, however, the commission knows from thousands of letters which it has had from all over the country complaining of such practice."

For the Notebook.

Audio tubes that have been in use a year, or an average of 1000 hours of service, should be replaced with fresh ones.

A condenser should be selected for capacity only. The number of plates is no formula for determining the capacity.

The best way to livene up an old storage battery is to give it a good overcharge for three or four hours after the specific gravity ceases to rise.

MORE PLAYGROUNDS URGED FOR COUNTY

Larger School Grounds Needed, Says Jefferson R. Smith.

Jefferson R. Smith, secretary-manager of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce, has outlined reasons why more school playgrounds should be provided. The county chamber is campaigning to obtain a playground for every county school. Civic, business, professional and educational organizations of the county are being asked to support the campaign.

First, Smith points out, there is the moral reason, because "proper recreation is a preventive of delinquency."

Giving additional reasons, he continues: "Vacant acreage adjoining school sites is available at reasonable prices and it will never be cheaper.

"St. Louis recently paid $250,000 for one-half of a city block, then had to pay for wrecking buildings on it. Increased taxes can be prevented by buying up vacant acreage for county school playgrounds.

"Playgrounds are the beginning of community entertainment and such entertainment needs encouragement for the farmer boy and girl even more, if possible, than for the small suburban town.

"County school children need places for school picnics. There should be baseball and playground facilities for children of all ages within reach of every county community.

"City planning has shown playgrounds should adjoin school sites to eliminate duplication of locker and other facilities.

"Thousands of automobiles have made it unsafe for children to play on streets and highways.

"Playgrounds should have a minimum of five acres for grade schools, 10 acres for junior high schools and 20 acres for high schools. This acreage will preserve land and home values.

"Parents must provide the places for their children to play. Playgrounds make good citizens of tomorrow. And only active workers can obtain playgrounds for their children."

BELGIAN CONGO IS PRODUCING LARGE QUANTITY OF DIAMONDS

One-Fifth of World's Output in 1926 Came From Kasai Mines.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, — At the present rate of increase in the diamond production of the Belgian Congo, the South African diamond fields may soon lose their monopoly of the world market. The Belgian Congo, especially the Kasai district, has become since the war a serious competitor.

In 1913 the output of the Kasai mines hardly totaled 15,000 carats. Ten years later the output reached 415,000 carats. In 1924 the production totaled 548,000 carats; in 1925, 886,000, and in 1926 the million mark was passed, with an output of 1,108,000 carats. This represents one-fifth of the total world's production.

These results have been achieved mainly by means of the modernization of the plants. The pick and other primitive instruments are being superseded by excavators, steam trommels and washing machines of the latest type. This policy, coupled with the systematic building of 4000 miles of roads, a 70-mile narrow gauge railway and the use of motor tractors, is steadily reducing the proportion of native labor, which has to be imported from neighboring districts, as compared with the output. Last year 23,835 workers produced roughly 1,200,000 carats as against 548,000 carats produced during 1924 by 20,652 workers.

The Kasai diamonds, like all alluvian diamonds discovered so far, are of a small size.

Eiffel Tower Being Painted.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 22. — The Eiffel Tower is getting a new coat of paint. Thirty tons of paint, costing about $20,000, are necessary for the tower to look its best. It gets its new coat of paint every eight years. This year is an exception. A new kind of paint has been tried out on a fourth of the surface. The rest will be painted at the regular time, in 1932.

"The Greenwich Village Follies" Here Tonight

Opening of "A Night in Spain" Postponed to Oct. 7 at Shubert-Rialto—Will the West Pay for 'Original' Casts?—Pulitzer Prize Play Here Oct. 11-13.

The Greenwich Village Follies opens a week's engagement at the Shubert Rialto tonight. There will be only one matinee and that on Saturday. The show comes to St. Louis after a run at the Grand Opera House, Chicago, and the assurance that the entire Chicago cast and production will be presented here.

Heading the cast of fun makers is "Dr." Rockwell. This exponent of phony therapeutics and authentic humor is aided by such accomplished practitioners as Blossom Seeley, Evelyn Law, Carlos and Valeria, Benny Fields, Jans and Whalen, Laura Lee, Eddie Shubert, Helen Gilligan, Walter Armin, Jennie Beach, Sheila Barrett, Babe Fenton, Bendova, the Merediths and Arnold Johnson's orchestra.

A new troupe of dancing girls will be provided, in the original Chester Hale girls. J. C. Huffman staged the show and Harold Atteridge worked out the skits and sketches. Ray Perkins and Maurie Rubens, whose compositions have figured in several Broadway hits, wrote the music and Watson Barrett did the settings.

"A Night in Spain," which was to have come to the Shubert-Rialto next week, has been changed to the following week. This, the most lavish of the current Shubert revues, will be in St. Louis for one week beginning Oct. 7, with the New York and Chicago cast virtually intact. The only matinee will be on Saturday.

When the Shuberts ventured westward with "Gay Paree" last season, this looked to them like a hard winter for the larger extravaganzas. They did not know if a revue could profitably be sent west with the original high-priced principals, since they hadn't tried it. The most prosperous of these girl-and-music shows could count on but a year to live east of the Mississippi, and a year was not enough—not if the producers were to make anything on it. But "Gay Paree" came through as a road success—financially—which showmen had not believed likely. Thus encouraged, they are trying to follow it up this season.

More than 100 persons take part in "A Night in Spain," which is divided into two acts and 40 scenes. And if anyone fails to guess what it's like from the title, look at the names of some of the episodes—"Spanish Shawl," "Nocturne," "Blue Bird Room," "Argentine" and "Bambazoola."

Phil Baker, abetted by one Sid Silvers, Aileen Stanley and Ted Healy, with a pup called "Weak Liver," without apologies to Strongheart, lead the cast. With them are Cortez and Peggy, who have been seen here in vaudeville; Helba Huara, Spanish dancer; and Tito Coral, South American singer, and the Gertrude Hoffmann girls.

Paul Green's drama of the Carolinas, "In Abraham's Bosom," which won the 1926 Pulitzer prize in drama, will come to St. Louis, direct from a 200-night run at the Provincetown Theater in New York, for three evenings and a matinee, Oct. 11 to 13, at the Odeon.

A Pulitzer prize is awarded each year to "the most original play which best presents the educational value and power of the stage in raising the standard of good morals, good taste and good manners."

The play has 12 characters; 10 Negroes and two white. It is built on a Negro theme almost as old as our literature. The author, who is professor of philosophy in the University of North Carolina, knows his Negroes, and what he barely touched on in the original one-act play of "In Abraham's Bosom" he has, in this work, developed into a tragedy of epic pretensions.

Green, who is only 33, has written 40 one-act plays and two full-length dramas, and is credited with a new type of lyrical folk drama. He was born on a North Carolina farm. He is studying the theater in Europe at present as winner of the Guggenheim award, which provides for research on the Continent.

Through association with the Playmakers, a group of college players and writers, he had opportunity to see his early efforts staged and acted by fellow students. Often he turned out a play to order, but his heart was in the Negro folk-plays. In those days he was most careless of the manner, but passionately devoted to the matter of his plays. Others of his plays are "The Last of the Lowries," "White Dresses," and "The Old Man of Edenton."

Gloomy Reflections on the Future of the "Talkies"

By JACK ALEXANDER.

Of the special articles which have considered the new sound devices in the light of their probable effect on motion picture entertainment, the majority seem to have overlooked one important fact, and that is the law of supply and demand. Writers have told us of the broader fields of action the introduction of sound will open to the dramatist who has hitherto been confined within the conventional three walls of the stage. The demise of the movie scenarist has been predicted and a new type of dramatic entertainment forecast, with the thoughts of the dramatist borne out of the stuffy theater and transported on the pinions of the camera tripod from the slums of London and the boulevards of Paris to Yankee Stadium and the nine-hole golf course in Forest Park, all in one act, without the ridiculous shifting of painted scenery. What the movie has up to now lacked—sound—has been gained, and its own peculiar gift of unrestricted movement, which the theater lacks, will make for a higher form of art, so we are told. A few polite doubts as to these conclusions may be pardoned.

In the first place, getting back to this supply and demand idea, how many people want a higher form of art? Is there really a demand for more subtlety in direction, more finesse in the handling of situations? For, unless the public which pays the expenses demands such things, no magnate is going to risk a series of box office failures for the sake of art. From the lack of appreciation of really great silent pictures in the past, we are entitled to conclude that these qualities are not what the man and woman in the audience—you and I excepted, of course—want.

WHAT do the movie goers, whose half dollars and quarters have created these chromatic and architectural monstrosities of movie palaces, want? Well, men want suspense and action, or fighting. They want to see the hero caught in a maze of circumstances through which he must, as they know he must, shoot, drive, fight or butt his way out of. They love to see the six-guns blaze, the villain's face contort, as the clouds of powder smoke envelop his form, the trade of left and right hooks, the phaeton roaring down the highway, the plane flopping out of an Immelman turn and onto the tail of the German ace's ship. These things are endured by the little gal at the man's side because she knows that when the gangsters are buried, the bootleggers hustled to jail and the German ace turned into a flaming corpse, some banker's daughter, some shop girl, some French peasant femme will be the reward of the hero's valor. Love, what else? And will these things be enhanced by the sound devices? Very likely they will, at least as far as the man's enjoyment of the picture is concerned; now we will hear the bestial grunt of the villain as his solar plexus is flexed, the ghastly whine of the wind through the wires of a falling aircraft and horrible noise of its impact with the earth. "Wings," the famous air-fighting picture which was made before the sound machines were well developed, is being released all over again with a sound accompaniment. A striking instance of how sound can help the suspense of a picture is "The Whip," an absurdly ham affair, whose big moment is when the express car, containing the "dark" horse in the Ascot race, is unhooked from the

AT THE PLAY

By ST. JOHN ERVINE.

Mr. Ervine, who for a long time has been known as the foremost critic of the stage in London, is now in New York. His comments on the American Theater, as revealed in America's greatest producing center, will hereafter be printed in these pages.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.

TO come into New York a stranger and a foreigner, and attempt to fill the place formerly filled by Alexander Woollcott is an audacious undertaking, and as I sailed past the Statue of Liberty, that tall, green woman whose long right arm so stiffly upholds the torch of freedom, and suddenly realized that I was about to engage in this enterprise, I felt my heart sink within me. I have known Mr. Woollcott for nearly nine years, and I have yet to meet the man whose conversation and company are son consistently good as his. In my time, I have met celebrated talkers in their off-moments, and have felt that perhaps Mr. Coolidge's tea-table talk was brighter and snappier than theirs; but never on any occasion have I met Woollcott when his conversation was not extraordinarily pleasant to hear. It is, indeed, a fault in him that he talks so well that one is reluctant to speak lest one should miss any of his remarks. It is to succeed to him that I have come from London to New York, and I begin, therefore, with a flattering bow and a nervous stammer. My audacity frightens me. I feel abashed by my own impudence. Almost I am tempted to turning tail and running away. However, since I am here, I shall attempt to the best of my ability to maintain the high standard which Alec Woollcott raised. If I succeed, I shall have done exceedingly well.

MY first plays were singularly diverse in quality and style. I arrived on the Leviathan on Monday, Sept. 10, and on the evening of that day saw the first performance in New York of "The High Road" by Frederick Lonsdale. This is a dazzlingly clever comedy of bad manners, entirely theatrical and without relationship to real life, but it is full of deft situations originally turned, and the dialogue is swift and abruptly funny. Mr. Lonsdale has an extraordinary gift for inventing a good line, and he tosses them off with such an air of spontaneity that they appear to be "gags" suddenly made by the actors. This is one of the cleverest comedies I have seen for a long time, but do not let it deceive you into the belief that English lords talk or behave as Mr. Lonsdale's lords talk or behave.

I saw a melodrama called "Trapped," which was so-so, and another brilliant comedy of bad manners, this time American, called "Night Hostess," by Philip Dunning, part author of that stupendous piece, "Broadway." "Night Hostess," in my opinion, is a brilliant play. My colleagues in criticism received it with less enthusiasm than I thought was due to it. It deals with "the little casino life" of Broadway, and is full of observation and character and lively, vivacious dialogue.

AND now, while I am making myself familiar with the New York theater, let me tell my readers of the singular career in London of a young American actress who five or six years ago was totally unknown in England and seven or eight years ago was not known in America. Americans are immensely curious about Tallulah Bankhead's success in the West End of London, and I have been asked more questions about her than any other person in the British Islands. Their curiosity is not unnatural, for her rise to popularity has been swift and very striking. She is not the only American actress who has a prominent place on the English stage. Miss Edith Day seems to be established as leading lady at Drury Lane. Miss Peggy O'Neill is starring at the

By O. O. McINTYRE

One of Broadway's famous characters is the suave and dressy Nick the Greek, whose winnings and losings at dice and other gambling games have become White Way legends. Very few have seen him in action, but he does exist. He bears marked resemblance to Valentino and is cool and imperturbable in a great crisis. He wins in the out country, but is nearly always taken for a "cleaning" on the White Way. His real name is Nicholas Dandolos. And he wears pink hued shirts with autumn brown ties, which is said to be a swell sartorial combination.

An academic gentleman writes his distress over what he calls "newspaper English." He says the haste and carelessness in newspaper writing is undoing much of the excellent work of schools and colleges. If he could only realize the short time and high pressure of newspaper making he would be amazed they do so well. It may be unbecoming for one in the trade to mention it, but my opinion is there is far more need of worry about our colleges than our newspaper English.

Short Shavings: Helen Morgan is reported to have quit night club work permanently, which is vastly to her credit. . . . Nellie Revell has become the press agent for the interests of J. P. McEvoy, author, playwright and newest of the Broadway slangmakers. . . . Alexander Woollcott's back from Italy after threatening to spend a year there. . . . Rumors are he will return to dramatic work. . . . They are saying Peggy Joyce is to become a Lady now. . . . Lee Shubert usually dines alone at inconspicuous cafes. . . . Chic Sale has never been in a night club save the one he worked in for three weeks. . . . Maud Fulton is directing plays in Los Angeles. . . . Robert Benchley is Guy Fawkes of the New Yorker. . . . Russian restaurants seem to be going the way of puff sleeves. . . . Some radio artists are quadrupling their salary "plugging" songs . . . H. N. Swanson, editor of College Humor, writes editorials stretched out on the floor. . . . Gene Markey, the Chicago writer, is reported engaged to Ina Claire, the actress, shortly to star under the Ziegfeld banner. . . . David Belasco tucks his napkin in his collar. . . . The dean of New York dramatic critics is Percy Hammond, since the passing of Alan Dale. . . . By Nov. 1, there will not be a legitimate theatrical attraction on Broadway. All movies. . . .

A new York reporter has worked in every city in the U. S. of more than 100,000 population, also in Mexico, China, France, England and Canada. A lady informs me that after 18 years of insomnia she found herself cured. "I got so," says her letter, "I did not care whether I slept or not. Indeed, just when I was beginning actually to enjoy wakefulness I found myself dropping off into a slumber and sleeping like a log."

That is like most of our troubles. When they cease to worry us they cease to exist. Very Pollyana-ish, but very true.

Three sons of a friend of mine have been given tentative names. When they have reached the age of 18, they will be permitted to select their own names. That is sensible.

He keeps up with the slang of the day and whistles the latest tunes. Hopper does not drink now and never did drink to excess. But he is a heavy smoker and irregular in his sleeping and eating.

It will stand more than six feet high in the sun porch of Colleen's Hollywood home, and its 14 rooms will have every modern convenience, including gas for the kitchen range, running water for the bathtubs and electric lights throughout.

"The Patriot" America's Greatest Motion Picture

Directed by Ernst Lubitsch and With Emil Jannings In the Star Role This Production Now on View at the Missouri Justifies the Prodigal Resources of Hollywood.

WHOEVER called for a Shakspeare of the films was thinking in terms of scenario writers, no doubt. But it ought to be evident by now that the nature of motion pictures is such that only the director can supply the imaginative heat that will produce in the aimless posing of actors the qualities of coherence, intensity and universality that are found in the enduring literature of the spoken drama.

I doubt very much that the world, or any considerable part of it, has been sitting around anxiously waiting for the films to produce its Shakspeare. But if such is the case I suggest that the pretensions of Mr. Ernst Lubitsch be immediately considered. In doing so I have in mind not only the loose connotation of genius that goes with Shakspeare's name but the Shakspearean method of treating character in relationship to the forces that produced it and can destroy it and the Shakspearean disdain of mere dramatic trickery.

These properties are on view in "The Patriot," which is showing this week at the Missouri Theater and which, to my mind, is the greatest motion picture ever made in America. The field of view is limited to America in order to be conservative. Offhand I can not think of a better picture. Not even "The Last Laugh," which, like "The Patriot" was distinguished by the presence of Emil Jannings in the leading role, can seriously challenge the eminence of a production that at last offers some justification for the prodigal resources of Hollywood. "The Last Laugh" was more compact than "The Patriot" and it had a sustained eloquence that was all its own. But it lacked the depth, the richness and the scope of the latter.

THIS film is offered to the public by its sponsors as a sort of necessary appendage to the hypnotic personality of Mr. Jannings. Actually the personality of Mr. Jannings is always subordinate to the picture as a whole. This should not be taken to mean that Mr. Jannings is less forceful than in former appearances, for his portrait of the half-mad, wholly demoralized Czar Paul has all the gusto and poetic mobility that one could possibly expect from him. It may conceivably come to be known as his best role, in fact, for the reason that the whole artistic element in which he moves is so arranged by the directorial genius behind the production as to point up his natural brilliance. But its dimensions are so heroic that Mr. Jannings can—and does—turn on the full torrent of his vitality without in any way belaboring the piece out of its proper balance.

A further commentary on the artistic soundness of Mr. Jannings as an actor and the play as a whole is found in the fact that both are big enough to permit Lewis Stone, in the role of Count Pahlen, to give a performance that challenges the attention of the audience continuously. Mr. Stone has always been one of the few motion picture actors who consistently displayed good taste and restraint. In "The Patriot" he becomes quickened to a penetrating delicacy of gesture and facial expression—so much so that doing the same in any ordinary production he would have easily dominated the cast.

BUT, like Mr. Jannings, he is the instrument of certain irresistible ideas rather than of his own virtuosity and his acting is always toward the play rather than toward himself. The "idee fixe," which dominates so many epic characters in drama, literature and in life itself—like Joseph Conrad's "Nostromo," like Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler"—is what makes Count Pahlen the implacable nemesis of the Czar Paul. To his mind the safety and peace of his country demand the removal of this creature and everything—love, friendship, his own life—are trivial in comparison. What heightens the personal tragedy of Count Pahlen is that by nature he is generous and honorable and is genuinely fond of the Czar—half-wit and degenerate though he be. Moreover, he has none of the zeal of the martyr, none of the mad surge of the fanatic. His patriotism has a certain humility about it, too much humility to permit him to dramatize his position.

All of these qualities are imparted to the audience by suggestion. They are the net inferences that one is left with after all is said and done and Count Pahlen has removed himself from the scene in the manner of the Roman Patricians.

STILL another evidence of the priceless integrity of this photoplay is that when it is over, one does not remember having been treated to a dazzling display of camera technique. It is only when one begins to check back that one realizes how fully Mr. Lubitsch has utilized the resources of photography. The mobility of the camera never served a better purpose than when it followed the Czar through door after door as he scurried from his chamber to his council room and back again in search of a riding crop to beat his mistress with. The camera was also brilliantly used in connecting up long shots, medium shots and close-ups into one continuous rhythm. For instance when the agonized Czar, terrified by his dreams, called for Count Pahlen during the night, one literally saw an outgoing wave bearing the message and an incoming wave that brought the Count back to the bedchamber.

I was also tremendously impressed by the way Mr. Lubitsch handled his masses. The mob scenes were few and of brief duration. But they were so judiciously introduced that one constantly had a sense of the whole of Russia lurking outside the Czar's windows.

A 20-page brochure could be written about this photoplay, but it will be unnecessary to anyone who will go and see it. Let it suffice that here at last is a picture that embodies the Aristotelian definition of tragedy—that is, a purgation of the emotions through pity and terror.

ST. JOHN ERVINE LOOKS AT THE AMERICAN DRAMA AS SHOWN IN NEW YORK

Lyceum. Miss Dorothy Dickson has been in London so long now that people have forgotten that she is an American. Miss Adele Astaire is the idol of all sorts and conditions of men and women. American actors are equally popular. Joseph Coyne has been popular for years, and Ernest Truex seems likely to rival him in public favor. But none of these clever and deservedly popular players have had the success that Miss Tallulah Bankhead has. She arrived in London five or six years ago unknown almost to people of the theater, and totally unknown to anybody outside the theater, and within three years she had become the second greatest draw on the English stage, Miss Gladys Cooper being the first.

HER position is an odd one. Scarcely any men like her as an actress, but women are "dippy" about her. There is a fairly general agreement that she is not an accomplished actress. Many Americans, hearing of Miss Bankhead's success in London, expressed astonishment at it, and insisted with over-emphasis that the English theater must be in a very bad way if she seemed to us to be good at her job. I personally dissented from these opinions and informed my American friends that while it might be true that Tallulah could not act in New York, it was certainly true that she could act in London. New York, seemingly, could not make an actress of her, but London could, and Mr. Sidney Howard, when he saw her performance in "They Knew What They Wanted," was astonished by its fine quality. That performance remains her best. She is not, however, a great actress, but she is a great personality.

She did not immediately come to popularity, but wobbled for a while between success and failure. Then, suddenly and unaccountably, she became the darling of the goddesses. A bodyguard of infatuated girls rose up and announced on every occasion that Tallulah was the most wonderful and most marvelous actress on earth. A first-night in London of a Tallulah play is a positive orgy of emotion. The devoted maidens, who stood in a queue outside the theater for hours, waiting for the doors to be opened, cling to the bars and barriers of the pit and gallery in a sort of delirium. If Miss Bankhead, while "resting" from work, enters a theater on a first night, her admirers become frantic with excitement. Her power to attract people is such that she is even able to draw people who assert that they dislike her. She has some physical ability to draw the strength out of an audience. She eats audiences. She is the nearest approach to a vamp that I have ever seen or heard of. The whole energy of an audience is drawn out of it and drawn into Tallulah. She makes people yield up their vitality to her.

For a while she seemed to lose her popularity, but now she has turned the tide in her favor. Her envious enemies prophesied that her day would soon be over, and they even speculated on the date of her return to America. But "Her Cardboard Lover" brought her back to favor, and she is now, in my opinion, definitely established in London. If she ever loses her position, she will lose it herself. No one can lose it for her.

Facing the Music

Paid-up memberships in the Civic Music League for the present season are ahead of any previous year. The regular headquarters for the league at 1004 Olive street will open on Oct. 1, where delinquent members may pay their dues and for the enrollment of new members.

The first regular rehearsal for the season will be held by active club members of the Apollo Club n the rehearsal room of St. John's M. E. Church, Kingshighway and Washington, tomorrow, Monday evening, at 8:15.

Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, music director of the Mel-Harmonic Club, announces the club's first meeting of this season for Wednesday evening, Sept. 26, at 8 o'clock sharp, at Baldwin Recital Hall.

The Music Committee of the Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club, consisting of Dorothy Gaynor Blake, Alfred Lee Booth and William Parson, director, with Mrs. C. C. Robinson as chairman, are now working out programs for the coming season of choral concerts. They have definitely decided on a sacred concert which will feature unusual and distinctive Christmas music. This concert will take place in December. The Music Committee's plans for the following concerts involve a soloist of international reputation. The name of this artist will be announced later.

GLOOMY REFLECTIONS ON THE FUTURE OF THE "TALKY-TALKY" DRAMA

train and lies in the path of the speeding London Express. The latter is represented by a ridiculous miniature train, obviously being jerked along a studio track by a flunkey, but the microphone must have lain in the coal tender of the Twentieth Century Limited, for the illusion of tremendous power and speed and noise is so effectively wrought that the audience at the local theater where the film was shown broke out in loud applause from sheer nervous relief when disaster was finally averted and the Express sped on its way, although it was snickering subconsciously at the toy train.

THESE things, then, will be enormously improved in the new motion picture. They will be slathered on, in fact, with a table knife and the next generation will wonder how this one was ever content with the silent movie. Probably, too, color photography will by that time have been perfected and perhaps the illusion of depth will have gained a foothold. These will make for more accurate and complete presentation of life and action but they will never make for better pictures, unless the public undergoes a change of taste. News events, scenic and travel pictures and such like will be immensely improved, for the more fully they are reproduced, the better they will be. But art in anything, if we may become textbookish, lies not in the completeness with which a scene or plot is delineated but in the selection of high lights and episodes which the director employs to express his idea and then juxtaposition in the fabric of the work. A photograph of a dish of fruit, touched up in colors, may be far more faithful in its representation of the fruit than a famous painter's conception of it but the art collector will disregard the photograph and write a large check for the painting. A more significant fact, though, is that most people would prefer the photograph. And that is what will prevent the new sound movie from producing a higher type of art. There is virtually no demand for it.

Any prediction as to the future of sound photography at this time is, of course, particularly rash but there is no law against it and it is fun. It is fun, for instance, to see a movie enthusiast writhe when it is suggested that the true function of sound photography when mechanical perfection is finally achieved, will be to bring the charm of "legitimate" drama to places where the road companies never penetrate. Whether this will be its main sphere of usefulness or merely a secondary one, it is a highly practical item. As things stand and have stood for some time, only city dwellers and those who have the opportunity and cash to journey to the cities, have been able to see the best drama. Many of the best dramatic productions never even go on the road so that even the large cities frequently are deprived of them.

In the sound movies at their present crude stage of development the dialogue is stilted and the characters seem to be reciting individual rumble-bumble instead of contributing to a smooth flow of speech. This is a personal prejudice and, as such, calls for no poisoned candy. But it is our belief that the physical limitations imposed by the theater actually force originality and ingenuity, and that the boundless opportunities of the new movie will give rise to a slipshod crew of sound scenarists who will let the immensity of the physical creation and the tricks of the trade supply for their own inherent defects.

BEETHOVEN'S NINTH TO BE PLAYED HERE IN FULL DEC. 21-22

Apollo Club and Morning Choral Will Aid Orchestra in Towering Opus.

The ninth or "choral" symphony of Beethoven will be presented in full, for the first time by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Dec. 21 and 22, at the final pair of concerts to be directed this season by Emil Oberhoffer.

The St. Louis organization has played the first three movements, which are purely orchestral, but so far as recorded, never has attempted the complete symphony. Voices for the fourth movement will be provided by the Apollo Club and the Morning Choral Society, which will begin rehearsals tomorrow under their director, Charles E. Galloway. The quartet will be composed of Helen Traubel, St. Louis soprano, and three New York singers to be announced later.

This fourth movement includes some of the most beautiful, as well as the most difficult music ever written for the human voice, and the "Ode to Joy" has an element of timeliness in the last program before the holiday season.

RHEUMATIC NEURITIS LIKE HEAVY WEIGHT ON SHOULDERS

Pain, Stiffness, Numbness and Weakness Common Symptoms of Ailment—Many Claim Weldona Effective.

Rheumatic neuritis of the shoulder and arms is a common complaint during the cold weather. One should consult their doctor immediately, as rarely does this ailment pass off without treatment. The chief complaint may be the experience of a heavy weight on the shoulder, difficulty in getting the arm to the head, or pain when putting a coat on. Numbness of the fingers and stiffness of the shoulders, with marked pain at night and weakness of the hands and other symptoms. The arms get tired when holding a newspaper, sewing, sweeping, etc. Keep the arms warm, avoid sitting near open windows unless well clothed. Many claim Weldona has entirely rid them of rheumatic neuritis and when ordinary remedies fail one is pretty sure to find relief in this preparation. One trial proves it. Weldona is put up in a tablet form and will not upset the stomach or affect the heart. Weldona may be obtained at Walgreen's Drug Store, 514 Washington Ave., St. Louis, where the Weldona representative, who meets the public daily, gives out the 24-page, fully illustrated books: "Germs of Rheumatism" which are absolutely free to all who call or write for them, and explains more about Weldona. BRIDGE TO SPAN GRAND CANYON

Marvelous Crossing to Open New Short Route Between Arizona and Utah Which Will Permit Both Sides of Great Gorge to be Easily Accessible by Tourists.

By ROBERT H. HALL,
Automobile Editor.

ONE of the greatest feats of engineering ever attempted in the West is being completed at Lee's Ferry in northern Arizona, where a mammoth steel highway bridge is being flung across the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River.

The great steel crossing when completed will cost $340,000. Of this amount $100,000 of the Navajo Indian tribal funds was appropriated through an act of Congress and the balance is being provided by the State of Arizona.

The design for the bridge was made by the bridge department of the Arizona Highway Department. The main span consists of three hinged arch-battered trusses which rise 102 feet above the floor system. The total length of the crossing is 834 feet and it rises 465 feet above the water level of the Colorado, and when completed will be the highest bridge in the world.

An idea of the difficulties attending the construction of the bridge can be gained from the fact that at the point where it crosses the Colorado, the Grand Canyon is 640 feet feet wide and 467 feet deep. Already human toll has been exacted. Recently a steel worker slipped from a beam and his body dropped into the swirling rapids in the Colorado below and was never found. Several days ago a truck hauling cement rolled over the canyon rim and immediately disappeared from view.

A unique problem of psychology has developed during the construction work. Recently a rope net was designed with the hope of avoiding casualties. The steel workers, however, refused to permit its use, contending that it constituted a mental hazard rather than an aid.

The bridge replaces the old Vado de los Padres, or crossing of the fathers trail of Mormon pioneers, established in 1873 by Mormons of Arizona who, becoming restless, had begun a gradual migration to Utah.

When the new bridge is dedicated and thrown open to highway travel on Nov. 10, the great maw of the Grand Canyon will no longer be an obstacle to quick travel between Arizona and Utah. It will open a new and shorter route from Canada through Salt Lake City to Mexico, with two entrances to the southern Republic being available, one at El Paso, another at Nogales. Furthermore, it will permit tourists in either Utah or Arizona to visit both sides of the Grand Canyon by auto without the necessity of a troublesome, round-about journey.

In the past, motorists going south out of Utah bound for Arizona have been forced to detour either west into Nevada or east into Colorado to enter it, thus adding at least 300 miles to their journey by either route.

Entrance to the Sunset State when the bridge at Lee's Ferry is opened will be a much simpler problem. Motorists from the north, coming from Salt Lake City; any of the National parks in Colorado, Yellowstone or even Glacier Park on the Canadian border, will follow U. S. 89 directly south from Salt Lake City to the Arizona-Utah border, cross it at the little Morman hamlet of Fredonia, thence continue on U. S. 89 to the northern rim of the Grand Canyon, cross the Lee's Ferry Bridge, and proceed on their journey across the Paria Plateau and the Western Navajo Indian reservation to Tuba City. Thence the route will be to Flagstaff, from which point any city or scenic point in Arizona is easily accessible.

Since the new bridge is the only vehicular bridge for 600 miles between Green River, Utah, and Topock, Ariz., it will be the means of the first direct route from Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon and the Rainbow Natural Bridge in Utah to the cliff dwellings near Flagstaff, the Najavo and Hopi Indian country in Arizona. Tourists who want to visit the famous Carlsbad Caverns near the Mexican border in New Mexico continue east from Flagstaff on the newly designated Carlsbad Cavern to Grand Canyon Route to Holbrook, thence southeast to Springerville, the capitol of the White Mountain country, then east to Roswell, N. M., and south to Carlsbad.

Tourists bound for El Paso and Old Mexico follow the same route to Springerville, then continue south over the Coronado Trail to Clifton, where U. S. 180 is taken to Lordsburg, U. S. 80 through Mesilla, N. M., to El Paso.

Opening of the new bridge will also give tourists coming from the North easy access to a portion of Arizona larger than the State of

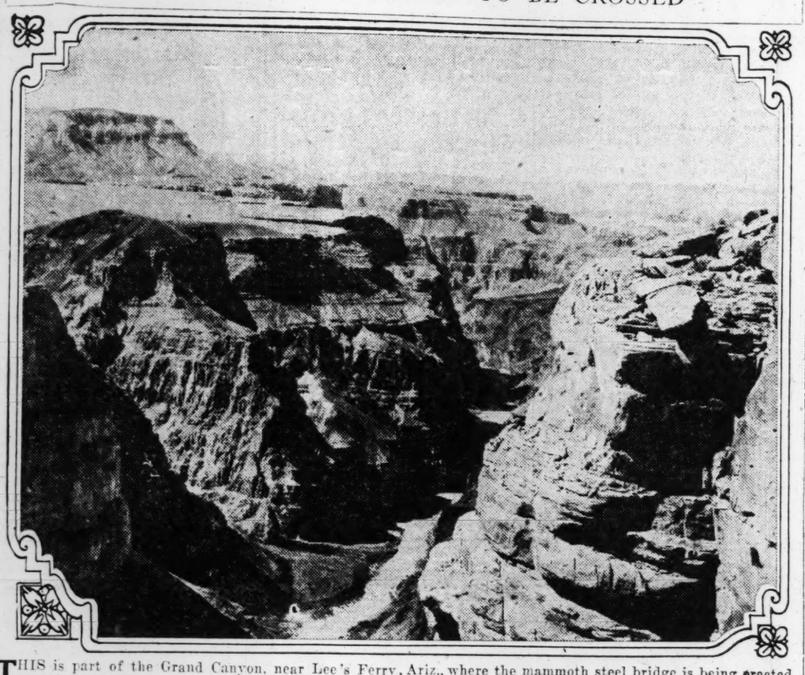
WHERE GREAT GORGE IS TO BE CROSSED



THIS is part of the Grand Canyon, near Lee's Ferry, Ariz., where the mammoth steel bridge is being erected. Although the bridge cannot be seen because of the canyon's twisting, a good idea of how great the task to build it can be gotten from the pitcture. Note the Colorado River deep in the canyon bed.

AMERICAN EXHIBIT FOR PARIS SALON

French 'Flivver' Cars Expected to Excite Most Interest.

WHEN the greatest automobile show in the world, the annual Paris Salon, opens on Oct. 4 to runs for 10 days, 28 builders of American cars will exhibit their products. There will be on display cars of six more American manufacturers than exhibited last year, a representation ranked only by the French themselves.

Manufacturers of other countries will also be represented, but the makes are few—names which few Americans will recall, makes probably not as popular even in Europe as some of those which are imported from the United States.

Other salons are held annually in Europe. The Prague salon has just closed, the Olympia Show in London opens in November as does the Berlin Salon, and Brussels will hold its annual automotive exhibit early in December. But it is to the Paris Salon that the eyes of the automotive world annually turn.

It is of greater significence than the National Salons of the United States, held in February of each year, for to it the manufacturers send their experts, and from the models on display — new innovations and improvements—ideas are obtained to set a style fashion for new American cars. Paris remains the style center of the world in automotives as in dress and from its salon annually is derived the keynote to luxuriousness in finely made American cars.

Workmen are now putting the finishing touches to the decorations in the great Grand Palais, where the salon is held. Cars already are arriving from many countries, and are being held in storage until they can be placed on the show floor.

Aside from the American cars, the French and Italian models are likely to create the most interest. Two cars, especially, both French makes, will hold the critical attention of both public and manufacturer. One, the new 10-horsepower Citreon, for reliability and economy is said to be comparable to the old Model T Ford. The understanding is that in price it will probably also compare with this erstwhile most popular American car. Being a new car, however, and being launched under a publicity and advertising program similar to that by which the new Model A Ford was presented to the public, specifications and price are being carefully guarded until the psychological time.

The other unit, the Rosengart, a 5-horsepower car, is not such a mystery, although body styles and prices have not been published. It is, however, simply the English Austin "Seven" chassis sponsored in France by a company backed by Lucien Rosengart, formerly associated with Citreon and earlier with the Peugeot interests. It, like the Citreon, is understood to be of the "flivver" type, and if successful will be the basis for some price-cutting competition the like of which neither Europe nor America has seen. To which end both cars are being placed on the market.

Much is to be said for cars of this type. The element of luxury not entering, and transportation, economical and reliable transportation, being the real consideration. Imagine a 5 or 10 horsepower car capable of hauling five passengers anywhere that a larger automobile does, yet being operated with a gasoline consumption of about 80 miles to the gallon in comparison with probably 10 to 15 m. p. g. for the average passenger motor vehicle.

The Italians, who have contributed many excellent cars to the automotive world, will be represented by the Fiat, Lancia, Issotta-Fraschini, Ansaldo, Bianchi, Itala and Alfa Romeo. Germany is sending several new Mercedes-Benz creations, and Horch, Brennabor, N. S. U. and Opel models. Belgium will have the Minerva, F. N. and the Imperial-Excelsior groups, and England, despite her numerous automotive concerns, will be represented only by Rolls-Royce and Austin models.

Gasoline Once Was Considered To be Worthless

PRIOR to the advent of the automobile gasoline was considered a valueless and dangerous byproduct of the petroleum trade. Millions of gallons of gasoline were destroyed before a use was found for the essence which today is so vital a factor in transportation.

In the process of distilling petroleum, the lighter oils, naphtha and gasoline, are first obtained, and these were considered waste products for many years. Kerosene, the heavier oils and greases, constituted the greatest demand, and gasoline had only a limited use in exceedingly small quantities, such as the cleaning of fabrics.

Not only was gasoline practically useless in the "good old days," but it was dangerous because of the attendant risk of fire which was ever present wherever quantities were stored. Millions of gallons were loaded into huge tanks on barges, transported far out to sea and there dumped. Thus was the fire hazard averted.

California Airport Makes New Records

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 22.—New traffic records are being established regularly with the constant increase in traffic on the municipal airport here. Passengers carried on flights from the airport during August totaled 5876, making a total of 28,544 during the first eight months of this year. In the same period 45,541 landings, of which 6340 were student flights, were recorded.

CALAIS, France, Sept. 22. — Air jaunts to England in 15 minutes are offered the public at France's first seaplane port at Calais. FRONT-WHEEL DRIVE USED BACK IN 1862

Expert Tells of Good and Bad Points of Principle.

"Concerning the future of front-wheel drives, there is good ground for the view that the advantages they present outweigh the disadvantages, but it does not follow as a necessary corollary that front-drive cars will become the popular type or even that they will be adopted soon by many manufacturers," writes Herbert Chase in the September issue of the S. A. E. Journal.

"It is known, however, that at least three or four companies, including one or two prominent makers, are greatly interested in this type of drive and either have experimental cars well advanced or are planning to build them. One company is reported to have acquired the Miller patent rights on front-wheel drives. It would not be surprising to see two or more front-drive cars offered at next year's shows if, indeed, some such designs are not marketed before that time.

"The fact that such drives appear to add materially to the safety of driving, especially at high speed and under conditions where skidding is likely to occur with rear-drive cars, is a consideration of primary importance."

Chase points out that this form of construction is not new, as the first front-wheel drive is reported to have been used in a self-propelled vehicle as long ago as 1862, and it was applied to gasoline-driven vehicles at least as early as 1900. New interest in the subject has been aroused by the use of of Miller and Marmon front-wheel-drive racing cars in the last two years.

In discussing the question whether this type of drive is coming or going, the author lists 18 advantages and 12 disadvantages it is thought to possess. Each of these is discussed more or less in detail, and descriptions are given of half a dozen front-wheel drive constructions in American racing cars, motor trucks and motor-coaches, five French, three German, an English and an Italian.

Some of the advantages mentioned are: Unincumbered space for a body of almost any design and dimensions; elimination of a bulky, complicated and heavy rear axle; increased safety skidding and overturning; decrease in total weight; freedom from shimmy tendencies, and decreased upkeep cost.

Some disadvantages are said to be: Decreased traction when accelerating and hill-climbing; greater complication of driving mechanism; harder steering; insufficient road clearance in front; increased wheelbase or overall length, and possibility of greater injury to the engine and transmission in the event of collision.

FIRE CLOSES RIVER BRIDGE AT MEMPHIS

Ferries Charging $3.50 Per Car—Illinois Route Advised.

Damaged by fire beyond immediate repair, the Harahan bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn., was closed to traffic the past week and probably will not be reopened for several months. Three ferries, however, are in operation and will handle the bulk of automobile traffic. The charge is $3.50 per car.

A good alternative route to Memphis, in dry weather, however, is as follows: Cross the Free Bridge and follow Illinois No. 12 to Sandoval, thence south on Illinois No. 2 to Cairo, where the Ohio River is ferried to Wickcliffe, Ky. The ferry charges at this point are $1.50 per car and 25 cents for each passenger.

A 10-mile detour which is virtually impassable in inclement weather must be used between Wickcliffe and Bardwell, from which point the route is concrete and gravel, the major points on the way being Fulton, Ky., and Dyersburg, Tenn.

Motors Cooled by Air Predominate in Aero Races

Of 94 Planes Entered in Great Circus at Los Angeles, Only 34 Were Powered by Engines With Water Radiation.

By CAPT. W. H. LEININGER.

A notable fact at the National Air Races and Aeronautical Exposition staged last week at Mines Field near Los Angeles was the outstanding predominance of planes employing air-cooled power plants. The majority of the aviators taking part in the various events placed their dependence for victory on air-cooled motors, the entry list showing 60 air-cooled power plants as compared with 34 of the water-cooled type.

It is significant to note that in the transcontinental nonstop race from New York to Los Angeles, the most gruelling test arranged, all the entries employed air-cooled engines.

Automobile engineering once led the way for aviation, but transportation's newest sister now takes the lead in accepting air as a cooling medium, the obvious cooling method for automobile or airplane.

Lindbergh, Byrd, Goebel and others who have made flying history in the last few years, have used air-cooled power plants.

Mines Field had been made ready to entertain the greatest throng of aviation enthusiasts ever seen on the Pacific Coast where flying interest is very high. A five-mile race course was marked off by pylons, spaces set apart for bombing and many other exhibitions and contests, and a building 500 feet square was erected to house the exhibits.

Radio-equipped planes circled the six main arteries leading to Mines Field during the peak traffic hours, to watch for traffic jams and advised officers who diverted the streams of motor cars at threatened points.

Planes of all descriptions were entered, their power plants ranging from the small four-cylinder engine to the big air-cooled motors of more than 800 cubic inches of piston displacement.

The transcontinental class C

THESE ARE THE NEW MARMON 8's

The New Series 68 and 78, the outstanding values in two great price fields . . . .

THIS has been a big year. Never before has development been so rapid, so far-reaching. Never before has the public been offered so much automobile for its dollar . . . It takes real ingenuity to keep abreast of this rapid pace . . . But Marmon, it seems, has met this requirement, and again produced the unusual. In its products are now incorporated such unusual advantages that the public can hardly fail to place the New Series "68" and "78" 'way ahead of anything yet presented in the two great Marmon price fields.

1—They are wonderful looking cars. New low and even more impressive body lines. New, more massive front-end appearance. All exposed metal parts double chromium plated.

2—Each is powered by a Marmon-built straight-eight motor, rather than a six. Larger motor—more power in the "68"; even smoother operation in both cars. Top speed—65 to 75 miles per hour in the "68"; 75 to 80 in the "78."

Dependability and Low Upkeep Costs—Ask any of the present 30,000 Marmon 8 owners.

Conveniences such as you have previously associated only with the most expensive. Many new features such as the ingenious coincidental lock on the instrument board which locks both transmission and ignition in a simple turn of the key.

Prices—New "68," $1465. New "78," $1965, f.o.b. factory. De luxe equipment at moderate additional cost. Convenient time-payment plan.

AUTO SHOWS TO BE VERY ELABORATE

Plan Is to Have Foreign Plants Exhibit on Large Scale.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22.—National automobile shows in New York and Chicago to be held in January and February will be staged in a new atmosphere, according to present plans.

For the first time floor space has been offered to foreign manufacturers and entry blanks were mailed out this week. It is considered likely that several foreign manufacturers will avail themselves of this opportunity to display their products alongside of American creations.

The New York show will be held in Grand Central Palace, Jan. 5 to 12. The Chicago display will be staged in the Coliseum Jan. 26 to Feb. 2.

A new car arrangement will be in vogue at the New York and Chicago shows. The high-priced units will be grouped apart, on an upper floor, leaving the ground floor space for the lower and medium-priced products.

In addition the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers Associati . has announced the intention of its members to present an elaborate display.

Many of the leading automobile manufacturers are in the midst of expansion programs involving millions or have announced plans for increased facilities during the fall and winter months. In some instances manufacturers are planning several years ahead.

While General Motors, Ford and Chevrolet are leading the field in this line, many of the smaller companies are expanding in greater proportion

The leader in expansion proportionate to size appears to be Graham-Paige. When the Paige-Detroit Co. occupied its new quarters on the west side of Detroit several years ago, the plant was described as the most modern in the automobile industry. Some idea of the growth of this company, now known as Graham-Paige, may be seen in the fact that Graham Brothers have found it necessary to expand this plant to nearly twice its size.

A complete engineering laboratory, also a "car-test" building, surrounded by a concrete test track, have been added by Graham-Paige to its expansion program at the Warren avenue plant. Work on both buildings have begun. The cost of the buildings alone, without equipment, will be $200,000. Besides these buildings, an addition to the main power plant, with new boilers and power equipment to a total cost of $75,000, has been begun.

Willys-Overland stands next to Graham-Paige in proportionate expansion. This company recently constructed a new building 840 feet long, 102 feet wide and four stories high, with eight acres of floor space. A new plant also is being built at Los Angeles to assemble cars.

race, for engines of 500 or more cubic inches piston displacement, had four air-cooled engine entries. Class B, for power plants of from 510 to 800 cubic inches' displacement, had 11 air-cooled and one water-cooled entries. Class A, for engines of 510 cubic inches and under, had nine entries, seven of which were water-cooled motors.

In the California Class A race from San Francisco to Los Angeles, 14 planes were entered. Four were air-cooled engines and the remainder water-cooled. In the Class B contest between Oakland and Los Angeles, the five entries were all air-cooled planes.

Among the air-cooled engines entered were the Wright "Whirlwind," Wright JB5, Warner Scarab, Pratt & Whitney "Wasp" and "Hornet," Menasco, Kinner, Hispano-Suiza, Anzani, Hallet, Fisher & Jacobs, Cirrus and Moundsville vertical four-cylinder. A majority of the water-cooled type were the Curtis OX-5.

Bridge to Span the Grand Canyon

Rhode Island, with a population of less than 1000 persons, rich in timber and minerals and the scenic beauty of Kaibabnal Forest, which came into prominence in the past few years because of the extraordinary increase of its deer herds. Two years ago, it will be recalled, an attempt to migrate the herds south of the Grand Canyon failed because of the obstacle the great gorge presented and the forest was thrown open to hunters in order to deplete the herd.

Each year the State conducts supervised wild buffalo hunts north of the new bridge to eliminate unfit animals.

There has been, as previously mentioned, a ferry in operation across the Colorado River at Lee's Ferry since 1873, whence its name. But at best the ferry trip was hazardous and finally was discontinued the past spring when the ferryboat overturned in foaming rapids and eight persons lost their lives.

Indiana to California Tour Cost 4 Total of $110

Factory Engineers Demonstrate Economy of Making Long Trips in Auto—Figure Includes Gas and Hotel Bills.

Assuming the role of a party of every-day tourists or business travelers during a 2412-mile trip from Indianapolis to Los Angeles, four members of the Marmon experimental engineering staff have completed one of the most unusual journeys on record during which they demonstrated conclusively the growing value of the modern motor car for long-distance travel, not only from the standpoint of speed and comfort, but economy as well.

Summing up the results of the trip, it is apparent that the family which wishes to "See America First" in a manner that, without the hindrance of fixed schedules, suits its own fancy may do so by automobile with no fear of excessive cost. The expenses of the Marmon party were, in fact, only about one-fourth the total estimated cost by train for four people who allow overnight stops in comfortable hotels rather than continuing railroad travel day and night.

From an engineering standpoint, the primary purpose of the cross-country journey was not one of speed or endurance but to make a final test of the cooling system. Only one quart of water was used on the journey, although the car, a sedan with four passengers, was driven over the Southern route to the coast, which includes travel in desert and mountain regions as well as over almost every conceivable kind of roadway.

The party arrived in Los Angeles on the evening of the fifth day after leaving Indianapolis. Distances of 400 to 507 miles were covered each day and nights were spent in hotels in Kansas City, Kan.; Syracuse, Kan.; Albuquerque, N. M., and Williams, Ariz. But 61 hours of driving time were required to complete the entire trip, making the average speed approximately 40 miles per hour, a rate that may be maintained steadily without fatigue and with ample opportunity to "see the sights" along the way.

A detailed log of the trip was kept and a final checkup showed the entire cost of gasoline, oil and hotel accommodations to be only $110 for the four men. Had they made the same trip by train, stopping each night in a hotel and combining, as they did, speed with comfort and pleasure, their total expense would have been in the neighborhood of $400.

The journey was planned and brought to completion under the direction of Thomas J. Litle Jr., chief engineer of the Marmon Motor Car Co. and former president of the Society of Automotive Engineers. He instructed the members of his staff to carry out the trip in the same manner as would an average automobile owner, at the same time making a careful check of the action of the new cooling system in the high temperature areas of the Southwest. Of the details of the trip and its results, Litle said:

"The route taken by our four engineers was virtually the same as any tourist would choose, except that through New Mexico and Arizona the most difficult road was selected so that the cooling system could be tested under the most trying conditions. During this part of the trip, temperatures were encountered that would seldom be found during the entire length of service of an automobile in the hands of an average owner. However, the total amount of water added to the radiator from the time the party left Indianapolis until its arrival in Los Angeles was only one quart.

"The end of the first day's travel after leaving Indianapolis brought the party to Kansas City, Kan., 507 miles, which was covered at an average speed of 41.3 miles per hour. The second day out of Indianapolis ended in Syracuse, Kan., with the speedometer showing 503 more miles at an average speed of 40.5 miles per hour.

"Passing through La Junta and Trinidad, Colo., rougher going was encountered, but the party pressed on through Santa Fe, N. M., to Albuquerque where the third day's journey ended with 456 more miles added to the total. Although the conditions on this day were highly unfavorable, the average speed was maintained at nearly 41 miles per hour and even showed a slight increase over the day before.

"Before starting out on the morning of the fourth day the only water necessary on the entire trip—one quart—was added to the radiator. The day's driving ended at Williams, Ariz., 400 miles further on, after a lengthy stop in the afternoon at Holbrooks, Ariz., where officials of the State Department of Agriculture inspected the car and heard the story of the trip from Indianapolis. At noon the fifth day, Needles, Cal., was reached and in the evening the party arrived in Los Angeles after completing the last 516 miles of the journey.

"It is important that the cost for each passenger was only $27.50 for the entire trip, aside from meals. We did not add the item of depreciation to this figure but it should be kept in mind that to the economy of the automobile must be added the pleasure of proceeding as one's fancy dictates, which contributes in an inestimable degree to the advantages of motor travel."

New Three-Ton Graham Brothers Truck Announced

A new three-ton truck designed to fill the demand for a sturdy, speedy pneumatic-tired truck of larger capacity than they have before offered, has been announced by Graham Brothers, the truck manufacturing division of Dodge Brothers. The new model is offered in three wheel bases, 135-inch for dump bodies, semi-trailers and other heavy duty work; 165-inch for 12-foot bodies, oil tank service, etc., and 185-inch for 15-foot bodies, including moving vans and other open and closed bodies for hauling of more bulky commodities. The price range for the chassis is from $1745 to $1970, factory list.

With the addition of the three-ton truck, Graham Brothers' complete line now includes more than 40 standard body types on six capacities of commercial cars and trucks and two motor coach chassis, said to meet over 96 per cent of all hauling requirements. In addition, highly specialized and unusual needs are supplied by the company's special equipment division.

Powered with a six-cylinder engine having a crankshaft supported by seven bearings, the new three-ton truck is featured by four-speed heavy duty transmission and four-wheel Lockheed hydraulic internal expanding brakes. The chassis construction throughout is heavier than any type ever offered by the company.

Cabs have been designed to provide driver comfort comparable with that of a passenger car. Seat backs and cushions are of sedan construction, being built over well padded spring frames. The corner posts are of steel to provide slenderness and strength. The windshields are one-piece construction and equipped with automatic wipers. For convenience, the lighting switch is located above the steering wheel.

Bright Car Colors Here To Stay, Experts Say

Feminine Taste, Which Guides the Selection of the Auto in Most Cases, Decrees for Duotone Contrasts.

The vogue of bright colors which has featured automobile fashions the past five years shows no sign of passing, Chrysler color experts believe. They agree that the vivid and picturesquely named shadings which replaced the former somber and monotonous finish of motor cars are destined to occupy a permanent place in public preference.

The trend, however, is toward a more harmonious use of color, in chromatic blends which employ various related shades of the same basic color, rather than toward sharp contrasts.

Feminine taste largely guides the selection of new cars just as it shapes the vast majority of family expenditures. Feminine taste has decreed a permanent vogue for the light, pleasing tones so popular of late in home furnishings, in dress and in hosiery.

Americans today, educated in recent years to a heightened appreciation of artistic expression—those of moderate means as well as the wealthy—have acquired an assured consciousness of quality and have definitely left behind them the timid conservatism of former times. They know the beauty of color and confidently trust their knowledge to guide their indulgence in its use.

The prospect at present is that color combinations will continue to be chosen with scientific selection of color values, with especial consideration to their adaptability for each particular type and model of car.

Chrysler color technicians, who played a leading role in the trend away from the archaic, somber finishes, point out that the duotone contrasts will continue for an indefinite period not only because they have met with universal public approbation, but because, from the manufacturers' standpoint they have been widely recognized as superior to anything previously turned out.

E. M. Lasker Forms Chrysler Dealership

E. M. Lasker, well known on Automobile Row for the past 15 years, has formed Lasker Motors, Inc., a Chrysler dealer organization, with himself as president, J. F. Lasker as vice president and Alfred Vorhaus as secretary and treasurer. The one-story brick building at 5626 Gravois avenue has been obtained as headquarters.

Although the official opening will not take place until Oct. 1, its sales service and parts departments are already open for business, and a full line of Plymouth and Chrysler "65" and "75" model car are on display.

PLANE MOTOR BURNS CRUDE OIL IN TEST

Engine Without Carburetor and Ignition System a Success, Experts Say.

Aeronautical engineers in a regular Stinson-Detroiter monoplane, piloted by Walter Lees and Capt. L. M. Woolson, the latter designer of the engine, made a successful test of an oil-burning airplane motor, the first of its kind. Woolson is an engineer for the Packard Motor Car Co. at Detroit, which plans to market the engine.

The motor, which company officials say marks a revolutionary step in the development of airplane power, is of the radial air-cooled type and develops 200 horsepower. It involves use of the Diesel engine principle of oil for fuel and eliminates gasoline, ignition system, carburetors, spark plugs and other mechanical and electrical parts usually used in present airplane engines.

The engine derives power by firing from compression in the cylinders, the Diesel system that heretofore has been applied only in extremely heavy engines for power plants and boats. Aside from the simplicity and ruggedness of design, the engine has fewer parts than the lightest gasoline engine now in use.

The three cardinal improvements over the gasoline motor, claimed by the designers, are:

Elimination of the danger of fire from gasoline.

Reduction of fuel consumption and cost. It is claimed the motor will carry a plane 25 per cent further with the same weight in oil fuel as compared with gasoline.

Making possible of radio communication with aircraft on a broad scale due to elimination of interference by electrical ignition systems and gasoline engines.

From the engineering standpoint, the most brilliant achievement is claimed in the weight reduction of such a Diesel engine. Until now the lightest Diesel engine ever built weighed 100 pounds per horsepower. The new plant weighs less than three pounds per horsepower.

German engineers, who have been struggling for years in an effort to reduce the weight of Diesel engines were quoted in recent newspaper dispatches as having given up the task as far as efforts to make the engine applicable for airplanes were concerned.

Largest Air Cargo Shipped for Reo

The largest air mail cargo in the history of the world was sent from Lansing, Mich., to all parts of the United States a few days ago when the Reo Motor Car Co. dispatched nearly 350,000 letters, weighing 10 tons, in 17 Stinson-Detroiter monoplanes. This shipment was the first move in a gigantic direct-by-mail advertising campaign in behalf of the Reo Flying Cloud, according to officials of the company.

The Thompson Aeronautical Corporation of Cleveland had direct charge of the assignment of air mail, that company holding the contract to carry air mail in Michigan. Officials of the company received special authorization from the Postmaster-General at Washington to extend their facilities for this huge undertaking.

This largest single consignment of air mail to be carried by the largest mail-carrying fleet of planes of the same design, represented a total of $17,500 in air mail stamps—one stamp for each of the letters that made up the 20,000-pound shipment.

Each inclosure weighed about an ounce, the unit of weight in air mail charges, and each letter bore a 5-cent stamp. With the exception of the first few thousand, each letter of the Reo air mail cargo bore a special cachet. This stamp will enhance, for stamp collectors, the value of the "covers" taken on the flight that has attracted nation-wide attention.

Auburn Wins Races On Two Continents

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 22.—Strictly stock Auburns, a speedster and a cabriolet model, have won first place in races in Europe and South America, against a field made up of American and foreign made cars, executives of the Auburn Automobile Co., here stated today.

The 115 speedster was an easy victor at Athens, Greece, in the recent kilometric run, one of the annual sports events of that city. The average one way speed was 155 kilometers per hour.

In the annual eight kilometer hill race, which is one of the most picturesque events of the Grecian capital, the same Auburn speedster captured first place by making the distance in 9 minutes and 9 seconds. The road up this hill is extremely steep and turns are sharp and dangerous, it was reported.

The Touring Club of Greece officially presented the drivers of the Auburn speedster with two cups and two gold medals.

At Esperanza, Santa Fe, in Argentine, a strictly stock Auburn cabriolet won first place in the annual automobile races against a similar field of American and foreign cars.

Would Bar Public Parking.

Public parking may be abandoned in Sydney, Australia, and both taxicabs and private cars may have to be kept in their own parking places. The suggestion has been made in an effort to relieve the present traffic muddle. Taxis would be summoned entirely by telephone.

At St. Louis Air Fields

COL. LINDBERGH demonstrated the air skill for which he is known here when he led the 'Three Musketeers," the Army's three-plane formation of superstunters at the Los Angeles air races, according to Maj. William Robertson, Lindbergh's former boss, who returned from the races Wednesday.

"Slim didn't ask to fly with the 'musketeers' following the unfortunate death of Lieut. J. J. Williams, leader of the formation, but he lost no time in accepting when the chance to take Williams' place was offered," Maj. Robertson said. Although he has not flown formations in a fast ship since he left teharmy school, 'Slim' took the lead in the group and put on a show that took your breath away. The two other 'musketeers' displayed the utmost confidence in his leadership and hung on each wing as closely as when they were following Williams. 'Slim' enjoyed it thoroughly, and the air service appreciated his readiness to take the place of a comrade."

The "Three Musketeers" are members of the First Pursuit Group from Selfridge Field, which includes some of the crack pilots of the country.

Praises Los Angeles Races.

Maj. Robertson praised the Los Angeles races and aeronautical exhibition. Due to the elimination of the Pulitzer trophy race from the program, there was nothing approaching the speed attained at the national races held here five years ago, however. Maj. Robertson is of the opinion that the St. Louis races were better organized with regard to safety of entrants.

"It was a wonderful show, however, and demonstrated the growth of aviation," he said, "although I saw nothing that might be termed really different in aircraft design."

The four Curtiss-Robins, which were on exhibition at the show, attracted considerable attention and drew favorable comment from all sides, Maj. Robertson said.

Night Courses in Flying to Open.

Night courses in aeronautical subjects will begin at Washington University next Friday under the direction of Lieut. J. F. Fisher and Ensign Ralph Hall, naval reserve pilots. Two ground school courses, a course in naval aviation and one in aerodynamics will be offered, with a view to preparing students to pass United States Department of Commerce and military reserve examinations. Subjects will include theory of flight, navigation, meteorology, planes and motors. Classes will be held Tuesday and Friday nights the first semester, and Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday the second semester. Enrollment for the first semester began last Friday.

Two Parachute Leaps Today.

The enlisted men of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service still are clamoring for chances to test the 28-foot training parachute, with the result that the air unit has an air show Saturday and Sunday afternoons. The following jumpers have tried out the chute to date: Sergts. Burkhardt, Sweet, Berglund and Freeman and Privates McMahon and Brennan. This afternoon Private Jeude will jump at 3 o'clock and the chute will then be repacked by Sergt. Jimmie Tate, the unit's parachute expert. At 4:30 Sergt. Morton will take a header from a plane piloted by Maj. Wassall. The jumps will continue each week-end until the supply of volunteers runs out.

The training set is equipped with two parachutes, the 28-footer carried on the back and a 22-foot emergency chute at the chest. All jumps are made from an altitude of 2000 feet.

Air Mail Business Picks Up.

The Robertson Aircraft Corporation appears to be in for the largest mail carrying month since the air mail service was inaugurated here, the reduction of the postage rate to 5 cents being responsible. Last month the St. Louis-Chicago air mail route showed a larger proportionate increase than any of the other routes. Officials of the Robertson Corporation contemplate accepting a contract for a "shuttle" mail route from St. Louis to Evansville, Ind., to connect with the Chicago-Atlanta route.

Phil Ball on Way to Coast in Plane.

Phil DeC. Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, took off Wednesday in his Ryan brougham for another trip to the Pacific Coast. Ball and his pilot, Frank Dunn, plan a week's hunting near Cherokee, Ok., on the way to San Diego.

Six Qualify for U. S. Licenses.

Six advanced students of Parks Air College on the East Side were notified last week that they were qualified for Federal licenses as limited commercial pilots. Those who qualified are: Robert H. Miller of 3215 Hawthorne place; Walter B. Keebie of 6252 Northwood avenue; Benedict A. Ritcler of 906 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis; Murl C. Davis of Lake Charles, La.; Horace C. Heising, Chicago, and James L. Malone of Dupo, Ill.

Parks Air College is the most active institution of the kind in this section of the country, night classes recently having been inaugurated in the mechanics' school department. Heating plants are being installed in the seven instruction buildings and dormitories in preparation for a busy winter.

Maj. Lambert Speaks at Quincy.

Maj. Albert Bond Lambert flew to Quincy, Ill., Friday afternoon with Capt. Harry Young to speak before a meeting of civic organizations interested in establishing an airport at Quincy. The Major and Capt. Young returned home yesterday.

Bixby and Knight Learn to Fly.

"Boots" Dempsey, pilot for Oscar Johnson, has a new pupil in the person of Harold Bixby, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce. Bixby owns a Travelair jointly with Harry H. Knight, one of Lindbergh's backers, who recently graduated into the solo class. There is considerable rivalry between the owners of the Travelair, and Bixby plans to learn some of the Dempsey aerial maneuvers and then take Knight along as a passenger. Oscar Johnson, who recently soloed at his private flying field at St. Albans, is planning to buy a new plane capable of a speed of 150 miles an hour and equipped for long cross-country flights. He is considering a Stearman with a Wasp motor.

B. F. Mahoney to Visit Here.

B. F. Mahoney, president of the Mahoney Aircraft Co., makers of the "Spirit of St. Louis," is expected here, probably this week. The Mahoney company is sending through five Ryan monoplanes to Pittsburg. Mahoney and Gentry Shelton, who flew to the Los Angeles races in a Curtiss-Robin, will fly two of the ships as far as St. Louis.

Students Play Indoor Baseball.

The majority of the 65 students of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft School go in for indoor baseball during the lunch hour.

Barnstorming Pilot Returns.

Milt Girton, chief pilot for the Von Hoffmann Co., returned Wednesday from an extended barnstorming tour through the Iowa corn belt.

Two Chinese to Enter Air School.

Two Chinese youths from Hongkong have written officers of Parks' Air College that they will arrive for instruction about Nov. 1. Other countries represented in the Parks College enrollment are Australia, Mexico, Cuba, South America and Canada. There is also one "citizen of the world" under instruction. He is T. R. Wilburg, an ocean-going mate, who is learning to fly between voyages.

Army Flyers Stop at Scott Field.

Some of the army representatives at the Los Angeles air races stopped off at Scott Field during the week for fuel. Eleven pursuit planes of the First Pursuit Group dropped in Thursday on the way to Selfridge Field. The mechanics of the group ride in a big Fokker transport. Friday eight Keystone bombers roaring their way back to Langley Field, Va., stopped over an hour while their spacious fuel tanks were refilled.

Plane Fare to Chicago Reduced.

The fare on the Robertson Aircraft Corporation's St. Louis-to Chicago passenger route will be reduced from $40 one way and $75 round trip to $30 and $55 Oct. 1. Since Aug. 20, the day the route was started, 220 revenue passengers have been carried over the route.

High Water Halts River Survey.

High water interrupted the aerial survey of the Mississippi between St. Louis and Cairo, which is being made by C. H. Butler of Cleveland under contract for the War Department. Butler, flying in a Curtiss-Robin piloted by "Bud" Gurney, filmed 60 miles of the river working upstream from Cairo before the rise reached them. A specification of the contract is that the river must be at an approximate 10-foot level when the photos are made.

One New Air Student a Day.

The Robertson Aircraft Corporation flying school has been receiving on an average of one new student a day for the last month. Ninety-seven students have been graduated from the school since Jan. 1. The instruction is under the direction of Lieut. Cuiff Hutchison of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service.

Chain Cafe President a Visitor.

W. L. Anderson, president of the White Castle system of lunchrooms, piloted his Travelair into Parks Airport last week from Wichita. He was accompanied by Robert Hasty, his attorney. They are making a tour of cities in which there are White Castle lunchrooms. Other visitors at Parks Airport included C. O. Bell of Alliance, O., on a business trip to St. Louis, and E. J. Cameron of Detroit.

Enjoys Plane Ride at 85.

His first ride in an airplane made an aviation enthusiast of William Hobert, an 85-year-old Civil War veteran, of Mattese, Mo., last week, when he went up at Lambert-St. Louis field with Joe Hammer, pilot for the Von Hoffman Aircraft Co., in one of the company's Ryan brougham planes. Hobert, who has tried covered wagons, railroad trains and automobiles, was so pleased with his latest means of transportation that he declares he is "going up again real soon."

Franklin Sales Reported Strong

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—With retail car deliveries so far this month 47 per cent ahead of the same period of last month and 102 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of 1927, indications are that this month's business wil be the largest September volume in the history of the Franklin Automobile Co., executives of the company declared here today.

Shipments of Franklin Airman Limited models the first half of the current month showed a marked increase over August shipments for the same period.

Unfilled orders on the books of the company for export shipme t this month are 1 percent greater than any other September.

August deliveries of Franklin cars to owners, although not completely reported, indicate all previous retail deliveries for August will be surpassed.

Air Service Between U. S. and Canada Soon

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—The first international air mail service between Canada and the United States will commence the latter part of September when a daily service will be inaugurated between Montreal and Albany. The rate of postage will be five cents for the first ounce and 10 cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof.

Under an international agreement all classes of mail matter posted in Canada may be sent for transmission over any United States air mail route at the rate of five cents for the first ounce and 10 cents for each additional ounce, this rate to be paid by Canadian postage stamps, including both the postage and the air mail fee.

Marmon Executive To Sail for Europe

Just three weeks after his return from a trip through Central and Sotuh America, Frank L. Hambly, export manager of the Marmon Motor Car Co., will sail for Europe Sept. 22, to confer with Marmon dealers there regarding the introduction of the New Series Marmon 68 and 78 and to conclude arrangements for a volume of fall export shipments.

While in Europe Hambly will visit Marmon representatives in England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Spain and will attend the Paris Salon and the London Olympia exhibit.

Building Plane To Cross Ocean In 11 Hours

Iowa Smithy Deserts Forge to Build 300 M. P. H. Craft.

His forge stands idle and the horseshoes rust on their racks while S. W. Lambert, 74-year-old blacksmith of Hancock, Ia., spends his days building an airplane that he believes will be able to cross the Atlantic in 11 hours.

Lambert believes his craft will attain a speed of 300 miles an hour and in addition will be able to hop off from a standing position, "rarin' right up in the air" instead of having to taxi on rubber tires. It will be a cabin-ship with a pilot and four passengers.

Lieut. Glen Martin, a Hancock boy and war-time pilot, has consented to conduct test flights this fall.

The past five years of Lambert's life have been devoted to the airplane slowly taking shape in his back yard, from parts whittled and smoothed and adjusted in his combined bedroom, living room and workshop, at the rear of the old blacksmith shop.

The shop itself he padlocked, being through with it forever. He enters it only under protest. Its only value, in his eyes, is a storage place for his cherished Hall-Scott motor. With no intermediate auto-tinkering era, Lambert made the jump from horse-shoeing to airplane construction.

"I started working on this airplane as a part-time job," he said. "I just got to thinking that I wanted to do it, and I might as well. And after I got into it, the blacksmithing bothered me so that I shut up shop."

No working drawing or blue print aids him. He made a model, but he give it away as a bird house.

Exempt Physicians.

Eight states in the Union now exempt physicians from compliance with speed laws while answering emergency calls: Arizona, Arkansas, California, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico and Texas. Six of these states provide that the speed law shall not apply when emergency calls are being answered.

Smallest Automobile.

The smallest automobile ever evolved has been designed in Germany. Weighing 20 pounds, the machine has a four-cylinder, water-cooled gasoline engine, clutch, differential, accelerator and brakes, and makes 17 miles an hour.

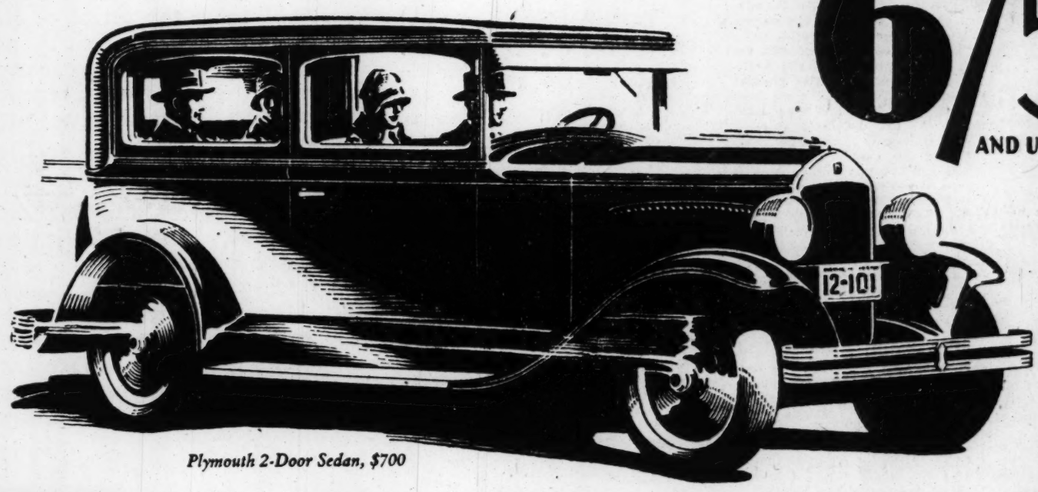
CHRYSLER

Plymouth

$675 AND UPWARDS



Plymouth 2-Door Sedan, $700

. . . The Secret of this Car's Amazing Popularity

—Plymouth's Greater Dollar Value looms up when compared with the few other cars in the lowest-priced field.

The important difference which people at once recognize when comparing the new Plymouth with the few other cars of its price-class is its greater dollar-for-dollar value.

To place any of these cars beside the Plymouth is to become conscious immediately of contrasts which begin with its full-size and style and include such luxury features as the new chromium-plated slender profile radiator, "air-wing" fenders, arched-window silhouette among a score or more of others.

No need to be mechanically minded to recognize that the Plymouth has built into it those qualities of performance which distinguish each and every car built by Chrysler under its principle of Standardized Quality.

Riding in the Plymouth, you sense at once the Plymouth's fundamental strength and durability, as well as the abundant power and speed of its new "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine; and the safety of its internal hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.

Give yourself the joy of half an hour's demonstration in the Plymouth.

We are confident you will declare it as unapproachable in performance as it is unapproached in dollar-for-dollar value-giving.

PERFORMANCE OF PACKARD IS PRAISED

Custom Eight Sedan Is Called a Real Hill Climber.

By the Auto Editor.

One can speak of Packard performance almost reverently. And to speak of its convincingly, one must have handled a car of the type over varied roads. Thus only is its remarkable roadability, its instantaneous acceleration, the smooth, quiet power of its great engine revealed.

Such an opportunity was granted the writer the past week when, accompanied by a member of the mechanical staff of the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributer here, one of the new Packard Custombuilt Eights—a sedan—was given a thorough test under varied road conditions in Illinois.

The new Packard custom-eight is powered by the biggest engine Packard builds. It is more powerful than the new Packard Standard Eight, just announced, and, because of the excellence of its construction has many advantages over other eight-cylinder cars on the market.

On the test run it proved itself capable of climbing Sugar Loaf Hill on Illinois No. 3 beyond East St. Louis in high gear, beginning at the bottom of the famous half-mile climb at a speed of 20 m. p. h. and arriving at the top at 20 m. p. h., a feat which to the writer's knowledge has not officially been duplicated by any other car ever to attempt the trip.

The ascent of Sugar Loaf Hill swings sharply away from concreted Illinois No. 3 in a wide arch—which does not permit of fast driving—and then whips upward on a 17 per cent grade to the top with two torturous S curves between as formidable obstacles to climbing in high.

The power plant at no time during the climb showed evidence of faltering, and the power flow remained smooth and even. One has the feeling that there is always plenty of surplus power at hand.

But as amazing as is its power in high gear on a steep hill climb, so much more amazing is its performance in high gear at ultra low speeds. There is a dirt road in Illinois leading from the village of Breeze to the hamlet of Germantown, a road that is rough and rutted and plainly a hazard to most automobiles. This road was the scene of several other remarkable tests.

Roadability was the first. The Packard was shot over the ruts at a speed of 25 m. p. h., with no more discomfort than if a concrete highway was being traversed. Since there must be a reason for everything, the explanation of this remarkable performance is the Packard shock-absorbing system which is an integral part of the chassis, not built on it, but into it. Both front and rear shock absorbers are two-way in their action and make possible the use of much more resilient springs, the riding adjustment being made in the shock absorbers. The springs have a special shock-absorbing device, which also aids in comfortable driving under all conditions.

While on this same road, the writer decided to ascertain just how slow the Packard could be operated in high gear under adverse conditions. Thus the engine was throttled down to three miles per hour and the car allowed to roll along slowly. It moved along at an even pace over the road, taking rises in the road as easily as it went over the level stretches, and thus slowly it was driven for two miles with never a falter of the powerplant. Few cars are capable of this over such rough road, not capable of it even over concrete. It seems that it can be characterized as just "Packard performance."

Style Expert Praises Lines Of New Buick

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 22.—City motorists touring the country often are amazed at the quick adoption of the latest style in dress in even the more remote sections. Easily explained. As the motor car has pushed back confining horizons and broadened communication, so has the motion picture broken down provincial isolation and brought the world all dressed up to parade before "rural" eyes.

Hollywood broadcasts the styles with meticulous authority. Hollywood, besides contributing its own creative ideas, maintains intimate contact with European style centers to gather, months in advance, the coming changes in modes.

How seriously Hollywood regards its responsibility in the matter of style portrayal is shown, for instance, in the frequent trips abroad of Travis Banton, creator of fashions at the Paramount studio. He has just returned from Paris, London, Vienna and like style centers, conferring with other famed authorities who are contriving the new in line and beauty. So Banton knows what is what and what is to be. And his translation of styles to the screen carries to every section of the world.

"Fashions of the immediate future will accentuate curves, spelling the downfall of the popular straight lines with which we have so long been familiar," says Banton. "We are definitely entering a new style era.

"That the change will affect motor car styles as well as dress is shown in the new Silver Anniversary Buick, which already has captured the idea and boldly broken away from the lines of yesterday."

The Paramount style expert was viewing a new Buick sedan, critically sizing up the contours, increased body room, luxury in appointments and the striking effect of the advancement into the new vogue.

"It is most interesting that artisans in metal can achieve such striking effects in the very latest fashion trend. It is a tribute not only to American designers but also to the spirit of progress which seeks the new. Style evidently is a powerful factor today in motor cars. No longer are the makers content with providing transportation alone. I glory in this recognition of style importance.

"There always is an added distinction in being first. That is one of the rewards of creation. I appreciate what a pride Buick must have in its latest achievement."

New Buick Said To Be Easy for Women to Drive

Women will find the Silver Anniversary Buick a car that is remarkably easy to handle and with generous provisions for the comfort of the driver and passengers.

The numerous refinements made in the driving compartment of the 1928 Buick are now supplemented by additional changes, every one of which will appeal to women as well as to men. For example, the car is now fully adaptable to the requirements of any individual. Its adjustable steering column, introduced last year, is retained, and the front seat in every closed model is now adjustable also. It may be shifted 3½ inches to accommodate a driver of any stature. This adjustment is accomplished with one hand, by means of a small hand knob located just below the front edge of the seat cushion, and can be made without disturbing either driver or passenger. The seat automatically locks in any one of seven positions within its range of adjustment.

Another refinement is the electric windshield wiper with tandem blades, standard equipment on all closed models. This type of wiper not only maintains an even motion regardless of the engine speed, but cleans the entire windshield from end to end.

Still another driving compartment improvement is the new Buick instrument panel, with its new grouping of instruments. The panel is provided with two-way illumination, and accommodates the 90-mile speedometer—directly in front of the driver—the oil gauge, water temperature gauge and new hydrostatic gasoline gauge, the most accurate instrument of its sort obtainable.

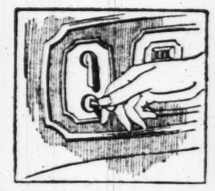
Everywhere you go, you hear Pontiac referred to as the finest of low-priced sixes . . . and never was any car more clearly entitled to a position of accepted leadership in quality and value!



An outstanding example of Pontiac's many quality features is the coincidental lock pioneered by Oakland. One turn of the key locks both transmission and ignition.

In its basic design, today's Pontiac Six is the product of two great engineering staffs—General Motors' and Oakland's. Its ruggedness, dependability and stamina are the result of months and years of testing at the General Motors Proving Ground. Its modish appearance and luxurious comfort reflect the supremacies of bodies by Fisher. Its many mechanical advancements and its exceptional features of equipment and detail are made possible by the economies of General Motors' combined purchasing power. And it is built in America's most modern automobile plant—a vast daylight factory less than two years old and containing every advancement that modern manufacturing science can bring to the production of automobiles.

These are five great fundamental advantages enjoyed by no other builder of low-priced sixes. So why shouldn't today's Pontiac Six be everywhere regarded as the outstanding car of its field? A. A. A. PROBES TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

Police Forces Inadequate to Control Situation, Survey Declares.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Argument for the immediate adoption of the uniform municipal traffic ordinance was advanced here today when the American Automobile Association made public preliminary figures of a nation-wide survey of traffic control conditions.

Following are some of the striking facts developed by the survey of the national motoring body:

1. There are on the average 2000 automobiles to every traffic officer in the metropolitan areas of the country, as compared with 500 per officer 10 years ago.

2. Car registration in cities covered by the survey increased 225 per cent as compared with an increase of 83 per cent in the number of traffic officers in the 10-year period.

3. Only five cities, namely, Boston, Mass., Louisville, Ky., Worcester, Mass., Cleveland, O., and Duluth, Minn., showed a percentage of increase in traffic control personnel equal to the gain in car registration.

4. In the case of two cities Chicago, Ill., and Toledo, O., with an increase of more than 200 per cent in motor vehicle registration, the number of traffic officers has been actually decreased in the 10-year period.

5. Los Angeles, Cal., showed the greatest increase in both registration and traffic control personnel, with 1280 per cent for the former and 475 per cent for the latter.

The survey is based on a questionnaire addressed by the Safety Department of the A. A. A. to the police departments of 50 cities, ranging in population from 50,000 to over 3,000,000, from 28 of which detailed returns were secured.

New Traffic Code.

Massachusetts is planning a new traffic code which provides for uniform traffic signs, lights, markings, signal systems and regulations.

Boos, riding in one plane, delivered sets to Flat River, Kennett and Jefferson City, Mo., riding some 825 miles. Henry Kretchel, his service manager, in the other plane, delivered sets to Quincy, Jonesboro and Red Bud, Illinois, a trip of some 700 miles.

Why Live in Persia Where Gas Is $0.72

SEVENTY cents for a gallon of gasoline!

This figure, the price of motor fuel in Persia, Guatemala and Colombia, indicates the wide difference in cost of gasoline throughout the world. The price in British South Africa is 64 cents, while in Bolivia it is 3 cents less, according to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce.

In making comparisons, it is pointed out, the various factors which tend to make inequalities in gasoline cost should be taken into consideration. These factors include distance from the source of supply, quantity consumed, transportation costs, import duties, excise taxes, distribution and marketing costs, quality of the products sold and many others.

G. M. Truck Co., 'Better Delivery' Contest Closes

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PONTIAC, Mich., Sept. 22.—Twenty winners of cash prizes totaling $5000, in the "Better Delivery" letter contest conducted by the General Motors Truck Co., were announced here today. The first prize was awarded to Mignon Quaw Lott of Minneapolis, Minn. Second prize, $1000, went to Noel H. Taylor, Spokane, Wash.

Sharply outstanding, as the major idea in the thousands of letters, was the modern need for delivery equipment that has both the safety factors and speed necessary to take its place in modern traffic. Appearance of delivery equipment was another factor stressed as of first importance. And a surprising percentage of letters gave intelligent consideration to the economic phase of delivery equipment and methods—the relatively greater cost of handing merchandise with obsolete vehicles and methods.

"The purpose in conducting the contest was to arouse public interest in better delivery and to ascertain what the public thinks should be done to make better delivery something concrete and definite."

No letters submitted in the contest are to be made public. Inasmuch as the rules of the contest called for letters either of praise or criticism, it is felt by the General Motors Truck officials that possible embarrassment—both for contestants and for business houses whose delivery equipment and methods were the subjects of letters—will be avoided by withholding the letters.

Pierce-Arrow to Increase Output Schedule Greatly

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Increased demand for the new Pierce-Arrow Series 81 motor car has so exceeded the factory's expectations that production schedules have had to be completely revised, officials of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co. said today.

"Orders for additional quantities of materials have been placed so as to insure no interruption of production during the coming months. The materials are for both lines of Pierce-Arrow cars, the Series 81 and the Series 36, the large dual-valve automobile," the report says.

"Another indication of the big demand for Pierce-Arrow products is found in the fact that skilled workmen are being added daily to the company's big payroll, increasing the personnel of the Pierce-Arrow factory to the largest total in recent years.

During the first 11 days of September shipments from the factory were double those for the same period last year. And, at the same time, despite heavier shipments, orders came in so fast that unfilled orders on the books are now more than three times as great as one year ago.

"Sales of the Pierce-Arrow Series 81 line of cars, now priced at $2475 and upward, have tripled and quadrupled in many distributing centers in the United States. These figures include the smaller cities and towns, where the new Pierce-Arrows have met with the same popular reception that has been granted them in the larger cities."

Goodrich Plans New Super-Tire

AKRON, O., Sept. 22.—Goodrich officials today confirmed reports that a new super tire will be added to the Goodrich line. Specific information was not given out, since the new tire has not yet reached quantity production following the acceptance of engineer and chemist specifications.

The announcement said that the new product has just recently emerged from the experimental stage in road and laboratory tests, covering more than a year. It is claimed that tire engineers and chemists were given a free hand to produce the best tire they know how to build and that time was a factor secondary to quality.

No One-Arm Driving.

One-armed driving is restricted in New Zealand. Under regulations just imposed by the authorities, the police have power to arrest anyone found snuggling a companion while driving a motor car. The penalty will include cancellation of the motorist's license.

'FLIVVER' CARS APPEAL MOST TO EUROPEANS

Owe Popularity to Low Cost of Upkeep, Says Engineer.

European cars that are achieving the largest sales fall into three main types—the "baby" four-cylinder car of seven to nine horsepower (Royal Automobile Club rating), the "family" four-cylinder car of 12 to 14 horsepower, and the light six-cylinder car of 15 to 20 horsepower—according to Maurice Platt, an English engineer, writing in the S. A. E. Journal for September.

The diminutive "baby" cars owe their popularity to low cost of purchase, tax and upkeep, the facility with which they can be driven and parked in towns, and to ease of maintenance, since the European car owner does a great deal of maintenance work himself.

These cars usually accommodate four persons and are extremely durable in hard service. The cylinders are of about 2 1-5 inches bore and three inches stroke. An orthodox three-speed transmission is provided. The price ranges from $660 to $975.

The family-type four-cylinder car, which is bought in great numbers by men with incomes of about $2500 a year, sells for $975 to $1220 in the salon or closed model, although there are plenty that are priced higher because of distinctive appearance and better quality.

Quantity production of light six-cylinder models is a comparatively recent development in Europe but almost all leading makers are turning them out. In many cases the same chassis is used for both a 14-horsepower four-cylinder model and a 16-horsepower light six. The usual run of prices is $1460 to $2685. There are also many entirely new designs in this class, and opinion is fairly equally divided between providing three-speed and four-speed transmissions.

In addition to the foregoing classes, there are several other types, of which the sports car is the more numerous. And there are many large and expensive cars also, ranging in size up to the 12-cylinder model and in price up to $12,000.

All-steel bodied are being turned out by a few large producers, but composite bodies paneled with steel or aluminum and finished with celluloid or covered with fabric are most popular. The fashion for flexible fabric bodies has passed its zenith on the Continent and the crest of the wave has been reached in England, asserts Platt.

A number of builders, however, have adopted the feature of this type that the floor is a separate unit from the body, which carries no weight, and is merely a shell to protect the occupants. In the new line of development the rigid shell has a three-point mounting on the chassis frame and is covered with imitation leather fabric.

The European practice of extending the body sides and doors down below and outside the frame is growing because it gives the clos-to-the-ground appearance that is now fashionable. Running boards are being discarded by some makers, who fit concealed steps beneath the doors and support the fenders on some part attached to the axle.

Although the four-door salon or sedan type is by far the most popular body style, the open air or sunshine salon in which part or all of the top can be folded down is much in favor this year.

Nash to Spend $2,000,000 for New Buildings

Plan Is to Equalize Production of Its Four Divisions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KENOSHA, Wis., Sept. 22.—Manufacturing facilities in the four great Wisconsin plants of the Nash Motors Co. will be increased by $2,000,000 in new buildings and equipment, it was announced today.

The expansion program, which will be pushed as rapidly as possible through the fall and winter, is designed not only to increase car production in the various Nash plants, but also to more nearly balance output in the four manufacturing divisions, according to company officials. The improvements are equally divided between the Special Six and Seaman Body Corporation plants in Milwaukee, the Standard Six plant in Racine and the Advanced Six plant in Kenosha.

Chevrolet Service Division Being Rapidly Expanded

DETROIT, Sept. 22.—The parts and service division of Chevrolet Motor Co., in order to bring the consumer closer to the point of distribution, since the first of the year has been quietly carrying on a building program amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars. This has added to the company's numerous plants five zone warehouses, now in use, and calls for construction of three more before Jan. 1. In addition, major supply depots in Atlanta and Kansas City have been built and put into operation this year.

Los Angeles, Houston, Omaha, Philadelphia and Cleveland are the centers at which warehouses already have been built. Work is to begin this fall on others in New Orleans, Fargo and Indianapolis. The New Orleans warehouse is scheduled to open in November, the Fargo warehouse in December and the Indianapolis warehouse in January.

J. P. Little, manager of the parts and service division, in a statement issued last week pointed out that the 1928 building program when completed will increase the storage facilities of his division by 30 per cent. It will mean, he said, an addition of 210,000 additional feet of floor space.

"Chevrolet parts warehouses and major supply depots constitute an added service that the company offers in order that every authorized service station and repair depot will have genuine Chevrolet parts available promptly for Chevrolet owners," Little said.

Another Chicago to St. Louis Bus Line Is Planned

National Roadway Lines, Inc., operating a fleet of highway transportation busses out of Chicago, has extended its system to include St. Louis. Beginning Oct. 1 the company will have busses running on a regular daily schedule between its Chicago headquarters at Twelfth street and Michigan boulevard, and the Marquette Hotel here, its St. Louis terminal. The busses are to be of a new type with reclining chairs and lavatories, N. W. Oppenheim, superintendent of traffic, said yesterday.

Rates and operating schedule is to be announced later. It is understood, however, from Oppenheim's conversation that probably two busses will be run each way every day over the following route: Chiago to Kankakee, thence to Champaign, Decatur, Pana, Staunton, and via No. 4 into St. Louis.

Compulsory Insurance Declared to Be Failure

Massachusetts Passed It a Year Ago to Reduce Accidents and Deaths—These, and Premiums, Have Increased, Officials Assert.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—Although the recent resignation of Insurance Commissioner Wesley A. Monk, has settled for the coming year the question of premium rates under the compulsory automobile personal liability law, the controversy over the situation still waxes hot. Under the terms of the law, which was passed last year and has been in effect since Jan. 1 of this year, the Insurance Commissioner was obliged to fix the rates and classifications of cars for the rates by Sept. 1, basing his figures on the results obtained after a year's experience with the tentative rates he previously fixed when the law went into effect. He did not do this before he resigned and therefore, according to most authorities, the old rates are still in effect.

The row started over the Commissioner's announcement that beginning Sept. 1 the premium rates would have to be practically doubled, excepting in the cases of truck rates, owing to the losses sustained by the companies writing the policies, and the heavy expense they had borne in doing business, as well as the fact that some $6,000,000 in claims were still outstanding to be settled.

Violent opposition immediately arose from Gov. Fuller, Lieutenant-Governor Allen and various State officials, the Mayor of Boston, and of course, motorists in general, all over the State, the insurance companies alone standing pat. Charges of wholesale frauds through the collusion of crooked lawyers, physicians and claimants were made by the commissioner and others, and are now being investigated by Attorney-General Warner, his assistants and the grand jury. Charges are also made that the companies have been exceedingly lax and complaisant in settling claims.

Opinion is general that the law is a failure. It was passed with the idea in the minds of many of the Legislators and of a large portion of the public that it would have the effect of reducing accidents, personal injuries and particularly deaths by automobile accidents. To date this has not been found to be the case.

Last week there were 19 highway fatalities in the State due to automobile accidents, five more than the week before and two more than in the corresponding week last year. Seven of the victims were children and all but five were pedestrians. Court convictions against 85 drunken drivers were obtained, four of them being committed to jail. Insurance cancellations accounted for 418 of the 929 licenses and registrations suspended or revoked during the week. Over 50 of these revocations were for reckless driving, 15 for fatal accidents and 11 for driving away after accidents ("hit-and-run drivers").

It is true that the compulsory insurance law has driven from the highways hundreds of "road lice," those rattletrap cars rescued from the junk heap, repaired so that they will run more or less regularly and sold for a few dollars. The rates for such cars were the same as for good cars, and as a matter of fact the companies would not write insurance on them, in which stand they were backed by the insurance commissioner. This kept off the highways a very irresponsible type of driver, who, having little to lose, since his car was worthless and he had little other property, took reckless chances.

But, at the same time, it opened up an avenue for extensive frauds, which, it is claimed, run from a million to about two million dollars yearly. Crooked lawyers and equally crooked doctors were in collusion with dishonest claimants to mulct the insurance companies with false claims of personal injury through automobile accidents. In many cases it was found that the driver figuring in an accident himself aided and abetted friends riding with him in bringing fraudulent claims for damages. According to figures compiled by former Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, the total number of persons recorded as injured in automobile accidents since Dec. 1 was only 31,721, yet there have been 42,519 claims for injuries reported by insurance companies, of which they have paid 24,988 and still have 13,531 outstanding.

A contest for owners of old automobiles is being held by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The winning machines, to which prizes will be given, will be exhibited in New York City at the time of the Automobile Show in January. Any automobile, gas, steam or electric, may be entered, and only cars built prior to 1900 are likely to have a chance to win because several built prior to that date are known to be in existence.

Census Shows Total of These Was $2,174,718,977.

DATA collected by the Department of Commerce at the biennial census of manufacturers taken in 1928 shows that during 1927 factories primarily engaged in the manufacture of motor vehicles produced 2,873,380 passenger automobiles—not including public conveyances—valued at $2,174,718,977; 8944 public conveyances, valued at $27,836,038; 1430 Government vehicles (Federal ,state and municipal), valued at $10,781,178; 452,051 commercial vehicles, valued at $324,575,999, and 18,893 trailers valued at $6,690,238; together with other products valued at $301,610,222, making a total of $2,846,212,652.

The output of motor vehicles of all classes in 1927 aggregated 3,335,805 in number and $2,537,912,192 in value. These aggregates represent decreases of 19.9 per cent in number and 13.9 per cent in value, as compared with 1925, the last preceding census year. (The values given in this report are based on wholesale factory prices.)

The foregoing figures and other statistics relate to manufacturers whose principal products are assembled motor vehicles, and do not include data or the production of establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of bodies, parts and accessories for motor vehicles.

The proportion of closed passenger cars increased from 21.6 per cent, in 1921, to 35 per cent in 1923, 58.3 per cent in 1925 and 85.5 per cent in 1927. The number of this class of motor vehicles manufactured reached a total of 2,408,548 in 1927 compared with 2,080,697 in 1925, 1,201,577 in 1923 and 304,220 in 1921.

The total production of motor vehicles, as reported at the biennial census of manufacturers, differs slightly from the aggregate of the monthly figures published by the Department of Commerce, namely, 2,908,030 passenger vehicles (including public conveyances) and 433,418 commercial vehicles (including Government vehicles), because the biennial census figures represent production, while the monthly figures represent factory sales.

Of the 262 establishments reporting for 1927, 44 were located in Michigan, 34 in Ohio, 25 in Illinois, 22 in California, 20 in New York, 19 in Indiana, 14 each in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, 8 each in Missouri and New Jersey, 6 in Massachusetts, 5 in Texas, 4 each in Iowa, Louisiana and Minnesota, 3 each in Kansas, Nebraska and Washington, 2 each in Colorado, Connecticut, Kentucky, Maine, North Carolina and Tennessee, and 1 each in Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Oregon, Oklahoma and Virginia.

The decrease in number of establishments from 297 in 1925 to 262 in 1927 is the net result of a loss of 55 establishments and a gain of 20.

Of the 55 establishments lost to the industry, 36 had gone out of business prior to the beginning of 1927, 12 were idle throughout the year, six reported commodities other than motor vehicles as their principal products and were therefore transferred to the appropriate industries, and one reported products valued at less than $5000. (No data are tabulated at the biennial census for establishments with products under $5000 in value.)

For census purposes as assembling plant (a plant in which parts made in another plant under the same management are assembled into complete motor vehicles), is treated as a manufacturing establishment, for which reason the number of establishments shown is much larger than the actual number of manufacturers of motor vehicles.

This is necessary, it is announced, in order that each State and city may be credited with its due share of the motor vehicle industry.

New Plymouth Roomy

Unusual comfort and roominess is found in the new Chrysler-Plymouth. This roominess and riding ease are the direct results of the Chrysler principle of standardized quality, L. M. Stewart, president of Midwest Motors, Inc., distributer here says.

"Standardized quality is the famous Chrysler principle by which the identical practices and processes employed in building its higher-priced cars are utilized to enforce the same exactness and precision in designing and manufacturing every part of the low-priced Plymouth."

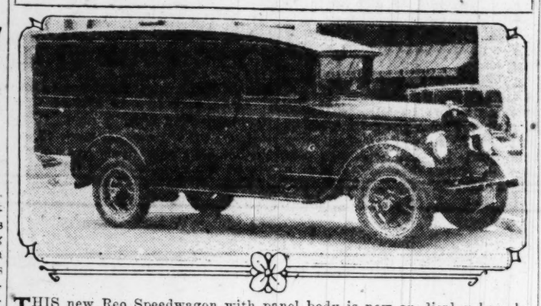
Mexican Traffic Heavy.

Automobile traffic is particularly heavy in Mexico City, Mexico. Throughout the day, and especially on Sundays, it is an ordinary thing to see streams of cars, large and small, many of costly American or French make, streaming along all the principal streets of the city. Cars that cost as high as 50,000 pesos are not uncommon in the country.

Greater Speed Seen.

The American Automobile Association notes a tendency on the part of the States to increase speed limits in the interest of safety; that speed and recklessness are being divorced, and that vehicles moving slowly are proving the worst nuisance on the road.

NEW REO PANEL BODY TRUCK



THIS new Reo Speedwagon with panel body is now on display here by the Reo Distributing Co. It has a six-cylinder engine. The body is 9 feet long.

Proposed National Road to Be Routed Through Oklahoma

$5,000,000,000 Project Planned by Taxing Cars and Gas.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 22.—Three main paved highways of a proposed national system would run through Oklahoma if the Holaday bill, to be brought before Congress next December, becomes a law, R. A. Singletary, manager of the good roads department of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, explained today.

The bill provides for the construction of seven main highways running from east to west and 12 main arterial ways from north to south. Many short roads would be built to connect the capital and principal cities of each state with those of other states and with the national capital.

Four members of the President's Cabinet would be given the responsibility of maintaining the roads. They would be the secretaries of Agriculture, War, Commerce and Postmaster-General.

The bill would authorize the Government to borrow $5,000,000,000 to pave the national system, issuing bonds to secure payment of the debt. Each motor vehicle, not used for hire, would be taxed not less than $3 a year and each car for hire not less than $10 a year to meet the bonds. A tax of ½ cent a gallon would be placed on gasoline.

Where states have paved roads that would be part of the system, they would be reimbursed by the Federal Government. Airplane fields would be constructed alongside highways.

Of the three roads that would pass through Oklahoma, one would run from east to west, Singletary said; another from north to south, and the third from northeast to southwest. The construction program in Oklahoma would cost $42,330,000 and would take 846 miles from the state system. State and Federal funds thus would be left with which to build lateral paved roads which would run into the national system.

A Atwater Kent Engineering Award

Vermonters have long been known as a "practical" people. This claim to fame has been emphasized in late years by the acts of President Coolidge, who has been regarded as typifying the practicality and "horse sense" of New Englanders in general and Vermonters in particular.

A new application of the practical bent of "Green Mountain" boys is seen in the award provided by A. Atwater Kent, himself a Vermonter by birth and education, to the engineering school of the University of Vermont. This award—the income from a fund of $5000—is to be made annually, not to the boy who stands highest in his classes or who can show the best general average of academic scholarship but to that student who best shows "excellence of judgment and general grasp of the principles of electrical engineering."

Activities of Boy Scouts

EVERY SCOUT AT CAMP LEARNED HOW TO SWIM

Irondale Reservation "Sinkers" Eliminated, Records for Summer Season Show.

A perfect record in eliminating "sinkers" from the ranks of Boy Scout campers was made this summer at the Irondale Reservation, the official camp of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, according to records of the camp activities now being tabulated. "Sinkers" are scouts who cannot swim, and are so designated because Irondale regulations require them to wear fishing line sinkers around their necks while in the water, so the life-guards may give them special protection.

Of 244 non-swimmer scouts who attended camp this season, every one not forbidden by doctors' orders to go into the water was taught to swim well enough to be able to discard his 'sinker." Only 29, afflicted with heart trouble, lameness or other physical defect, remtained in the non-swimmer class.

This exceptional record, never before equaled at the local camp, was the reslult of concentration on water sports by the reservation leaders this year. A special waterfront division was created, under the direction of Art Werder, one of St. Louis' best swimmers, assisted by Bob Houghtlin, to teach swimming and life-saving. Red Cross life-saving tests were also given, five of the older campers passing the senior Red Cross test, and 17 scouts under 18 years of age passing the junior test.

Other Records Broken.

A number of other camp records were broken this season, in percentage of total council troops represented, in number of tests passed and in the number of advancements from one rank to the next highest. Of the 253 troops registered under the council at the beginning of the year, 202 were represented at the camp at some time or other during the summer, 1378 scouts in all spending 3713 weeks on the reservation. There were 2895 tests of all descriptions passed, including 1183 for merit badges.

During the camp season, 14 boys earned enough merit badges to reach the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest in scouting; 17 became Life Scouts, the new in rank, and 54 earned the Star badge, the next above the first-class rank.

Six Troops as Units.

A new departure this year, but one which will be continued, was the coming to camp of troops as units, under their own scoutmasters. Unit troops are assigned contiguous cabins for their members, and are given special privileges in that they are permitted to direct their own activities rather than follow the complete camp routine. Reveille, mess, retreat and taps must be adhered to as by the individual campers, but all other time may be spent as the scoutmaster and troop decide. If the troop wishes, it may participate in the regular camp routine, or as much of it as desired.

Six troops took advantage of the new system this summer, one of these, Troop 155, hiking the entire way from St. Louis. This hike occupied a week, the 28 boys, Scoutmaster C. S. Pollack, Assistant Scoutmaster Roy Berghaus and a Negro cook leaving St. Louis Monday and arriving at the reservation the following Monday. Three weeks were then spent in camp.

It is planned to make provision next year for more unit troops, as several, including this year's six, have announced their intention to attend camp under the unit system.

Troop Notes

South District.

The officers of Troop 74, of Sherman School, have just returned from a week's camp at the new State park at Sullivan, Mo. Many of the caves were visited during the stay. Those attending were Assistant Scoutmaster Kelly, Junior Assistants McCully and Lloyd, Senior Patrol Leader Gansloser and Patrol Leaders Howle and Snodgrass. The remainder of the troop made an automobile trip to Osage Hills, Valley Park, Fentno and Cedar Hill a week ago yesterday.

The troop entertained the parents at the first parents' night of the school year a week ago Friday. Fifty visitors were present. Each patrol put on a stunt and the standings of the patrols into an interpatrol contest were announced. The Tiger patrol is leading in the contest, with the Otters second, Owls third, Panthers fourth, Eagles fifth and Wolves sixth. The troop will hold its meeting next week at Barnhart, Mo., where it will be camping under the direction of Assistant Scoutmaster Kelly.

Six new patrol leaders were recently installed at Troop 77, of Tyler Place Presbyterian Church. The new leaders are Scouts Bernie Drum, Hollis George, Richard Buch, James Gamble, William Buch and Larry McDougall. A new interpatrol contest is being worked out by the officers.

Troop 39, of the Church of the Redeemer, has been reorganized for the fall season, under a new scoutmaster, C. J. Metzler. Patrol work will be emphasized in the new activities. Beside Metzler, the officers of the troop will be William Weise and John Schmidt, assistant scoutmasters; Hubert Taenzer, senior patrol leader; Gus Schumaier, Ferd Gast and Norman Metzler, patrol leaders, and Irwin Schaumaier, scribe.

North District.

A new recruit joined Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church, at the meeting last week, and several prospective members were also present. Scoutmaster Simons and Assistant Scoutmaster Hunt each made a short talk and presented a book to each patrol leader. The troop was recently divided into four new patrols.

The first meeting of the fall was held by Troop 161 of Webster School last Thursday evening. In common with many other troops, 161 had suspended activities during the summer. The troop was formed into two patrols, the Beavers and the Wolves, by Scoutmaster Kripplaben, in preparation for the coming season's work. Several games were played. One visitor was present at the meeting.

Scout Harold Enstall won first prize and received the most points for having the neatest uniform during inspection at a meeting of Troop 206 of the Ames School, last Monday evening. Scout Grote won second place. Several tests were passed at the meeting, which was attended by 25 scouts and eight committeemen.

West District.

The scouts of Troop 42 of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church are making preparations for an entertainment and exhibit they plan to give in November to purchase new drums and bugles for a drum and bugle corps they are organizing. They intend to have the corps well under way by the first of next year. Most of the work at present is being done on the scout exhibit.

Assistant Patrol Leader Norman Stockho of the Wolf patrol returned from Camp Irondale with a first-class badge and a Pioneering merit badge. Scout Stockho has been a scout only a year, but has advanced through all the grades from Tenderfoot to Merit Badge scout in that time. An overnight hike was held by the troop at the Lions' Den recently. A number of tests were passed.

Nine scouts of Troop 94 of St. Barbara's Church hiked along the Meramec River from Osage Hills to Fenton last Sunday. Diner was eaten at Fenton. Six scouts served as aids during the All-Catholic Charities convention at the Chase Hotel Wednesday and Saturday.

Troop 101 of West Park Baptist Church is on a hike to Cliff Cave today. Plans for the hike were made at the meeting last week. A new achievement contest, to run until the latter part of December, has been started.

$500,000 FOR TOMB LINING

Argentine Burial Chamber Said to Be Coated With Gold.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 22.—Press reports of a tomb lined with gold and worth $500,000 have aroused nation-wide interest. It is said to be one of the family vaults in the Chacarita cemetery and was built by Angel Roverano, 19 years ago.

In addition to the gold lining the vault contains a small statue of a woman executed by Bitolff, for which the sculptor is said to have received $20,000. Various religious art objects inclosed in the vault are believed to be worth more than $200,000. The floor is a mosaic of small gold blocks, but it was never finished. Roverano's will provided that the vault should be sealed after the death of a brother, his only surviving relative. This occurred several years ago.

Nicaragua Seeks Ford Capital.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Sept. 22.—The Chamber of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture of Leon, a city of 45,000 inhabitants, has sent an invitation to Henry Ford to establish rubber plantations on a large scale in Nicaragua. This action followed publication of reports that Ford would develop rubber plantations in Brazil. The invitation stressed the fact that Nicaragua was closer to the United States than was Brazil and that the projected construction of a Nicaraguan canal promised important commercial development of the country.

39 EAGLE SCOUTS BUILD ROAD IN GLACIER PARK

Mile and a Half of Trail Along St. Mary's Lake Completed on "Good Turn" Basis.

Thirty-nine Eagle Scouts from 10 states have just completed building a mile and a quarter of a road to be known as the Eagle Scout Trail along St. Mary's Lake, in the Glacier National Park in Montana. Two weeks were spent by the scouts on the trail, after which a visit was made to an Indian reservation at Heart Butte.

The idea of the trail building was based on the "good turn" pledge each scout makes daily, and was suggested by the Great Falls (Mont.) council as a national contribution of the organization to the United States. The Great Falls council recruited the scouts, all of whom had to be Eagles, through local councils throughout the country, and made all arrangements with the park authorities for conducting the work. They will also supervise all work on the trail, which will be seven miles long, for the next five years. It is ultimately planned to build trails in other national parks also.

MINNIE OF MINNEWASKA A REGULAR SEA-GOING CAT

Knows Way About New York and London; Kittens Souvenirs for Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Minnie, sea-going cat, has not missed a voyage on the liner Minnewaska since she joined its crew, almost five years ago. When the ship is in port here Minnie is absent for days at a time, but she invariably appears on deck half an hour or so before the gank plank is hauled in.

Minnie knows her way about London, too, but she dislikes foggy nights, and never spends a night ashore when the Minnewaska is at the King George V docks in the Thames.

Capt. Frank Claret of the Minnewaska regards Minnie as the best sailor cat in the world because she knows the sailing habits of the ship so well. Seldom does Minnie become chummy with passengers, although she did take a liking to William Gillette, the veteran actor, this summer and followed him about the ship for hours. Her kittens, as rapidly as they arrive, are handed out to passengers as souvenirs.

9 YEARS OF PLANE SERVICE

Britain Celebrates Anniversary of Passenger Line to France.

By the Associated Press.

CROYDON, England, Sept. 22.—British civil avaiation has celebrated the completion of its ninth year of operation between London and the continent. When on Aug. 25, 1919, the world's first daily airplane service for passengers was instituted between London and Paris the aircraft were small machines of 360-horsepower, each seating two passengers in a tiny cabin.

Today, on their de luxe services between London and Paris, Imperial Airways employ giant airplanes developing 1200 horsepower and providing luxurious accommodation for 18 passengers, in addition to a pilot, engineer, and steward, the last named serving refreshments from his buffet while the 8-ton craft rushes through the air at 100 miles an hour.

AMERICAN WOMAN SEEKS NEGRO FOLKLORE IN AFRICA

San Franciscan Traveling With Only Native Servants and Guides.

By the Associated Press.

ZOMBA, Nyasaland, Sept. 22.—Somewhere in the heart of the primitive lower river country of Nyasaland, an American woman, Mrs. Peggy Fletcher of San Francisco, is braving the dangers of this practically untraveled region alone except for the native servants and guides in her ulendo, as safari or caravan is called here.

She is in search of the source of American Negro folklore and music, which she is confident exists among the uncivilized blacks of the lower river, who are still in the condition from which the American Negro emerged when he was first exported to the American colonies as a slave.

This is the first time that a woman has attempted such a trip unaccompanied, and the Californian's venture is attracting much interest throughout Africa. She is being widely entertained by the provincial officials on her stops across the continent, and has been privileged to gather first-hand information about the country and its problems.

CIGARETTE BEGINS TO OUST PIPE IN BRITAIN AND GERMANY

Large Increase Shown All Over World Last Year—India Smokes 6½ Billion a Year.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — Cigarette smoking the world over has shown a big increase during the last year. In England it is steadily ousting the pipe from the favor of smokers. Even in Germany, where pipe tobacco still predominates, a marked increase in the consumption of cigarettes has taken place.

The Imperial Economic Committee, which has been making a survey of the situation, points out that in India the annual consumption of cigarettes now is about 6,500,000,000, as compared with an annual figure of somewhat less than 1,000,000,000 before the war. The cigarette is thus at present advancing in world-wide favor, but the individual consumption appears to be highest in the United Kingdom.

It is estimated that the total production of tobacco in the world in 1926 was 4,900,000,000 tons, of which the United States and the British Empire provided approximately one-half. Between 1920 and 1924 the consumption of empire tobacco expanded at a rate of 1,650,000 pounds a year, and between 1924 and 1927 at a rate of 3,200,000 pounds a year.

NICARAGUANS TO RIDE MULES TO VOTE NOV. 4

Oxen and Canoes Also Will Be Used, But Roads Make Auto Travel Impossible.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Sept. 22.—Mules, oxen, canoes and airplanes will play a leading part in the Nicaraguan presidential elections Nov. 4, when United States marines will watch the voting.

Automobiles will be very little in evidence, as roads are few and often impassable during the rainy season, which begins in June and lasts until December. Ordinarily the October rainfall is the heaviest of the year.

The transportation problem is one of the most difficult faced by the American Electoral Mission, in the opinion of Brigadier-General Frank R. McCoy, the chairman. Gen. McCoy began work more than a year ago, visiting many parts of Nicaragua and sizing up the situation. Rainfall is heavy on the Pacific slope of the country, and on the Atlantic side for six months of the year the only means of moving about is by small boats up the numerous rivers.

No Road to Connect Coasts.

Mail from one point to another less than 100 miles away frequently requires two or three weeks. There is no railroad or highway connecting the east and west coasts. American election officials at remote points inland may spend months without seeing another American, except an occasional marine or constabulary officer on patrol duty.

A telegraph line was strung between the Pacific and Atlantic coasts some years ago, but owing to storms and revolutions it was frequently out of commission. For many months it has not been in operation and probably will not be put back into commission for a long time. There is, however, wireless communication between Managua, the capital, and two ports on the east coast. The marines have installed small field radio sets at various inland points, and these also will be used when possible by the election supervisors.

Airplanes will be pressed into service when th marins can spare them to carry election documents and ballots across country and drop them at isolated voting booths in the jungle and hills. Launches, flatboats and canoes will be utilized on the rivers, and the mule will figure prominently in keeping the national electoral board in touch with many of the remote precincts.

Most Changes by Revolution.

Nicaragua has had some 100 revolutionary outbreaks since it became a republic, more than a century ago. Revolution has, in fact, been virtually the only means by which a change of Government could be made. The election of 1928 is expected to mark a new era and permit a real expression of what the common people want.

Order will be preserved at the polls by the newly organized Guardia Nacional, a non-partisan constabulary force, commanded by marine officers. The Guardia is making a record for itself as an efficient police force. Under the orders of Lieutenant-Colonel E. R. Beadle, who is Brigadier-General in the Guardia, no member of the force is allowed to take part in political meetings, and every private has it drilled into him that he is neither a liberal nor a conservative when on duty. Recruits for Guardia found this a puzzling idea at first, but now, whenever a Guardia soldier is asked his party affiliations he answers: "I am a Nicaraguan."

ENGLISH LABOR PARTY SPLIT OVER WET AND DRY ISSUE

One Wing Wants Platform, Soon to Be Written, to Declare for Local Option.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Sept. 22.—The prohibition problem is growing acute within the ranks of the British labor party. Political observers are already predicting a big "wet" and "dry" fight at the annual conference soon to be held here.

The climax will come when the national executive of the party offers a draft election program which contains the following "plank" in respect to a liquor policy:

"Appoint a royal commission to inquire into the developments and changes which have taken place both at home and abroad during recent years, and to report upon what modifications in the law and what changes in the method of control should be made with a view to the necessary legislative action."

The "drys" say this pronouncement is too vague and are pressing for the party to commit itself to local option. The "wets" indicate that they will fight such a policy.

Dependability, Satisfaction and Honest Value

BIG APARTMENT BUILDINGS SOLD; TWO TO WOMEN

Three of City's Finest Structures Involved in Recent Transactions, Totaling $2,000,000.

THE PRESIDENT GOES TO MRS. AMBRUSTER

11-Story Project at 4616 Lindell Blvd., Near Completion, Brings $800,000—Has 80 Units.

By Berry Moore.

Activity aroused in apartment buildings, especially those of recent construction on Lindell and Delmar boulevards, with women conspicuous as buyers, was a salient feature of the week in realty. The major transactions were in holdings of this type.

The Carleton at 4616 Lindell boulevard, and the new apartment known as 5512 Delmar boulevard, listed with the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co., were sold yesterday following the sale of The President, an 11-story apartment building at 4616 Lindell boulevard, in course of construction, early in the week by Harold E. Willson. The three transactions totaled nearly $2,000,000 and in each instance yielded the sellers handsome profits on their investments.

A syndicate headed by William Sacks purchased the Carleton apartment, a 4-story structure occupying a lot 90 by 213 feet. Former Congressman Nathan Frank was the seller. The building, one of the most palatial and best constructed of its type on this thoroughfare, has 36 apartments of three and six rooms, with one and two baths. It was erected by Sam Hamburg Jr. Management is under Cornet & Zeibig.

Good Profit Reported.

While not disclosed, it is understood the purchase price leaves Frank a substantial margin of profit as compared with the price at which he acquired it, about two years ago.

Mrs. Belle Tholen, a client of the Joseph Darst Realty Co., was the purchaser of the apartment at 5512 Delmar boulevard, with lot 100 by 200 feet. The Alco Investment Co., of which Vincent Chinberg is president, was the grantor in the transaction, which involved $250,000. Negotiations were handled by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., which financed the building project. Negotiations for this building were also begun before its completion.

The building has 36 apartments, with bath and electric refrigeration. Rentals total $2850 a month, or $34,200 a year. Chinberg realized a handsome profit on his investment.

The President, at 4615 Lindell boulevard, was acquired by Mrs. Edith Ambruster, president of the Ambruster Undertaking Co., for an announced price of $800,000. Harry C. Felter, of the Felter L. Mahware Co., was the builder and owner of the building. Harold E. Willson, Inc., engineered the transaction, which doubtless netted Felter a handsome profit on his investment.

Rentals $118,000 a Year.

While final papers in the transaction were not executed until last week, negotiations were begun shortly after construction of the building was started in June—virtually from the plans.

The building comprises 80 apartments of six rooms with three baths, five rooms with two baths, four rooms with one bath, and three rooms with one bath. It has colored bath fixtures, colored bath wainscoting and tile bathroom floors, Craftex decorated walls in living and dining room, and all other walls oil painted. The floors throughout are laid in parquet, except the corridors, which are carpeted in a rich design.

The apartments have gorgeous decorative features. An attractive feature is an enormous lobby, entirely untrammeled by columns, and which will be decorated.

The building was designed by David R. Harrison, architect for the Fashion Square Building, and many other high-grade structures. The building was financed by a bond issue underwritten by Arthur Peis Real Estate Mortgage Co. of Kansas City and St. Louis, for $500,000.

65 Per Cent of Units Leased.

Sixty-five per cent of the apartments in The President have been leased at rentals ranging from $70 to $185 a month, according to size and location. The total annual rental, $118,000, will be a trifle less than 12 per cent gross on the reported purchase price. Mrs. Ambruster made the purchase as an investment.

TRACT OPPOSITE NORMANDY CLUB IS BEING DEVELOPED

Wellston Hills Realty Co. Buys 45 Acres on St. Charles Rock Road for a Home Subdivision.

The Wellston Hills Realty Co. has purchased a 45-acre tract on St. Charles Rock Road, at Normandy avenue, which is now being developed and improved by the Cyrus Crane Willmore organization, Inc., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank building.

Alphonse Petersen purchased the tract in 1887. According to members of the Petersen family, there were but three or hour store buildings in Wellston at that time and business property could have been purchased for as low as $2.00 a foot.

The recent purchase marks another transition from unimproved to highly improved and developed properties. Improvements will consist of concrete streets with asphaltic concrete wearing surface combination curb and gutter, sanitary sewers, light, water and gas. Atwater, Colfax and Yorktown avenues will furnish easy access to street cars and busses. Leadale, Hillsdale and Marillac drives, leading into Normandy avenue and the Normandy Golf Club immediately adjoining on the west. A considerable frontage on Normandy avenue will furnish desirable homesites overlooking the golf course. To the north, Bellerive, North Hills and Glen Echo Country clubs, contribute desirable environment. The property has a commanding view of much of the West End of St. Louis.

Restrictions are being placed upon the property to insure proper development in accordance with the Willmore plan. The property is located in the center of the Normandy School district with excellent public and parochial school facilities.

The Cyrus Crane Willmore Organization, Inc., are the builders and developers of University Park and University Hills on Delmar boulevard in University City, Kingshighway Hills on South Kingshighway and Webster Hills, a recent development in Webster Groves.

The graders are now at work on the property and improvements will proceed rapidly, Willmore states.

the thoroughfare as the chief factor.

Frank H. Gerhart denied a report current yesterday that he was negotiating for the 140 by 213 feet of vacant ground on the south side of Lindell boulevard, adjoining his palatial residence at the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Euclid avenue. The plot was purchased recently by a syndicate headed by William J. Abbott, who disclosed plans for a 20-story apartment project for the site. Gerhart said his residence was entirely independent of anything that might be erected on the lot.

While not of recent construction, the Gerhart residence is fireproof and on a handsome scale, with all modern conveniences. Gerhart said he had declined an offer of $200,000 for the property, which has a frontage on Lindell of 100 feet with a depth of 213 feet to an alley. The width of the lot in the rear is 130 feet.

Denies Report About Lot.

Gerhart also denied a persistent report that the large vacant tract at the northeast corner of De Baliviere and Pershing avenues, extending through to Waterman avenue, was under negotiation. While admitting a number of attractive offers recently had been submitted for it, he said he had no intention of selling it at this time. One offers contemplated the erection of a mammoth hotel apartment. Several years ago the tract was under option as a site for a 25-story hotel. The project collapsed, however, owing to paucity of funds for building enterprises of that character.

Gerhart purchased the De Baliviere avenue tract, embracing three-quarters of a block with frontages on De Baliviere, Pershing and Waterman avenues, just prior to the World's Fair. The tract now has a fabulous value, compared with the price at which it was acquired.

25 HOUSES BEING ERECTED IN CARONDELET PARKVIEW

Sales in Carondelet Parkview continue to be a feature of the real estate market. More than 25 houses comprising principally flats and bungalows are being erected in the new addition, either as investments or homes. The addition is located in one of the most rapidly developing parts of southwest St. Louis. It is only one block from Carondelet Park on Kingshighway southwest, and has the advantages of public and parochial schools. It is served by the People's Motor Bus Co.

The development is being marketed by the Christian Brinkop Co. which has ample funds for financing construction for prospective home builders.

Terry of the Albert T. Terry Real Estate Co., and the United Investment Corporation by Paul Jones Jr. of the Paul Jones Realty Co.

Contracts for buildings under construction at present total more than $180,000. Maritz & Young, Inc., architects, have been employed by the investment corparation with full authority to develop the property. The architects are designing the buildings, taking advantage of natural scenic conditions and the relation of the buildings to each other.

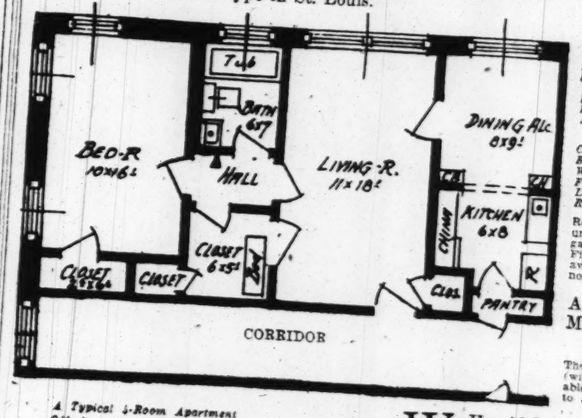
THE PRESIDENT
A "Felter-Built" Building
4615 LINDELL BOULEVARD

Superlatives are necessary to describe these beautiful 4-room apartments. A study of the floor plan will reveal the fact that the architect, David R. Harrison, has created the finest apartment home of its type in St. Louis.



A Typical 4-Room Apartment Offering 6-Room Efficiency

A few of the many attractive features contained in these ultra-modern apartment homes are:
Large Living Rooms
Exceptional Bedchambers
Well-Planned Kitchens
Parquet Hardwood Floors
Paneled Oil-Finished Walls
Sloan's Linoleum for Kitchen and Dining Room
Color Tile Bathrooms with Showers
Buck's Stoves
Weatherstripped Windows
Frigidaire Refrigeration
Large Closets, etc.
Running Ice Water

Rentals on these apartments are unusually low and include heat, gas and electrical refrigeration. Fireproof heated garages are available in the building at a nominal additional cost.

A SAMPLE APARTMENT IS READY FOR INSPECTION

There are also 3-room apartments (with 2-room efficiency) available. They are identical in finish to all other apartments.

MEN

Waiting list will shortly be established for applicants seeking executive positions with ELECTROLUX, INC. Persons in a new health industry now commencing operations in the United States; these lists already exist in many of the 42 countries in which Electrolux operates over 500 branches.

Electrolux needs right now about 90 men to fill executive positions, paying salaries ranging from $4000 to $25,000; many men who have been with us a matter of months are earning these salaries; inasmuch as we can only promote from our field forces we cannot get experienced men for this new industry; the most important qualifications are intelligence, loyalty, aggressiveness and vision.

We have a remarkable product, a strong international organization and tremendous financial backing; the men selected to fill these positions will be given an intensive training in our policies and methods of operation and will receive ample income in addition to commissions during their training and qualifying period.

Men who apply for personal interview Monday forenoon will be able to start work immediately if they qualify.

Electrolux, Inc.

Call in person only, Suite 1627 to 1632, Paul Brown Bldg., and ask for manager.

OPPORTUNITY BRANCH MANAGER

The old and the modern, combined in one composition. At left, the southeast corner of the City Hall, then, in center, the nearly completed Civil Courts, behind which is seen part of the towering walls of the Bell Telephone structure. In thirty swift seconds

FIRST apply lightly with your fingertips. Then pat your face with a pad of cotton or washcloth thoroughly soaked in cool water. Instantly both cream and dirt dissolve away!

NOW powder! No astringent is necessary. After this thorough cleansing the pores close naturally. And—so exquisitely soft and supple is the skin that powder clings without an additional "base."

THE first few times you use Pinaud's Cream—if your skin is suffering from deep-lying accumulations—you can actually feel its wonderful cleansing power. Feel a faint tingling as the clogging dirt is gently drawn from the pores—and then a delightful new radiant freshness!

PINAUD'S CREAM

Comes in the loveliest crystal jar imaginable—sea-green—artistically modeled. Ask tomorrow at your favorite drug or department store and see what science can mean to your skin.

..your skin cleansed..toned..suppled in one lightning operation by Pinaud's amazing new Cream that WASHES AWAY!

HERE in one exquisite crystal jar is a snow white, silken Cream that world famous dermatologists say does more for your skin than the most elaborate time-consuming treatment!

A Cream that actually develops new and lasting skin-loveliness... even after one application your skin is fresher, clearer, more delicately blooming.

Magical? Only as science is magical today. It has taken the famous French House of Pinaud fifteen years of research and experiment to perfect this amazing New Cream that dermatologists of two continents applaud so enthusiastically.

First you smooth it on—lightly, quickly. You need not rub it in with the strenuous stretching motion used with old fashioned creams.

Miraculously—like a magic magnet—it gathers up the day's dust and powder from the depths of the pores. Then simply washes away!

Vanishes at the touch of cool, clear water, carrying with it all the dirt it has collected.

It leaves your pores really free, able to breathe. It deposits not a trace of waxy, fatty sediment in your skin (as dermatologists point out creams usually do) to foster blackheads and coarsen pores.

And at the very same time Pinaud's Cream stimulates the circulation, it tones the tissues and supples the surface skin. All in thirty swift seconds!

Now you need no astringent—you need no powder base. Just a whisk of powder, a touch of rouge ... and you are at your best!

Think what time-saving that means to the busy modern woman ... to the lady of the house who puts the finishing touches on both her dinner and her dressing in the last breathless half hour before the guests arrive ... to the business girl who must hurry home and change from bee to butterfly before her dinner-date.

But more important still is the fact that each time Pinaud's Cream is used it brings the skin one step nearer the beauty Nature intended it to have! Pinaud, Paris and New York.

Why Folks Get Fat
and how they lose it

Science, some years ago, found a cause of excess fat which is easy to correct. Scientists proved it on thousands of test animals, then on human beings. The results were reported in medical journals, and the use of this method has spread the world over.

Then a great medical laboratory embodied this method in Marmola prescription tablets. They have now been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. The use has grown to vast proportions through users telling others.

The results are seen in every circle. Slenderness prevails. Excess fat is much less common than it was. Now physicians everywhere are prescribing for obesity the chief factor in Marmola.

Abnormal exercise or diet is not required, not advised. One simply takes four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal.

The prescription is not secret. A book in every box gives the formula complete. It explains the results so you may know they are natural and helpful. Learn how easy it is to get these results if you need them. New beauty, new health and vitality come when the fat departs. few things bring more joys to men and women than reduction by Marmola.

Go get a box and watch effects. You will be delighted.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. Any druggist who is out will order from his jobber.

Romantic Claims of the Russian Hercules and the Trouble They Started

Captain Medvedeef's Eagerness to Bestow His Paternity on Two Different Children Was Not Shared by the Mothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Marc Michailovitch Medvedeef.

Mrs. Torchinsky.

The Russian Hercules himself.

Mrs. Grace M. Burnham.

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK. APT. MARC MICHAILOVITCH MEDVEDEEF is, among other things, a physical culturist and former circus strong man. He is a veritable Russian Hercules, with a great shock of curly black hair on his head and almost as much on his chest. He broadcasts without reservation that he is a "perfect specimen of physical manhood." He broadcasts other things, too. Right now he is broadcasting the startling assertion that he is a "eugenic papa."

Usually, the fathers of illegitimate children don't come out in the open so readily as does Medvedeef. They are, as a rule, hard to lay hands on. Not so the Russian Adonis. He admits it so readily that one suspects he is bragging a bit. Not only does he admit being a eugenic parent, he graciously accepts responsibility for other illegitimate offspring as well.

It is causing some commotion, this claim that he has been sought out to become the father of eugenic children. The infant of whose paternity he boasts loudest is none other than the noted eugenic baby born last January to Mrs. Grace Mailhouse Burnham, widow of a wealthy Louisville distiller. At that time, it will be recalled, Mrs. Burnham refused to disclose the child's paternity, but stated that the father had been carefully selected. Further than that, it was nobody's business.

NOW that the Russian strong man has volunteered to serve in the role, she has more to say. Substantially, it is that if Medvedeef had anything to do with bringing her baby into the world it is news to her. She declares she never saw nor heard of the Russian strong man and that his boast is a very rank fabrication, designed to gain notoriety and publicity, which the strong man apparently craves.

It may be, as many believe, that Medvedeef is so impressed with his own eugenic importance that he thinks he should be the father of all illegitimate children and so has come to believe he really is. Or it may be he had an idea his claim would get him on the front pages of the newspapers. Whatever his reason, it is doubtful if he suspected his claim would make so much trouble for him. With Mrs. Burnham's dander up, as it is, there is no telling what would happen if they met, and Mrs. Burnham isn't the only menace. There is Mrs. Rosalind Torchinsky, the mother of another illegitimate child he declares is his own. And there is Doris Torchinsky, Mrs. Torchinsky's indignant husband.

AS A STARTER, Medvedeef will have to appear in court to answer charges of assault brought by Torchinsky. Mrs. Torchinsky, it seems, deserted her husband for the strong man and the husband alleges Medvedeef crowned him with a plate in an argument over the matter.

On top of these troubles, Medvedeef is having quite a tussle with his legal mate, Mrs. Sifera Kantrovitch Medvedeef, whom he is suing for divorce. But this is not all, for his mother-in-law, Mrs. Aaron Kantrovitch, from her home in Holyoke, Massachusetts, is broadcasting to the world that while Medvedeef may be a young Adonis of Russia, a curly-tressed Hercules and a "perfect specimen of physical manhood" to some people, he is to her nothing but "a bum and a loafer."

And while this self-proclaimed "eugenic papa" has declared himself as a man without fear, he revealed the other day that there is one person in the world of whom he stands in mortal dread.

It is his legal wife, Mrs. Sifera Kantrovitch Medvedeef, who a few days ago socked her "hero husband" for going around "having babies" and filing what she claimed to be a "fake" action for divorce. The wife of the Russian is not in the lightweight division, either. She tips the scales at 263 pounds.

As a result of his wife taking a sock at him on sight, Medvedeef does his cruising around New York in the company of a pair of strong-arm policemen. But on a recent occasion the bodyguard proved unequal to the emergency and the "perfect specimen" got two on the button, without landing a blow in return.

Because of the brawls, in which he finds himself the central figure, the circus strong man now realizes the full import of the Kiplingesque, "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." His troubles are Mrs. Grace Mailhouse Burnham, Mrs. Rosalind Torchinsky and Mrs. Sifera Kantrovitch Medvedeef, his wife, and last, but not least, Mrs. Aaron Kantrovitch, his mother-in-law. Of course, Doris Torchinsky, an aggrieved and outraged husband, must also be listed among his woes.

But it is Mother-in-law Kantrovitch who lifts the veil of mystery from her doughty Russian son-in-law, in the doing of which she does not mince her words.

IT was in 1924 that the "perfect specimen" first met Sifera, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Kantrovitch of Holyoke, according to advices from that city. He was casually meandering at the time along the streets of Springfield, Massachusetts, looking about for a restaurant. In a car parked at the curb sat a young woman. Surely, she must know of a place where one might get food. And thus, through inquiries about something to eat, the romance between Sifera Kantrovitch and Captain Marc Michailovitch Medvedeef had its beginning.

In February, 1925, the former circus strong man and the Holyoke girl, after a whirlwind and most romantic courtship, eloped to New York and were married. Within a few days the Russian Adonis brought his bride back to her father's home at 169 Beach street, Holyoke, and, according to his mother-in-law, settled down to admiring himself.

"He expected his father-in-law to support him in luxury as soon as he married into the family," Mrs. Kantrovitch said. "I waited for five months for him to go to work and support my daughter before I finally asked him why he did not seek employment.

"When I put it straight up to him: 'Don't you ever expect to go out and get a job?' he politely informed me that he would never have taken my daughter for a wife, if he thought that he had to go to work. He also told me that in Russia the husband of a rich girl never lowered himself by getting a job."

It was at this juncture, Mrs. Kantrovitch says, that Medvedeef was informed he would no longer be supported by his in-laws, whereupon he packed his bags and departed from the Holyoke home. Before leaving, however, according to his mother-in-law, he kissed his wife an affectionate good-by, but said nothing about her accompanying him. Her daughter was then expecting to become a mother, said Mrs. Kantrovitch.

Mrs. Kantrovitch, while surprised at the divorce suit, agreed that it would be a good thing, but said the action should have been instituted by the wife. The news that her daughter had blackened the eyes of her Volga-boatman spouse served to brighten up things considerably.

"I DESPISE a man who is not a real man," declared the mother-in-law, "especially one whose fine education and wide travel, together with his thick, curly hair, have made him as vain as a peacock.

"I guess the reason my daughter and he did not get along together is that she is American-born and he a Russian. He had a trunk full of documents during his stay in Holyoke to prove that he had some social standing in Russia. But he certainly never had my ideas about supporting a wife, and I would not tolerate him any longer. I have not seen him since he left in July, 1925."

According to information reaching New York from Holyoke, the Kantrovitch family once enjoyed considerable wealth. But the loss of a suit and cloak business of the girl's father has forced the family to cut corners in their living expenses. At the present time the father-in-law of the circus strong man is engaged by a clothing factory as a traveling salesman. The little daughter of the Medvedeefs, Bernice Carolyn, is with her grandparents in Holyoke.

IN DISCUSSING the future of her granddaughter, Mrs. Kantrovitch, according to news dispatches from Holyoke, declared that she would never surrender the child to its father.

"Just a few weeks ago," she said, "this man, who is now claiming to be the father of a lot of babies around New York, phoned me to ask about his wife and baby. I immediately hung up on him. To my way of thinking, the man who would not stand by his wife and child is a bum and a loafer."

Despite her woes, Mrs. Kantrovitch took time to discuss companionate marriage. She believes it is the best solution yet advanced for the divorce problem.

"One hears that when a couple look alike they are true natural mates, but my daughter and Captain Medvedeef look more alike than brother and sister, but today he is anxious to get rid of her. Well, today women have short hair and long sense instead of vice versa as in the past."

The self-styled father of the eugenic baby of Mrs. Burnham is a nephew of Abraham Sahykin, formerly of Holyoke. Mrs. Sahykin, his wife, the Captain's aunt, now in Massachusetts on a visit, said the family had nothing whatever to do with the former circus strong man.

While Captain Medvedeef is willing to discuss his fatherhood of the "eugenic baby," he refuses to be drawn into answering the caustic comments of his mother-in-law. When shown a copy of Mrs. Kantrovitch's strictures, concerning his treatment of her daughter and his own child, he sighed wearily and gazed blankly into space.

On the subject of fatherhood, however, Captain Medvedeef is more talkative. When it was pointed out to him that Mrs. Burnham might force him into court to prove his claim of being the father of her "eugenic baby," he said:

"Mind, I did not become the father of this child through intent. It was just a matter of coincidence. In the whole proceedings I now feel that advantage was taken of me.

"There can be no questioning that I am the father of what is now referred to as the 'eugenic baby.' I am willing to stand before Mrs. Grace Mailhouse Burnham and in the presence of witnesses confront her with indisputable facts and details which she cannot deny.

"Further, I am willing to submit to a blood test—to have my blood and that of the child analyzed.

"I come of a good family in Russia, and I am sure that the Burnham child will not be ashamed of her father."

But withal he went on record against the eugenic idea.

"That is no way to bring children into the world," he asserted. "I never loved Mrs. Burnham. She never loved me. And I feel no love whatever for the child, nor would I if ever I were to see it, which I don't desire."

MEDVEDEEF, who is now living in the vicinity of Hackensack, is 26 years of age. He claims that for a short time he served as an officer in the Russian Soviet Navy.

The former circus strong man has consistently declined either to confirm or deny the suggestion that he was making a clean breast of his past, especially his "eugenic lapse," in order to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

As a result of the publicity, Mrs. Burnham, mother of the famous "eugenic baby," named Vera, meaning "Truth," will, it is reported, shortly leave the city, until the hub-bub has died down. The story is that she will pay a short visit to her former home, Louisville, Kentucky, remaining with relatives of her dead husband.

Vera will be sent to her grandmother in Connecticut.

Said the "Millionaire Kid"

But His Resolutions Were Forgotten When the High-Riding Byron Chandler Met Gene West, the Dancer, and for the Fourth Time Got Married.

NEW YORK.

IF I EVER marry again, it will be to a woman who has never been nearer to the stage than the fifth row. A man who marries an actress makes a great mistake."

— With this sage reflection, Byron D. Chandler, once the "Millionaire Kid" of Broadway, checked wife No. 3 off the list when that same wife, otherwise known as Luella Gear of "Poppy" fame, emerged from a divorce suit in Paris with the winner's share of the spoils. That was about five years ago. Already comes word of a worthy resolution broken, just like those of last New Year's. News has filtered through from Paris that Chandler, by this time one of its best-known citizens, has married a fourth time. And this newest bride is an actress, like the others. Her name is Gene West and she is a red-headed dancing girl from Brooklyn. She is 19 and exactly 31 years his junior.

Of course, Chandler's name may not mean so much to the younger generation of flappers, but it was one well known to the girls of a few years ago, among whom he always caused a stir by the way he tossed his cash about when on one of his wife-hunting tours. In his day, the "Millionaire Kid," as he was known all over America and Europe, has hit all the high spots from Manchester, New Hampshire, to Paris, via Boston, New York, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis and London. In his wake he always left a trail of quivering hearts, divorces and breach of promise suits. During his years as a student in the world's most expensive night school here, he married a concert singer and two stage beauties, besides being named by various disappointed ladies of the footlights in the stiff phraseology of court petitions.

When he swore off after the last divorce, everybody thought he had reached the end of the Broadway trail and, facing the sober years of middle life, would heed some of his own "Don'ts." But such souvenirs as a depleted fortune, three divorces, a sheaf of sensational press clippings and a Midas tradition weren't enough. He had to go back for more.

IN STUDY of the gold-plate psychology of the spender, it is interesting to speculate on the number of tight-wad ancestors it took to produce a free-handed spender like Byron D. Chandler. No doubt, the harassed economies of a score of New England forefathers and the cheated desires of a long line of thrifty Puritan wives spoke out at last in the character of the "Millionaire Kid." As he went up and down Broadway, signing supper checks for a whole chorus at a time, he was undoubtedly spending for his ancestors—taking the fling that stern-faced men and women of the past secretly wanted to take, perhaps, but never did.

The son of George Byron Chandler, a self-made banker of Manchester, New Hampshire, the "kid" began his dollar-mark career while still a student at Harvard. The elder Chandler, who died about that time, left a fortune running well into the millions, and his widow, Mrs. Fanny M. Chandler, divided it between the "Kid" and his brother on the day Byron became 21 years of age.

The young man then started out to "burn up the town," as he expressed it. Tradition relates that he walked down the steps of the bank, clutching $10,000 in his hands, and cheerfully remarked: "Now for joy!" About the first thing he did was to order three of the finest automobiles of European manufacture.

Within a few weeks the young man from Manchester, New Hampshire, was making dollars fly with the speed of feathers in a Cuban cockfight. Every chorus girl knew him as the "Millionaire Kid." Every head waiter looked as if the clouds had rolled by when he stepped across the threshold. Instead of asking a solitary coryphee to join him in a restaurant, Chandler made it a regular practice to visit five or six theaters in an evening and invite out the entire chorus. His purchases ranged from a $5000 Japanese dog to a complete hotel, bought as a prank in partnership with Wilson Mizner. For a time the new owners amused themselves by ejecting personally all the guests they did not like, but Chandler's interest in his new toy faded and he left New York in quest of other fields.

NEW ORLEANS was next to know him, and in that gay metropolis he caused much gasping among the gendarmerie and sports, as a result of his frolickings along Rue Royale and Rue Iberville. During his stay in the old Creole city he formed a friendship with Rube Waddell, famous baseball pitcher, who was then a member of the St. Louis Browns and hitting on all cylinders as far as daredeviltry and wildness were concerned.

Waddell and the "Millionaire Kid" made things hum during their brief, but riotous, stay in New Orleans, and it was with a sigh of relief that the community saw them stowed away on a St. Louis-bound train with orders from the police and city officials to do their holiday stuff elsewhere in the future.

London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna were later to know Chandler. He went to Monte Carlo and reversed the usual order of things at the Casino by walking out, after an hour's play, with $100,000. He repeated the performance for three nights running. On the fourth night his card was taken away, for word had gotten out that the "Millionaire Kid" had a "system." A week later he dropped 46,000 pounds ($230,000) in a London gambling house.

During all this career of spending the "Kid" was having his love affairs and domestic troubles, too. They started when he was barely 21. They first came to light when he was sued for $25,000 by Mrs. Edith B. Roberts of Manchester, who charged that he had alienated the affections of her daughter, Alice. Mrs. Roberts specifically alleged Chandler had eloped to Boston with Alice and that before the wedding day arrived he had grown tired of her and put her aside. The case was settled out of court for the exact amount asked for in the suit.

His next flyer into romance resulted in marriage—his first. One night a clairvoyant told him that he would meet his destiny at Bermuda.

"All right," said Chandler. "In that case I had better go down there and find out what she looks like."

A few weeks later he returned, engaged to Miss Grace Estelle Stecher, a New York concert singer. He had wooed her under the palms of the tropical island, and in a few weeks they were married, much against the will of the young lady's parents. For a few years they lived happily enough. The repressed ancestors, however, were not yet satisfied. The lights of Broadway began to wink enticingly and, it seems, the "Kid" fared forth again to pluck the primroses from the primrose path.

Before the first Mrs. Chandler had gotten her divorce, the "Kid" was defendant in a $100,000 breach of promise suit filed by Miss Joan Sawyer, Boston dancer and chorus girl and former partner of Rudolph Valentino. Joan settled the case out of court for $23,765, and her broken heart healed very quickly.

It was only a year later that Chandler, now divorced, attended a Boston theater and was knocked for a row of orchestra seats by the charms of Miss Grace La Rue. At that time she was doing a rather sensational dance in the show, though she was by no means the star of the production. Chandler, however, wasn't particular about stars. He singled her out and made her acquaintance by the simple expedient of sending back stage something approaching a carload of orchids with his card.

A brief and fervid courtship followed and Grace La Rue became Mrs. Chandler No. 2. There was a quiet little honeymoon in the suburbs and then a louder one abroad. Miss La Rue seemed as much opposed to private property as any socialist orator who ever misquoted Karl Marx, judging from the way she helped her husband to get rid of his. She went shopping in Paris and filled 17 trunks with some $38,000 worth of gladsome raiment. Chandler, meanwhile, was amusing himself in the transportation business abroad.

WHEN Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt established his famous coach line from London to Windsor and Brighton, Chandler went into competition with an automobile built in the shape of a stage coach and painted, as the owner described it, "the color of claret with the sunlight sifting through." After having carried enough crowned heads to furnish a royal flush or two, Chandler wearied of the claret-tinted coach and the couple returned to New York, the hard-boiled customs inspectors suffering a severe moral shock when Grace displayed her collection of daring gowns.

She returned to the stage and he assumed the role of business manager. He also financed a show or two for her. They went abroad with their show and Grace became quite a rage because of her disregard for clothing, but just when they seemed to be living a life of bliss there came a sudden rift. Grace came back to New York with the avowed intention of divorcing the "Kid" and told some rather harsh stories about his conduct abroad. He followed soon afterwards, seeking a reconciliation, but she was through with him, and told him so in plain language. He then began telling some harsh stories about her, and they went to the divorce court, still telling them. After that divorce he swore off from stage marriages for the first time, just as he was to do later.

Remaining single, he led a fairly tranquil life until 1919 and kept clear of charming actresses. Then he fell for another—the very thing he said he wouldn't do. It was Miss Luella Gear this time, a stage beauty he had met in his Broadway rambles. She was young—still in her teens—and fresh from school when he took her for wife No. 3.

This marriage lasted until 1924, when he faced the divorce courts for the third time. Mrs. Byron Chandler No. 3 was given an absolute divorce from the "Kid."

WHEN not engaged in marrying chorus girls and actresses or appearing in the divorce courts, the "Millionaire Kid" was grabbing space in the newspapers for his bizarre stunts. He always drove his own automobile, explaining that he was not willing to ask a chauffeur to take the chances that he wished to take.

After his marriage to Miss La Rue, Chandler and his wife tried to crash by the portals of Boston society. He met with a rebuff. The Brahmins of Beacon Hill refused to consort with one whose name was forever in the newspapers and who bore the title of "Millionaire Kid."

On a voyage to London he had a fight with a fellow passenger as a result of a flirtatious remark made to his wife. He also slapped the face of a Parisian nobleman because of too much attention to Miss La Rue.

Leaving Boston one night in his $16,000 automobile, with a lot of gay companions, Chandler ran the machine into a mudhole alongside the roadway. He abandoned the car then and there, saying that it could rot there before he would ever touch it again. A Boston policeman got the car out of the mire, after which he phoned Chandler to come and get his car.

"You got it out of the mudhole, eh?" queried the "Kid."

"Yep," answered the bluecoat.

"Well, you just keep the damned machine and don't worry me about such trifles."

And for several years the Boston policeman was the envy of all his friends as he drove around in a high-powered Fiat. Chandler sent the policeman a formal transfer of the car, so that the machine wouldn't revert to the Police Department as unclaimed property.

ANOTHER time he had a run-in with a Boston motorman. He objected to the bright rays of a headlight on a trolley car and refused to move his machine from the tracks in front of the car until the motorman turned out the lights.

Chandler was locked up and his machine sequestered. He refused to move the machine from the street. A policeman phoned him, thinking he might be as lucky as the other Boston bluecoat, but Chandler came for the car. He then sought out the motorman who had bawled him out for obstructing traffic and who had threatened to "knock his block off," and said:

"Take this car home with you, before one of those Boston cops gets his hands on it, for they have their eyes on it!"

The "Millionaire Kid" is now 50, and while he has spent many millions since he was 21, he is still a millionaire many times over.

He once complained that most of the women he married were after his cash and not after his heart. He then gave the advice about marriage—especially to women of the stage—but now he has gone and married another.

They are honeymooning quietly—for the time being, anyhow—at the "Kid's" villa in Southern France.

ST. PAUL'S GETS ITS FACE LIFTED

Why the World-Famous Cathedral Was Threatened With Collapse—

And the Engineering Devices That Are Being Adopted to Save It.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

THE dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, that lifts itself gracefully above the London skyline, is being encircled with a 30-ton girdle of steel. The 200-year-old church is literally having its face lifted, not with the idea of renewing its youth but of making it safe for worshipers and the thousands of visitors who come to this national shrine from every corner of the empire.

Twenty-one years ago it was discovered that the walls of St. Paul's were crumbling. Temporary methods were resorted to, but in 1922 it was realized that drastic steps were necessary if the beautiful cathedral was not to collapse. And this was unthinkable to every true Britisher.

St. Paul's stands on hallowed ground. It is said that for 1300 years an edifice dedicated to Christian worship has occupied this spot. During the war it was spoken of as "the parish church of the empire." Until the recent advent of a few tall buildings there was scarcely a vista of London that it did not dominate.

A commission of engineers and experts was appointed to determine how the church might be saved. This survey, carried out with the most scientific precision, required many months and cost nearly a quarter of a million dollars. Two main conclusions were reached.

FIRST, it was decided that the foundations of the building were not settling so seriously that this part of the structure would have to be rebuilt. A majority of the experts agreed that the foundations, which had been partly undermined by excavations for sewers, subways and nearby buildings, could be sufficiently strengthened by the use of cement. It was also agreed that the eight piers on which the greater part of the weight of the dome rests could be sufficiently strengthened by pouring concrete into the centers of these piers, which, when built, were filled with rubble. These piers showed definite evidence of strain, frequently a piece of the Portland stone with which they are faced had been known to fly off into the interior of the cathedral.

Secondly, it was decided that temperature changes were responsible for the cracks as well as the bulging in the dome. It was decided that the steel circlet would prevent any future bulging. Later, however, when this conclusion was severely criticised, a compromise was reached. A plan was agreed upon by means of which, through a very difficult engineering feat, part of the vertical thrust of the dome could be allotted to the steel girdle.

IT WAS readily seen that this plan would cost well over a million dollars and subscriptions were at once begun in England and America. It was not difficult to raise the money. Even occasional visitors to London were found willing to contribute to save the structure. Work was started in 1923.

Experts say that if the builders had carried out the original plans of the designer, Sir Christopher Wren, St. Paul's would never have been threatened. They do not blame the great architect who designed so many of London's famous buildings.

In the middle of the seventeenth century Wren had been commissioned to draw up plans for the preservation and restoration of the old St. Paul's Cathedral that stood on the same spot as the present edifice. He drew up a most elaborate set of plans that called for virtual reconstruction of the old church. It was to have been remodeled in the neo-classic style, and if it had been carried out would have resembled in many respects the style of the present church.

But the great London fire put an end to all plans for reconstruction. It razed not only the old St. Paul's but every other London church. Wren was confronted with a job of staggering proportions. He was commissioned to design plans for a new St. Paul's and for 50 to 75 other London churches. The mathematician-architect drew innumerable sets of plans with an amazing fertility of imagination.

He drew up three or four sets for St. Paul's. The first plans were not approved and it is generally agreed that they are inferior to the design which was later adopted. Even when a design was finally approved he received special permission from the King to alter it at will, with the result that he achieved something strikingly different from the actual plan—a work that is considered one of the masterpieces of architecture.

HE COULD not have his way throughout, however. It was his wish to surround the church with a great square or plaza. But ground in London was held too expensive to carry out this project. Had this been done, experts now agree, it probably would not be necessary to reconstruct the church at this time, since its foundations would have been protected from the encroachments of later excavations.

Wren's plan of construction was excellent, modern builders agree. The dome of St. Paul's consists actually of three domes—an inner dome of masonry, an intermediate cone of brick, which carries the 800-ton weight of the stone cupola and an external dome of wood covered with lead. At the point where the two domes and the cone meet, Wren imbedded in the masonry some massive chains sealed up in lead, with a view to taking the lateral thrust and insuring that only vertical loads should pass down through the inner drum, as the circular support of the dome is called.

Wren, it is said, was perfectly well aware of the fact that the great weight of the dome and the outer and inner drums—about 40,000 tons—was concentrated on the inner edges of the eight piers that bear the burden. He took measures to counterbalance this by means of buttresses, but this effort failed. The steel girdle will go a long way towards compensating for this overloading of the inner edges of the piers.

When Wren undertook to design and build St. Paul's he was no builder, though he was the most brilliant mathematician and architect of his day. But, regardless, the fabric of the dome, fractured though it is, shows that he had perfect knowledge of the amounts and directions of the stresses. When he started the great church, he was not familiar, apparently, with the strength of built-up masonry, and he did not realize how ill-suited a masonry wall is to stand a vertical shearing stress.

His piers are built in the medieval fashion, consisting of an outer veneer of cut stone, from 6 to 12 inches in thickness, filled in with rubble masonry.

SPEAKING of the building of these piers, the eminent engineer, Sir Francis Fox, says he believes that a kind of large rectangular bath was formed of the outer cut stone. This was filled with lime and into the liquid bath the stone debris from old St. Paul's was dumped, without any attempt to pack the material down. The preliminary survey showed that in some cases this rubble could be moved between finger and thumb, the mortar having more or less completely disintegrated.

Wren's foundations rest upon a layer of five feet of potter's clay, between which and the splendid London blue clay—a distance of 35 feet—is a mass of sand and gravel. Sand makes an excellent foundation, provided it can be prevented from escaping. Unfortunately, excavations for a large sewer adjoining the cathedral were started 100 years ago through this sand, and during the operation hundreds of tons of sand and water flowed into the excavation and were removed. Fortunately, this subsoil can be made into a perfectly satisfactory foundation by infusing it with liquid cement under high pressure, as was proved by Fox in an experimental boring near the Cathedral.

The piers can also be made secure by washing the interior rubble with steam and then injecting cement until the cavities are filled and the rubble work is firmly cemented to the outside cut-stone facing. This is now being done. During the last 75 years a dozen or more English cathedrals have been rendered secure in this way.

FOR St. Paul's is not the only cathedral that has been threatened with decay and complete dissolution. One authority states that there is scarcely a cathedral in England that does not contain reinforcements in the shape of stone beams, braces, arches and buttresses that were never contemplated in the original design.

The massive central tower of Gloucester Cathedral, weighing some 4000 tons, began to push the walls of the nave, choir and transepts out of plumb, so the medieval masons built inclined buttresses, both outside the walls and within them. And they did so without any regard for appearances.

A notable instance is Salisbury Cathedral. The four main piers, or "legs," which carry the load of the central tower and spire, are only seven feet in diameter. This should have been sufficient for the original tower, whose top rose only a few feet above the ridge of the cathedral roof. But after the cathedral was built the Bishop in charge decided to place upon the existing tower two additional stories, with a total height of 80 feet, and above this he ran up a spire which, in itself, is 200 feet high.

Inevitably trouble developed. The overloaded piers sank several inches into the ground and to prevent the piers from buckling they put in two arches, to say nothing of a multitude of inclined buttresses, both inside the cathedral and out. A dozen or more iron and steel bands and ties have been built around and within the tower and spire. In spite of the winter gales this audacious spire, 405 feet high, has stood for some six or seven centuries, and, according to architects, should stand for an equally long time in the future if carefully looked after.

SO WILL St. Paul's be saved for posterity. Unless some unforeseen event should occur, it is probable, in view of the extensive reconstruction that the church is now undergoing, that its life will be longer than any other structure that has ever occupied this spot. And there have been numerous ones. Legend, not absolutely reliable history, says that this site was first occupied by a great church in the third century, when Ethelbert of Kent is supposed to have been Bishop of London. The first reliable records are those left by the Venerable Bede, who declared in them that in the year 610 A. D. a Christian church had been constructed long before upon this site, where once stood a pagan temple dedicated by the Romans to Diana. William the Conqueror built a great church on the site.

There is, of course, the possibility of a war that would bring air raids. St. Paul's is an unmistakable target. No one thought it would survive the air raids of the last war, and the Germans have subsequently explained that they purposely refrained from bombing it, having on many instances used it as a guide post for their operations.

If it had been wrecked by an explosion it would have been by accident, the Germans maintain. This nearly happened. Once the Germans reported it as demolished.

St. Paul's would have not a ghost of a chance in the event of another war. The recent royal air maneuvers proved that, despite the most perfect defense, the city was vulnerable to attack from the air. "Enemy" planes reduced enormous areas of the city to ruins in the course of a very short time.

But lovers of St. Paul's refuse to contemplate this catastrophe. They believe that the cathedral's splendid dome will dominate the skyline for many centuries to come, beckoning returning Londoners and welcoming the stranger.

DISAPPEARED WHEN SHE FOUND HER "TWIN" WAS NOT RELATED

The Strange Turn of Luck That Revealed William Hart's Real Identity and Turned Him From the Girl He Had Known as His Sister.

Mrs. Jessica Hart Trogan.

William Hart.

Mrs. Mary Rotz.

NEW YORK.

THE tie of blood again has proved stronger than all other claims. It has triumphed over a relationship of many years' standing to separate a foster brother and sister who had believed all their lives that they were twin children of the same father and mother.

Jessica Hart loved her supposed brother Bill better than anyone on earth. They had lived in a modest home in Camden, N. J., never doubting that the parents who died some few years ago were their own. The other day she learned the truth.

Through an odd mischance Bill Hart found his own blood brothers and sisters. Jessica was left without claim on anyone. And the discovery was not made easier for her when her "brother" explained that blood did make a difference and he could not help feeling more strongly drawn to his own family than to her, even though the two had grown up together and played Indian and made mud pies together.

So profound was the shock that Jessica packed her belongings and quietly left the home in which they had been living with relatives of their dead foster parents at Freeport, Long Island, where they had moved from Camden. Since then her whereabouts have been unknown.

The incident which disclosed the truth was of the sort that foster parents must always dread if they want to conceal from their adopted children the fact that they are not their real parents. Young Hart, who is 22 and employed in the municipal gasoline station in Brooklyn, wrote a letter to a Mr. Strickland, an old friend of the Hart family. He asked Strickland to give him a job in his silk business.

Strickland, by chance, mentioned the letter to an elderly relative, a woman who thought she recognized the description which Hart had given of himself. She asked if she might send the letter to a family in Philadelphia who had been searching for a lost son for many years. Permission was given and she forwarded the letter.

A WEEK or so afterward a mysterious telegram arrived at the filling station for Hart. It merely asked him to telephone a certain number in Philadelphia, and there was much jesting among the staff of the station. His imagination stirred, Hart put in the call. When he told his name, a happy excited voice said:

"This is your sister, Sue Potter. We've found you at last, Will. Your name isn't Hart at all—it's Furness. You were so little, father felt you needed a mother's care. He kept the other five of us. We all live in Philadelphia and are crazy to see you. Come right down and spend a week with us. Your three sisters and two brothers have been looking for you for years."

Hart was astounded at this news, but before he hung up he said he would come immediately and added: "I'll bring my sister with me, of course."

Jessica was thrilled, too. In the excitement of the moment it never occurred to either of them that she was not included in this new-found family. They were twins, they assumed, so naturally Jessica was taken along.

Together they drove to Philadelphia and for Bill it was a joyful homecoming. Sue warmly embraced Hart, Mary and Therese did likewise, while his two brothers struggled to be the first to grasp his hand. When the excitement had somewhat subsided, there stood Jessica, an outsider.

"You don't belong to us," said Hart's new-found family. "We don't know who you are."

At this she fainted. But she stayed out the week with her "brother," a week that was filled for him with fascinating discoveries. His new family explained to him about his adoption.

It all started in Camden. The two families, the Harts and the Furnesses, were living next to each other. Then Mrs. Furness died, leaving the father with the care of six small children, of whom Bill was the youngest. During the week of the funeral Bill was left in care of the Harts, who had always wanted children of their own. They pleaded with Furness to let them adopt the child and he at last reluctantly gave his consent. The Harts shortly afterward moved to Nashville, Tennessee, where, it is believed, Jessica was adopted.

The two families lost all contact with each other when the Furnesses moved to Philadelphia. Years later, with prosperity, they determined to find the boy who had been adopted. Their search had always been unavailing until the chance letter came into their hands.

"SHE was a good deal cut up about it," Hart says of Jessica's reaction to that week. "But she tried not to show it—then. She stayed the week out with me. Of course, they all made a great fuss over me. And naturally I'm fond of them—who wouldn't be, finding a family that way. I'm going to change my name to Furness. I can't help it that I love Sue and Mary and Therese better than Jessica—yes, I suppose I must have shown my feelings. Blood is blood, and she's my sister, my sister, my real sister. My sister Mary is 26—she's Mrs. Rotz—and Therese is 28.

"Coming home in the car Jessica wouldn't even sit near me—she pulled as far over to the side of the car as she could get. She was pretty upset. What could I do? Naturally I made a fuss over my sisters—and she didn't like it.

"We'd been living with the Bergstrums at Freeport, Long Island—old people who were distant relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hart, who adopted Jessica and me. When we got home, they admitted they didn't know where Mrs. Hart got Jessica. They said the Harts never intended us to learn we were not their children. My real father died 12 years ago, my new family told me.

"Jessica didn't say much. A few days later she packed up her things and cleared out.

"I haven't any idea where she is.

"She sent me a postal card from Freeport, saying she was going to Geneva, New York. She doesn't know anyone there and I think that was a stall. It's too bad her husband died. He was a pilot for one of the Standard Oil Company planes in South America and Jessica married him when she was 19 years old. He was killed about a year afterward when his plane was wrecked. And the Harts died about the same time."

Jessica has no way of earning her own living now that she is on her own. She has always been a "home girl," latterly helping Mrs. Bergstrum with the work about the house. She is a fair-haired, blue-eyed girl, rather happy-go-lucky by temperament, just like her "brother." That was one of the things that everyone commented on—how much the "Hart twins" looked and acted alike.

"I'm going in search of Jessica, if she doesn't show up soon," Hart says. "And meanwhile I'll stick to my job."

"There was no way of hiding the truth from Jessica," he adds, in defense of his own attitude, "and no reason why she should show resentment against me. I can see how she feels, but I don't see what I can do to make her feel any different. She is not my sister, and Sue and Mary and Therese are my sisters—and nothing on earth can change that fact. Blood will tell, you know."

THE HOMELY CIRCE WHO CONQUERED SIX MEN

BERLIN.

IN SPITE of the fact that she wasn't good-looking, Irmgard Bruns held a fatal fascination for men. Like Cleopatra and certain other sirens of history who were short on looks but never short on love affairs, Mme. Bruns had "It," or whatever it takes to keep the suitors lined up. She got her men one after another. She won six and married four of them before she was 30 years old. The story of her hectic matrimonial career came to light only as the result of her recent arrest. She was brought into a Berlin court a short time ago on charges of fraud and swindling and sentenced to nine months in prison. During that trial she unfolded her strange story to the Judge.

Her narrative, like the tales of Scheherazade, came near saving the day for her because each time the Judge settled down to impose sentence she broke in with the tale of another courtship and marriage. It went so far that a medical expert finally was called in to examine her and determine if she were insane. He testified she was sane and, indeed, gifted but a very nervous and hysterical woman who was totally without moral scruples. As near as he could make out, he said, she exercised an attraction for men which was little short of magical at first, but soon made life unbearable for them. She was a modern Circe.

BORN 31 years ago, Irmgard was the daughter of a well-known Bavarian landscape painter, and it was generally believed that through her mother's line she has in her veins the blood of one of the Bavarian Kings.

Her parents were wealthy and, as a child, she lived a life of luxury in Munich and Florence and was given an education suitable for a daughter of aristocracy. It was at the early age of 16 that she began her rapid excursions into matrimony.

Becoming tired of school, Irmgard eloped with a wealthy manufacturer who had become fascinated by the precocious girl, but she was destined to become a widow in less than a year. The marriage took place in the fall of 1913. The following summer the war broke out and her husband went to the front, where, after a few weeks, he had the misfortune to be killed.

Irmgard Bruns who, though far from good looking, had a fatal fascination for men.

A widow at 17, Irmgard did not mourn long. She quickly became engaged to an officer in the German army. It happened that this man was a Protestant and she was a Catholic. He tried to convert her to his faith, but she refused to forsake her church. The result was that this suitor one day shot himself to death before her eyes. She was arrested on suspicion of murder, but was soon released and allowed to return to the romantic activity of getting engaged again.

She did that, promptly. Within a month after her former fiance's death she was married to a nobleman and Major in the German army. He continued to escape death at the front, so after two years Irmgard divorced him. Another prospective husband was waiting almost at the courthouse steps. Before the decree was a day old she had married again, and this time her spouse was a well-known German writer. He remained her husband for three months and then she made another trip to the divorce court.

AFTER that, she apparently had run out of suitors temporarily or had decided to take a vacation from matrimony, for she suddenly became studious and went to Kiel to study philosophy. The vacation, however, did not endure long. Before she had learned much about philosophy she had another suitor and had forgotten all about the pursuit of the higher learning. This suitor was a medical student of the name of Bruns. He posed as a very rich young man and soon induced Irmgard to marry him. She went into matrimony this time all primed for a brilliant career of spending, but was riding for a bitter disappointment. It soon developed that her husband's wealth was all pretense and that he really had no money at all. That was what started Irmgard upon her career of crime.

Endeavoring to keep up the standard of living which Bruns had promised and which Irmgard had looked forward to, the couple soon fell into the practice of swindling hotels. They would travel from one city to another, staying for several days, and then disappear without paying their bills. From this pursuit they branched out into the side lines of outright theft and shoplifting. They were constantly in trouble with the police and saw the inside of a prison several times. On other occasions, when they were brought to trial Irmgard escaped sentence by being found mentally irresponsible or too ill from tuberculosis to stand prison life.

Finally, leaving her husband in prison, Irmgard went to Stralsund, where, without the formality of a divorce, she became engaged to a young man of good family named Bartels. She told him her husband had hanged himself in prison. She might have married him, too, had not their arrest interrupted the romance. As it happened, Bartels fell so completely under her influence that he became virtually her slave and assistant in the business of swindling hotels. The result was, he finally stood with her in the dock.

TABOR, Iowa. HIS town is the terminus of a one-man railroad. It is 11 miles long and E. V. Stopper is agent, owner, general manager, auditor, conductor and occasionally even the engineer. The Interstate Commerce Commission puts a value on this railroad of $135,000, but Stopper says he wishes someone would offer him that for it. It runs between Tabor and Malvern, through one of the richest farming communities in Iowa. Visitors have compared Mr. Stopper's railroad with the Toonerville Trolley. But townspeople here and in Malvern and farmers in the surrounding country resent this. They are loyal to the railway that has served them for nearly 40 years, long before the coming of Iowa's hard roads. Then it connected this farming country with the outside world, but the new hard-surfaced highways threaten its very existence.

As it is run at present it does bear some resemblance to the Toonerville conveyance. Trains do not run on any particular schedule. But Mr. Stopper is very obliging. He has been known to get out of bed very late at night to run his train to Malvern for a doctor.

The cars which now operate on this railroad more nearly resemble trolleys than trains. Mr. Stopper builds these himself and powers them with Ford motors. They cost about $3000 each, and he has just completed three new ones, with a speed of 30 miles an hour.

In one respect the hard roads have proved a godsend to the Tabor & Northern Railway. During the past summer there has been a great road-building program in the country around Tabor and Malvern. Much of the material for these roads has been hauled over Mr. Stopper's line. To do this heavy hauling he has borrowed a regular engine and some freight cars from the Burlington Railroad. For the past six months there have been six or seven trains daily to haul the cement, sand and gravel needed for the highways.

Almost everyone in Tabor and Malvern and farmers along the route own some stock in the railroad, which has been paying its way most of the time since it was built. Stopper believes, however, that after the paving jobs are finished the cream of the business will be gone forever.

RESIDENTS in the district which the railroad serves think differently. Stopper has given them excellent service, helped them when they needed help most, they argue, and they are determined they are not going to forsake him. Many of them even now ship over his road, although it would be quicker and perhaps cheaper to haul by truck.

Back in the days of Iowa mud and horses and buggies, the railroad was almost a gold mine. It carried an average of 15,000 passengers annually. Freight loaded in Des Moines or Omaha and destined for either Tabor or Malvern was unloaded there the following morning.

The passenger business is now virtually nonexistent. Stopper says he will be lucky if he hauls 500 people this year. "Sometimes we go for weeks without a single ticket sale," he adds.

The "For Sale" sign hangs out on the old passenger coach which was forced into retirement by the absence of passenger traffic.

There is still considerable freight business. The Tabor & Northern has an annual income of about $35,000. Considerable quantities of grain, coal, sand and building materials are hauled. There is an average of about 1000 carloads a year, including 300 cars of livestock.

Stopper says he has no idea what he will do if his railroad is forced to close down. "It is my life's work," he says, "and I would feel as badly if I had to close down as I would if I should lose a member of my family. It's just part of me and I don't think I would be happy unless I was working on it, making my daily run."

During the rush season in the summer he has an engineer and fireman to operate the regulation-size engine, a man tending the section and an assistant in the office. But when business is slack he runs the whole performance. He sells you your ticket and then, just before train time, he takes his place in the driver's seat.

Another blow to business was the closing down of Tabor College last year. There weren't enough students to keep the institution open. The college students had at one time provided a lucrative source of income for the Tabor & Northern.

IF THE road were abandoned, farmers along the line would lose a valuable aid and ally. Stopper is nothing if not obliging. His train can be flagged at almost any telephone pole along the 11-mile right of way and he is not above bringing back 20 cents' worth of sugar or a few yards of cheesecloth for a farmer's wife. In winter, too, the service of the Tabor & Northern is almost invaluable. When highways are snowbound, Stopper clears his right of way and brings much-needed supplies to Tabor.

It is said that Stopper is the most popular man in Tabor. Three years ago his fellow citizens, who number about 1000, wanted to make him Mayor. But he declined. He's a railroad man and he didn't want to mix politics with his business.

PAGE, Nebraska. OUT on the rolling plains of Northwestern Nebraska, about 15 miles from this little town, there is a public benefactor whose philanthropies have never received the praise they deserve. He is "Santa Claus" Clark, and he built, owns and operates what he calls the North Pole Telephone Exchange for the benefit of neighboring ranchmen within a radius of 100 miles.

The profit—if any—from this venture is so small as to be negligible. It does not even make a living for Santa Claus, whose real name is Elias Luther, and the three other members of his family who operate it. But he believes the ranchers should have communication with the outside world as well as with each other.

In appearance, Santa Claus—that is the name everyone knows him by—is patriarchal. He has a long, white beard and a stern, sun-tanned face. Altogether, he looks rather like a Biblical prophet which is slightly incongruous with the business of running a modern telephone exchange.

Clark is 71 years old and one of the first settlers in this country. He has always had a liking for things electrical and he developed a conviction very early that the prairie country should have telephonic communication. It became apparent that no commercial company would ever establish an exchange because of the scarcity of potential subscribers.

An incident that happened 17 years ago fixed Clark's determination to set up his own telephone exchange. The child of a neighboring rancliman was very sick. It was necessary to ride 30 miles for a doctor. Before the father could return with a physician the child had died. Santa Claus Clark reflected that if the community had had telephones that child's life might have been saved.

TWO years later Clark established the North Pole exchange. He had saved $200 and was able to get some credit. With the cash he bought 10 second-hand telephones and the necessary switchboard. A hardware dealer here in Page took a chance on Santa Claus for 200 pounds of wire.

He had little trouble in finding 10 subscribers who wanted telephones. In fact, he was very discriminating in his choice of the 10. He awarded the phones to his own friends, with whom he thought he might like to talk. Four of this first group were, however, rather reluctant to have the phones installed. They did not believe that Clark could make and maintain phone connection without expert aid. But Santa Claus Clark had confidence in his own abilities. He offered to install the telephones on approval. Doubting subscribers could have 30 days' free trial and if they weren't satisfied the phone would be removed.

The old man looks back now and laughs at the way his first 10 telephones were guarded by the original subscribers after they had been in service a few days. "Why, those first 10 subscribers would sooner have had one of my telephones than an automobile," he says. "And other folks living round here just ran me ragged wanting me to install telephones on their places. Not one of the first 10 but paid me their first month's rent long before it was due for fear that I might change my mind and take the telephone service out."

At first Clark was telephone operator, lineman and director of the exchange. It was not long, however, before he taught his wife how to operate the simple switchboard, and later he imparted this knowledge to his two daughters, so that Mrs. Clark would be free to go out on the road with him and help him hunt line trouble.

When he first installed his exchange, Clark charged $15 a year rental for a telephone. And that is the price he asks today. He has never raised the price of the service nor has he ever sued a subscriber for an unpaid bill. This does not mean, of course, that every one of his subscribers over a period of 15 years has paid every bill due him. Occasionally a customer packs up and skips the country, leaving a considerable debt with Clark, but he is philosophic about these bad accounts.

FOUR years ago he bought a Ford car with his life's savings. But he soon found it too expensive to run, so he took the tires, springs, chassis and body apart and rigged up a wagon that horses could pull. He still has the remaining parts of the car, including the engine. He says he will be out of debt this year and he plans to put the Ford back together and operate it as a motor car again.

"The darned thing got me into a lot of trouble," Santa Claus says. "You see, my subscribers used to get me at all hours of the night and keep me busy shooting trouble, or this and that. The result was that next day I would be awfully sleepy and would go to sleep while driving. Once this happened and I drove over the prairie dog

FILM FLURRIES, FOR AUGUST, 1927 INTERVIEW WITH WILBUR SCHLITZ

"Noo, Pincus," exclaimed Mr. Mignonette, raising his eyes from the paper, 'hozz about we should playing gradually a leedle game chackers, you in conjunction witt me?"

You'd think she'd be tickled, but what does she do? 'No,' she says. 'I can't take falls. It's bad for me heart. I got a bad heart.' Well, that dame burned me up.

"Gevald! Call a cop! Gevald! An nembulence! Wheestle a cop! Queeck! Gevald! An nexident!"

The crowds in the side streets took up the yell. There was a rush to the courtyard. A big, fat maggie lay stretched out amid the splintered cement, moaning faintly. A thin trickle of blood glistened from the corner of her mouth down across her cheek and lost itself in the folds of her sweating and convulsing neck. A few people had already collected, standing around with the dumb, sheepish looks of a kid who has just dropped his baby brother on its head. It must have been serious, because a cop was standing around laughing. A skinny dame, with a face like a frog, said:

"D'ye think she'll die?"

"They say," came the reply in awed tones from her neighbor, "that if one dies in August"——

Out of a dank doorway shambled a creature clad in a filthy undershirt, a pair of pants, and in his stocking feet. Unkempt hair, his eyes bleary, a gray stubble covering his greasy face. He reeled a bit and swayed over to the prostrate figure. The wounded eyes on the ground met his. Her lips moved and her wail rose and died like a fire-engine siren:

"Yee-ee-oooo-oo-oo-ooo-ooo blankety blank son of a——blank——blank blank———blank! Now! Yee-oo-oo blankety——blank——blank——blank——blank——!

Now!!!—— Yee-oo-oo blankety ——blank——blank——blank——blank——!!!

"Oh! Willie, Willie, Willie, Willie. To think that you'd throw me out that winnow. Oh, Willie, Willie, Willie, Willie!—— Ye-oo-ooo blankety—blankshrrxpliz!"

All eyes turned toward Willie.

"Leench heem opp by a lemp-pust. Moiderer!" exclaimed Pinkowitz. "Leench heem opp by a lemp-pust. Wives he throws out from weendows. Geevem witt a steeck!"

Willie looked up calmly.

"Hm!" he husked, addressing nobody in particular. "Sa good thing there wuz people aroun' seen how it happened! Thass all! Thass all I kin say, gem'men. Sa good thing there wuz people aroun' seen how it happened. Yessir, there was people aroun' seen how it happened. Hm!"——

He looked at his wife much as an unhurt motorist might. His expression seemed to say:

"Of course it's exceedingly regrettable, but, after all, I'm covered."

Then, seeming to feel that further enlightenment should be forthcoming, he went on:

"Thass wot comes o' gittin' ammeris on a winnow sill. I tol' her. I sez: 'Don't go t' gittin' ammeris on a winnow sill.' Can't understand her. Lately all she does is git ammeris on winnow sills. Don't know what got into her. I tol' her. I sez: 'Git the winnows washed first and then come an' git ahmeris on a rockin' chair!' What am I got a rockin' chair fer?' But she would git ammeris on a winnow sill—— huh—— well——a man's a human bein', y'know——mmm—well, you know how it is——accidents kin happen, I mighta got killed too. It mighta been me, only fer the rope aroun' me pants ketchin' on a nail outside the winnow. I tol' her. I sez"——

A clanging ambulance outside cut him short.

"Yessir, that dame sure had me burned up. That's gratitude for you—what did I tell her? I told her, I sez: 'Awright, Lady Bilgewater. Ya won't do falls, heh! Ain't a big enough part, huh! Awright! Well, we'll fix up a swell scene for ya! Go home an' practice Romeo and Juliet scenes up on a balcony, and as soon as we can sign up John Barrymore we'll have him climb up an' make love to you.'"

"Noo!" said Pincus.

"Noo, noo!" said Mignonette.

TALES of REAL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

Rex, the Collie Puppy That Used His Brains.

WHEN this story appeared in Pennsylvania newspapers, early in February, 1927, it was doubted by many readers, who branded it as a nature fake. Accordingly, there were several people who went to the trouble to verify it and to print the facts they gleaned. The truth of the tale was established beyond any doubt, and the proofs were set forth in the Keystone Gazette and elsewhere.

Rex and Jack were two collie puppies, only eight months old, litter-brothers, gold-red and white. Incidentally, from earliest babyhood they had been inseparable chums. This is a queer trait which any student of collie-litters will substantiate; often two pups in a large litter will form a chumship for each other and will care little or nothing for their remaining brothers and sisters. Such a pair were Rex and Jack.

Jack was sold to Harris Hugg of Fleming, Pa. Rex belonged to his neighbor, Mrs. Joseph Rogers, an elderly widow. The two families were friends as well as neighbors. The puppies were together every day at one or the other of their owners' homes, or else wandered off, side by side, on rabbit hunts in the woods.

Then, one February morning, Jack was missing. A search of the neighborhood brought no clews as to where he had gone. Mr. Hugg was certain he had been stolen, and he sent an advertisement to the various newspapers, offering:

"$25 reward for the arrest and conviction of the person who stole my collie dog, February 4, 1927. Color, light red with some white on breast, dark face. Eight months old. License No. 268."

THE offer of a reward brought no results, though it was continued in the papers day after day. Hugg gave up his pet for lost. He called one day at the Rogers home to talk about his loss. But he found Mrs. Rogers had canine troubles of her own. She declared her puppy, Rex, was either sickening or else going mad.

"I never saw him behave so," she went on. "Something queer is the matter with him. Usually he has a splendid appetite. But now whenever I put his food dish down in front of him he just takes a bite or two of the food, and then he runs away with the rest of it. He must bury it somewhere, for we never find it again. He is getting thin from eating so little. What do you suppose can be ailing him?"

Mr. Hugg didn't know. Mr. Hugg didn't care greatly. He was too unhappy over his own puppy's disappearance to feel any keen interest in the appetite of Rex. Thereby he missed a chance of finding out what really was happening all this time.

This is what "really was happening":

On the morning of February 4, Rex and Jack had trotted off to the distant forest together, as usual, to chase rabbits. As they were in hot pursuit of one cotton-tail, Jack raced through a thicket in which a trapper named Quick had hidden a fox trap.

He hurried back to the forest with the food.

The steel jaws snapped around Jack's right forefoot, not breaking the bone, but holding the foot immovably tight. Tug as he would, Jack could not free himself. The trap was in the heart of the thicket, where no passer-by could be attracted by his struggles.

There he was, helplessly imprisoned, as has been many another dog that has blundered into a carelessly-left and carelessly-forgotten steel trap. Until a law is passed forcing trappers to visit their set traps at least once a day, dogs and other harmless animals will be caught in such traps and will starve to death in them.

But Jack did not starve to death. Rex saw to that. The trap was fastened to a "clog"—a wooden pole about eight feet long, which got itself jammed sideways between two bushes when Jack tried to drag it along with him. The time was midwinter. There was no way of finding food in the woods. Rex solved the problem.

THAT day he trotted away from his imprisoned brother and appeared at home when he knew it was feeding time. But he didn't eat the food in his dish. Merely swallowing a single mouthful, he caught up as much of the rest as he could carry between his jaws and hurried back to the forest with it, laying it on the ground in front of Jack.

Day after day Rex did this, sometimes catching a rabbit as well, for his pal, or rifling a neighbor's garbage pail. This went on for nine days. At the end of that time Jack was comfortably fat and Rex was bone thin.

Then, one day, an unusually vigorous struggle on the part of the prisoner snapped the stem of one of the bushes between which the eight-foot clog-pole had become jammed. The pole was freed. By exerting all his strength, Jack was able to pull it along the frozen ground, bit by bit. He headed for home, but his progress was agonizing and slow.

Every yank of the pole caused new pain in his trap-held foot. There were obstacles, too, in which the dragged pole kept catching. Then Rex appeared. He seemed to understand the situation at a glance. For he caught the other end of the pole between his teeth and pulled it along with him. So the homeward trip continued.

Mrs. Rogers chanced to look out of her window, attracted by a sound of barking. Into the yard came Rex, still tugging valiantly at his end of the clog-pole. At the other end limped the exhausted Jack, pulling his own end of the pole along by means of the trap-and-chain. The steel teeth were deep in his foot, and it was by this foot and not by his teeth that he was dragging the weight of the pole.

As I told you, this story has been verified. To me it shows reasoning power on Rex's part, as well as staunch loyalty to the chum he loved.

America's CLASSIC MURDER

OR

The Disappearance of Doctor Parkman

Copied from a contemporary pamphlet.

This time, Professor Webster was ready for Doctor Parkman.

THIS is the second of a series of eight true murder stories written by Edmund Pearson, who has become an authority on homicidal crimes.

By EDMUND PEARSON

DR. PARKMAN was walking—rapidly, as usual—through the streets of Boston, on his way to keep an appointment. He wore a black frock coat and trousers, a purple silk vest, black stock and high hat, and his lean figure would have made him noticeable, even if his peculiar countenance had not attracted attention by itself. Boys pointed him out to other boys:

"There goes Dr. Parkman!"

Women who passed him on the street went home and told their families that they had seen "Chin." The doctor had a protruding lower jaw, and his mouth was filled with some conspicuous false teeth. That chin was not meaningless: he was a determined man, on his way to put an end to a long-drawn-out and vexatious business affair. Plainly, there was going to be trouble for someone.

Dr. Parkman was always in a hurry, and today he was in more of a hurry than ever. He was so impatient a man, says one account, that when riding he would sometimes leave his horse in the street and hurry ahead on foot. This morning he had been at the Merchants' Bank on State street, and at various other places. He bought a lettuce for his invalid daughter, and left it in a bag at Holland's grocery at the corner of Blossom and Vine streets, where he said he would soon return. Then he pushed on to his appointment, at 1:30, at the medical college. He must get this business over, and return promptly to his dinner at 2:30—for this was the year 1849, when gentlemen dined early in the afternoon. He hoped that today Prof. Webster would really do something to settle this infernal debt and cease putting him off with evasions, excuses and subterfuges.

PROF. WEBSTER! The name was enough to make Dr. Parkman snarl. This was a man who held a lectureship in a medical college built on land which he—Dr. Parkman—had provided. The Parkman chair of anatomy—occupied by Oliver Wendell Holmes—was named in Dr. Parkman's honor, as acknowledgment of the gift. And here was Webster, twice a professor, since he was also Erving professor of chemistry and mineralogy at Harvard, and yet he was nothing but a defaulting, dishonorable debtor! Dr. Parkman had told him as much to his face, and to make sure that Prof. Webster should be in no doubt about it, had sent him a message to the same effect within a week.

Dr. Parkman had cause to be indignant. Prof. Webster, who had quickly run through the fortune inherited from his father, liked to live well and entertain his friends. Even in Cambridge, and at that date, it was not easy to do this—and incidentally to support a wife and three daughters—on the $1200 a year which the university paid him, with a slender addition from the sale of tickets for his lectures at the medical college. Seven years earlier Parkman had lent Webster $400, taking a note secured by the mortgage of some personal property.

IN 1847, when the loan was not fully repaid, Dr. Parkman had been one of a group of men to lend the professor a larger sum, taking this time a note for $2432, secured by a mortgage on all Webster's personal property, including his household furniture and his cabinet of minerals. The next year, Prof. Webster, still embarrassed for lack of money, went to Dr. Parkman's brother-in-law, Robert Gould Shaw, told a pathetic tale of Sheriffs and attachments, and prevailed upon that gentleman to buy the cabinet of minerals for $1200—omitting all mention of the fact that this collection was already in pawn to Dr. Parkman. The transaction happened to come out in conversation between the brothers-in-law, and Dr. Parkman was furious.

"Those minerals are not his to sell," he exclaimed. "I have a mortgage on them, and I can show it to you!"

The doctor was prompt and punctilious, and he expected others to be like him. He began to pursue the professor for the debt. I do not know whether the story is true that he used to come to Webster's lectures, sit in the front row, glare at the unhappy man and confuse him by the sight of that prognathous jaw and those shining teeth. Webster, in the months to come, did all he could to represent Parkman as an overbearing and violent persecutor of a struggling scholar, and it may be that this was merely his corroborative detail. He furnished a great amount of corroborative detail, once started, and some of it was like Pooh Bah's description of the execution of Nanki Poo, everything added for the sake of artistic verisimilitude. But Dr. Parkman certainly moved upon another source of Webster's income—the sale of lecture tickets—and after he had been fobbed off once more, threatened legal processes to get at his source of cash. On Monday night of this week he had called at the Massachusetts Medical College. Here is the scene and here is the interview, as they were described by Littlefield, the janitor:

"It was in Dr. Webster's back private room. It was somewhat dark in that room. I was helping Dr. Webster, who had three or four candles burning. The doctor stood at a table, looking at a chemical book, and appeared to be reading—his back toward the door. I stood by the stove, stirring some water, in which a solution was to be made. I never heard a footstep, but the first I saw, Dr. Parkman came into the room. Dr. Webster looked round, and appeared surprised to see him enter so suddenly. The first words he said were:

"'Dr. Webster, are you ready for me tonight?'

Dr. Parkman spoke quick and loud. Dr. Webster made answer:

"'No, I am not ready, tonight, doctor.'

"Dr. Parkman said something else. He either accused Dr. Webster of selling something that had been mortgaged before, or something like that. He took some papers out of his pocket. Dr. Parkman said:

"'It is so, and you know it.'

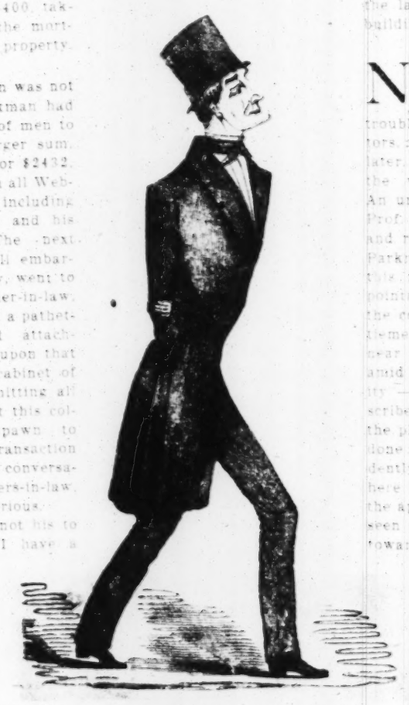
"Doctor Webster told him:

"'I will see you tomorrow, doctor.'

"Dr. Parkman stood near the door, he put his hand up, and said:

"'Doctor, something must be accomplished tomorrow.'

"He then went out and it was the last time I saw him in the building."



From the N.Y. Illustrated Police Gazette, 1850.

"A correct likeness of Doctor Parkman as last seen previous to the murder."

NOTHING, however, was accomplished on the morrow toward settling the trouble between the two doctors, and now it is four days later, Friday, November 3, in the week before Thanksgiving. An unlucky Friday for both men. Prof. Webster had paid a sudden and rather mysterious call at Dr. Parkman's house before 9 o'clock this morning, and made an appointment to see his creditor at the college at 1:30. Could a settlement be made at the college, near an anatomic theater and amid the "pieces of sour mortality"—as Dickens afterward described some of the furniture of the place—which could not be done at Dr. Parkman's home? Evidently both men thought so, for here is Dr. Parkman hastening to the appointment. It's 1:45; he is seen near the building and some toward it. He enters—or so it is supposed—and then nobody sees him again.

Such a man as Dr. Parkman could not casually disappear from the streets of Boston, in broad daylight, without causing excitement. He was too prominent and too highly connected. He does not seem to have practiced as a physician (although he was M. D. of the University of Aberdeen), but, instead, he devoted himself, too energetically, to business and finance. He was willing to accommodate an acquaintance with an advance of money, and he was not above bedevilling the debtor who seemed to be evading payment. His brother was the Rev. Dr. Parkman, but his nephew, then a young man, recently from college, was to become more distinguished than any of them, as Francis Parkman, the historian. He also had the family characteristic of determination, and it was most notably exercised. Dr. Parkman lived in a substantial and rather gloomy-looking house, still standing, at 8 Walnut street. When he did not come home to dinner that Friday afternoon his family were alarmed, and by the next day were in great agitation and distress. Advertisements offering rewards were put in the newspapers, the river was dredged, empty buildings and cellars were searched.

On Sunday afternoon Prof. Webster paid a sudden and surprising visit at the Rev. Dr. Parkman's house and aroused astonishment by his abrupt manner. The professor acknowledged having had an interview with the missing man on Friday afternoon. According to this account, they parted at the end of the interview. To other persons about the college the professor said that he had met the doctor by appointment, had paid him $483, and that the doctor had rushed out with this money in his hand. The inference served to bolster up the popular theory that Dr. Parkman had been waylaid somewhere, robbed and murdered.

Prof. Webster's actions were strange, both before and after the disappearance of Dr. Parkman, and at last he completely astounded the janitor, on Tuesday, by giving him an order for a Thanksgiving turkey. It was the first gift he had made to Littlefield, in an acquaintance of seven years.

FINALLY, Littlefield became tired of hearing on the street that Dr. Parkman would be found in the college, and he resolved to investigate. A vault below Prof. Webster's own apartments. Only superficial examination of the college had been made so far in the searches which were going on all over Boston and Cambridge. But the janitor, with crowbars and chisels and with his wife on guard to warn him of the approach of Webster, put in parts of two or three days trying to break through a brick wall, and inspect the contents of the vault. Thanksgiving was a gloomy day with him, in spite of Prof. Webster's turkey, for he spent the morning cleaning up his own cellar, and the afternoon pounding and prying at the tough courses of brick in the vault. He had some relief at night, however, when he went to a ball given by the Sons of Temperance, where he stayed until 4 o'clock in the morning, and danced 18 out of the 20 dances. Ah, there were janitors in those days!

On Friday, one week after Dr. Parkman's disappearance, Littlefield broke through the wall and looked into the vault.

"I held my light forward," he said, "and the first thing which I saw was the pelvis of a man and two parts of a leg. The water was running down on these remains from the sink. I knew it was no place for these things."

College officers and the City Marshal were notified; three policemen were sent to Cambridge to bring Prof. Webster to Boston and put him under arrest.

The policemen told the professor, when they reached his house, that a further search was to be made at the college, and that his presence was desired. He came willingly enough, and talked pleasantly with them, until he found that the carriage had driven, not to the college, but to the jail. Then he asked:

"What does this mean?"

The officer replied:

"We have done looking for Dr. Parkman, and you are in custody for the murder of Dr. Parkman."

HE BECAME greatly agitated, requested water to drink, and then asked a torrent of questions:

"Have they fouhd Dr. Parkman? Where did they find him? Did they find the whole of the body? How came they to suspect me? Oh! my children, what will they do? Oh! what will they think of me?"

The officer in charge told him that he must not ask questions which it would be improper for him to answer, and then asked Prof. Webster if anybody had access to his private apartments in the college.

"Nobody," he replied, "except the porter who makes the fire."

He paused for a moment and then added:

"That villain! I am a ruined man!"

After a few moments spent in pacing the floor, he sat down, took something from his waistcoat pocket and put it to his mouth. This was followed by a spasm, and he was soon helpless. The officers helped him to rise and assisted him to a cell, where he lay down. He had a series of violent spasms, but was able, about an hour afterward, to go to the college, in charge of the officers, while a further inspection was made. At a later date, Prof. Webster said that before he left the carriage he took a dose of strychnine, which he had already prepared. He supposed that his nervous condition prevented it from acting fatally, as he thought it was a large dose.

The excitement in Boston was intense when it became known that Prof. Webster had been arrested. It was said that two companies of militia were ordered out, but for what purpose I do not know.

The list of the academic distinctions of John White Webster is rather long. His college class was that of 1811. He was Master of Arts and Doctor of Medicine at Harvard; a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; of the London Geological Society, and of other learned bodies. He had written and edited some books on chemistry, and another describing one of the Azores, where his married daughter dwelt. Senator Hoar, who attended his lectures, said that he seemed "a kind-hearted, fussy person," but that his lectures were the most tedious compositions to which he ever listened. Owing to the fact that he had insisted on having fireworks at the inauguration of President Everett, the students called him "Skyrocket Jack."

AT ONE of his chemistry lectures there had been a violent explosion of a copper vessel, part of which flew into the back of the classroom, and except for the fact that a student was absent and there was a vacancy in the row where the metal fragment struck, one of his auditors might have been killed. The professor had commented dryly:

"The president sent for me and told me I must be more careful. He said I should feel very badly indeed if I had killed one of the students. And I should."

When he was brought to trial in March many persons still believed him innocent. Others thought that the case against him would fail, for lack of proof that the remains were those of Dr. Parkman. Some of his friends tried to induce Rufus Choate to undertake the defense, but that great attorney, after hearing the evidence, refused to enter the case unless the professor would admit the killing and permit him to try to convince the jury that it was manslaughter, not murder. This the Websters refused to consider. Those who, like Charles Sumner, still believed in the professor's innocence, probably did not understand the strength of the evidence which was to be brought forward.

THE trial before Chief Justice Shaw is one of the landmarks in the history of criminal law in Massachusetts. Everyone was impressed by the gravity of the occasion, and the proceedings were extremely dignified. The jury could not have been excelled for seriousness of purpose and religious demeanor if they had been chosen from the House of Bishops. To accommodate the great numbers of folk who wished to see something of the trial, the floor of the court was closed to all but privileged spectators, while the general public were admitted to the gallery, where, it is astonishing to learn, a change of audience was effected by the police every 10 minutes! "Except for two tumultuous movements," order and quiet were preserved, and from 55,000 to 60,000 persons had a glimpse of the proceedings. The trial lasted for 11 days.

The testimony of Littlefield was of great importance; he was examined for hours. He described the interview between the two doctors, and then said that on that same day Prof. Webster had inquired of him about the condition of the vault where were placed the remains from the dissecting room. On Thursday, the day before Dr. Parkman disappeared, Prof. Webster sent the witness to the Massachusetts General Hospital on an unsuccessful errand to get a jar of blood. Littlefield saw Dr. Parkman coming toward the college on Friday, but did not see him enter. During the next few days the professor was locked in his apartments at hours which were not customary; unusual fires were burning in the furnace; a stream of water could be heard running in the sink. After the search for Dr. Parkman had begun, Webster told Littlefield that he had paid $483 and some cents to Dr. Parkman, who had hurried out with it.

THE State produced evidence that the prisoner had performed a number of feats of juggling with checks and notes, which the defense could not explain. Prof. Webster told Dr. Parkman's agent that he had "settled" with Dr. Parkman; as, indeed, he had, but not in the manner in which the agent was intended to understand the phrase. Fragments of false teeth were found in the furnace, and, in addition to what had been discovered in the vault, other larger parts of a human body in a tea chest filled with tanbark. And Webster had a quantity of tanbark brought in from Cambridge, during the week, by Swain the expressman—name familiar to generations of Harvard students.

Prisoners, at that period, were not allowed to testify, but Prof. Webster's counsel entered for him a complete denial. They raised doubts whether the pieces of human frame were those of Dr. Parkman, and suggested that, even if this were true, the fragments had been placed there by some person, unknown to Prof. Webster, and perhaps in order to incriminate him. The tendency of the defense was to suggest the possible guilt of Littlefield. They tried to show, by witnesses, that Dr. Parkman had been seen later on that Friday, and in other parts of the city. Two or three witnesses appeared; some of them were mistaken as to the date, and others mistook a man of similar appearance for the doctor.

Despite the strong net of circumstantial evidence closing around Prof. Webster, the whole case for the State hinged on the proof of the identity of the remains, and in the final analysis this rested upon the evidence about the false teeth. When Dr. Nathan Keep, a friend of both men, who had made the teeth for Dr. Parkman, gave his positive evidence, and proved its correctness by fitting the mold, still in his possession, to the fragments found in the furnace, he burst into tears, as he realized that his testimony would hang the prisoner.

A LARGE number of Prof. Webster's neighbors, friends and colleagues appeared in his behalf and testified as to his good character. He was nearly 60 years of age, and since he was generally respected, even if not very well liked, it was difficult for the jury to believe him guilty of the offense. One of his character witnesses was Jared Sparks, president of Harvard. Oliver Wendell Holmes had testified for the State; he had been lecturing on anatomy in the room above Dr. Webster's at the time of the meeting with Dr. Parkman. Prof. Webster was allowed to make a statement to the jury, and was so unwise as to accept the opportunity. He spoke for about 15 minutes, criticizing his own counsel and referring to details of the case brought against him. Chief Justice Shaw's charge to the jury is a celebrated address; parts of it, especially those relating to the nature and value of circumstantial evidence, are quoted in courts today. The case against Prof. Webster was purely one of circumstantial evidence; nobody had seen the two men together at the time of the murder.

On the evening of the eleventh day of the trial the jury went out for three hours and came in about midnight with a verdict of "guilty."

Prof. Webster was sentenced to death, but the usual appeals were made in his behalf. When the application for a writ of error was dismissed the professor addressed the Governor and Council, and in the most solemn language protested his innocence. He used such remarkable phrases as these:

"To Him who seeth in secret, and before Whom I may ere long be called to appear, would I appeal for the truth of what I now declare" . . . and "Repeating in the most solemn and positive manner, and under the fullest sense of my responsibility as a man and as a Christian, that I am wholly innocent of this charge, to the truth of which the Searcher of all hearts is a witness." . . .

SOME weeks later this address was withdrawn and the wretched man made a long confession, maintaining that the murder was not premeditated. Prof. Webster described his call on the doctor on the Friday morning, and their appointment to meet that afternoon, at the college. He then wrote:

"He came, accordingly, between half-past one and two. He came in at the lecture-room door. I was engaged in removing some glasses from my lecture-room table into the room in the rear,' called the upper laboratory. He came rapidly down the steps and followed me into the laboratory. He immediately addressed me with great energy:

"'Are you ready for me, sir? Have you got the money?'

"I replied:

"'No, Dr. Parkman,' and was then beginning to state my condition and make my appeal to him. He would not listen to me, but interrupted me with much vehemence.

"HE CALLED me 'scoundrel' and 'liar,' and went on heaping upon me the most bitter taunts and opprobrious epithets. While he was talking he drew a handful of papers from his pocket, and took from among them my two notes, and also an old letter from Dr. Hosack, written many years ago, and congratulating him (Dr. P.) on his success in getting me appointed professor of chemistry.

"'You see,' he said, 'I got you into office, and now I will get you out of it.'

"He put back into his pockets all the papers, except the letter and the notes. I cannot tell how long the torrent of threats and invectives continued, and I can now recall to memory but a small portion of what he said.

"At first I kept interposing, trying to pacify him, so that I might obtain the object for which I had sought the interview. But I could not stop him, and soon my own temper was up. I forgot everything. I felt nothing but the sting of his words. I was excited to the highest degree of passion; and while he was speaking and gesticulating in the most violent and menacing manner, thrusting the letter and his fist into my face, in my fury I seized whatever thing was handiest—it was a stick of wood—and dealt him an instantaneous blow with all the force that passion could give it. I did not know; nor think, nor care where I should hit him, nor how hard, nor what the effect would be. It was on the side of his head, and there was nothing to break the force of the blow. He fell instantly upon the pavement. There was no second blow. He did not move. I stooped down over him, and he seemed to be lifeless. Blood flowed from his mouth, and I got a sponge and wiped it away. I got some ammonia and applied it to his nose; but without effect.

"Perhaps I spent 10 minutes in attempts to resuscitate him; but I found that he was absolutely dead. In my horror and consternation I ran instinctively to the doors and bolted them—the doors of the lecture room and of the laboratory below. And then, what was I to do?

"IT NEVER occurred to me to go out and declare what had been done and obtain assistance. I saw nothing but the alternative of successful removal and concealment of the body, on the one hand, and of infamy and destruction on the other. The first thing I did, as soon as I could do anything, was to drag the body into the private room adjoining. There I took off the clothes and began putting them into the fire which was burning in the upper laboratory. They were all consumed there that afternoon—with papers, pocketbook or whatever else they may have contained. I did not examine the pockets, nor remove anything except the watch. I saw that, or the chain of it, hanging out; and I took it and threw it over the bridge as I went to Cambridge.

"My next move was to get the body into the sink which stands in the small private room. By setting the body partially erect against the corner, and getting up into the sink myself, I succeeded in drawing it up. There it was entirely dismembered. It was quickly done, as a work of terrible and desperate necessity. The only instrument used was the knife found by the officer in the tea chest, and which I kept for cutting corks. I made no use of the Turkish knife, as it was called at the trial. . . .

"While dismembering the body, a stream of (water) was running through the sink, carrying off the blood in a pipe that passed down through the lower laboratory. There must have been a leak in the pipe, for the ceiling below was stained immediately around it."

Prof. Webster made a long and plausible appeal for commutation of sentence, basing his claim not only on the assertion—quite possibly correct—that the blow had been struck in a momentary fit of anger, but upon his argument that every act of his own showed there had been no premeditation. His call in the morning to make an appointment, so he declared, would have been an insane act if he had planned to kill Dr. Parkman.

THE Governor, however, could not admit that the prisoner's word was entitled to credit, nor did his pastor, or some of his friends, venture to suggest that he could be believed. Prof. Webster was hanged on the last Friday in August, 1850. He was calm and apparently resigned. He had apologized humbly to Littlefield for the attempts to throw suspicion upon him, and he wrote a letter, in a spirit of deep contrition, to the Rev. Dr. Parkman, to make what peace he could with the family he had wronged.

Was it a coldly premeditated murder, or can it be considered manslaughter, done in a sudden passion and under provocation? The question about the vault, the attempt to get the blood and, perhaps, the appointment with Parkman at the college point to a plan. On the other hand, he gave more or less plausible explanations of all these things, and the absurdity of any hope to make away with such a man as Dr. Parkman, and conceal the crime, is so great as to cast doubts upon the theory of premeditation. The question seems to me impossible to answer.

The murder shows these things clearly: That a hitherto highly respectable person may commit a crime of this nature; that he may solemnly lie in the name of God, to escape punishment; and that a just conviction may be had upon circumstantial evidence. Even after the trial there were many who were unconvinced of the professor's guilt, and A. Oakley Hall, afterward Mayor of New York, was one of those who wrote pamphlets to protest against the conviction. Mr. Hall was very severe upon what he denounced as the result of "Puritan bigotry" and "Bostonian snobbiness."

THE Webster-Parkman case has hardly been displaced as America's most celebrated murder, and the one which lives longest in books of reminiscences. It will be recalled that Artemus Ward's show had "wax figgers" of "Dr. Webster in the act of killin' Dr. Parkman." Few writers of the time failed to mention the murder. Of the anecdotes which are told about it, the story related by Longfellow is perhaps the most remarkable. This was told at a dinner given to Charles Dickens, during his visit in 1869. Dickens, during the day, had visited the scene of the murder, with Dr. Holmes. A year or two before the murder, Longfellow had been one of the guests at a men's dinner at Prof. Webster's, to meet a foreign visitor, interested in science. Toward the end of the evening the professor had the lights in the room lowered and a servant bring in a bowl of burning chemicals, which shed a ghastly glow upon the faces of the men about the table. Prof. Webster rose and, producing a rope, cast it around his own neck like a noose. He then leaned over the hell fires which came from the bowl, lolled his head upon one side and protruded his tongue in the manner of a man who had been hanged!

After the execution, it is said that the Webster family removed to Fayal, where a married daughter lived. Some years later, at a dinner party, there was a glib guest who had not caught the names of some of the Websters who were present, but merely knew that they had come from Boston. In order to make himself agreeable, he suddenly remarked:

"Oh, by the way, what ever became of that Prof. Webster who killed Dr. Parkman? Did they hang him?"

Another similarly gentle yarn is of a later date. Benjamin Butler was cross-examining a witness in court and treating him, so the Judge thought, with unnecessary brusqueness. He reminded the lawyer that the witness was a Harvard professor.

"Yes, I know, Your Honor. We hanged one of them the other day!"

But Ben Butler always had a sinful dislike of Harvard. They had refused to give him an LL.D.

MR. PEARSON'S tale next week will be, "Hell Benders; or, The Story of a Wayside Tavern."

A ONE-MAN TELEPHONE LINE

here a mile or more in my sleep. If it had been on a regular road I would probably have been killed. With my horses I can go to sleep any time and they go home just the same."

Clark strings his telephone wires to fence posts, trees and regular telephone poles. He carries a ladder on his wagon. A year ago his horses started up while he was mounted on the ladder, which rested in the box of the wagon. He was slightly injured as a result and since that time he has taken Mrs. Clark along to hold the horses while he climbs telephone poles.

Santa Claus says he believes his is the only telephone exchange in the United States which gives free service. He has given four schools and two U. S. postoffices free telephone service since shortly after he built his exchange. His business methods are more benevolent than efficient. If a new subscriber has bad luck the first year he is on the subscription list, Clark cuts his bill to $7.50.

He is particularly proud of the fact that his telephone exchange is a link with the outside world. It is connected not only with the Page exchange, but with those of Dorsey, Walnut and Alders.

"Once we talked to Chicago from this here house," he tells you. "Another time a neighbor talked to Buffalo, New York, and we listened in and heard every word just as plain as if it was two men talking on our own line."

Despite the fact that he has a well-digging outfit and farms 40 acres, Clark finds it pretty hard to make a living. The house the Clarks live in is really just a one-room shack, one wall of which is dominated by the switchboard apparatus. But he says that as long as there is a Clark to run it this prairie country will have a telephone system.

THERE is now a way to bleach the skin, that acts in many cases almost overnight.

It brings ivory allurement to the skin. Brings it quickly, often almost unbelievably. A way that not only bleaches the skin, free of freckles, sallowness, imperfections, but that acts definitely as a skin tonic as well.

What It Is

It is called Golden Peacock Bleach Creme . . . the discovery of a world-famed laboratory devoted exclusively to skin whitening research. Some 30 eminent doctors, scientists and skin specialists worked in its development. 10 years were spent perfecting it. Over 1,000 formulae were tried and discarded before the right one was found.

Thus it marks a new era in modern beauty culture. And supplants entirely old-time methods. Its bleaching agent is one of the most potent healing agents known. One that virtually every doctor uses.

It makes a dark skin a needless folly for any woman to suffer—even for another day. Some 500,000 women now employ it. To obtain it go to any drug or department store.
